SHEPHERD, BACK IN CELL, AWAITS ACTION AS TO BAIL

Faiman, Accuser of McClintock Heir, Faces Defense Counsel in Court Without Flinching.

REPEATS CHARGE OF $100,000 OFFER

Answers Steady Fire of Questions and Denies With Heat That Dancing Was Taught in His School

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—William Darling Shepherd, member of the Chicago bar, went back to his cell today in "murderers' row," in the county jail, after the first skirmish in the effort to win his release on bail. The hearing on motion for bail will be resumed Monday. Shepherd is accused of slaying, by typhoid inoculation, his young foster-son, William Nelson McClinctock, whom he had reared since he was 4 years old, in order to obtain control of his $1,800,000 estate.

Charles C. Faiman, head of the National University of Sciences, was the first witness called by the defense in an effort to show that the evidence given the grand jury is insufficient to warrant detention of Shepherd without bail.

Faiman, whom the defense accuses of operating a "diploma mill," at which fortune-telling and surgery were included in the same broad curriculum, was poised and quiet, under questioning. All his answers were given readily, though in a low tone, sometimes apologetic. He retained his poise when defense counsel offered to discredit his character, and even when he gave the lie to defense counsel's charges it was without heat or excitement. At one or two points, however, his eye sought the floor.

Refuses $100,000 Offer.

Faiman said Shepherd had agreed to give him $100,000 when he completed "a big deal," which the witness said Shepherd told him he was working on. He said this "big deal" was admitted by Shepherd to relate to the McClintock estate.

Faiman, president of the National University of Sciences, repeated much of his confession to State's Attorney Crowe, which caused his indictment. He admitted that he knew of no witnesses who had heard conversations he alleged he and Shepherd had had about typhoid germs and about the McClintock will.

He said Shepherd had in one conversation referred to young McClintock and Miss Isabel Pope, his fiancee, intending to marry soon. That was in the fall of 1923, according to Faiman, who said Shepherd, referring to McClintock's approaching majority—he was 21 years of age a year ago—and that he said to Shepherd that such a marriage would "leave him out," but that Shepherd said he would have McClintock draw a will. The witness then said that "the girl must be taken care of or it would cause talk." And that Shepherd said "some of those typhoid cultures" could be used.

Three Tubes of Germs.

"Faiman had previously stated that he had given Shepherd three tubes of bacilli. These tubes he had obtained in the Chicago Health Department. He said he did not remember the individual in the Health Department that gave him the bacilli.

Faiman's interrogation was the ening of Shepherd's first legal ttle, a fight to get himself out of il by admittance to bail.

Attorney Stewart started out on e of questioning which caused Court to uphold State's Attory Crowe's objections that the inrogation of Faiman was inded to impeach his credibility. ge Hopkins ruled that impeachnt examination was part of a y trial and not of a bail hearing. ewart said Faiman at his ool is teaching midwifery, danc-, plumbing and fortune telling. "That's a lie," Faiman asserted. denied specifically that dancor spiritualism was taught in school.

ked whether he was a doctor, tified that he was a student St. Louis College of Physiand Surgeons for three and half years.

en asked if he was a licensed titioner he answered:

hat do you mean by license? sed the U. S. Public Health examination in 1921."

POST-DISPATCH FUND PASSES $10,000 MARK

SUBSCRIPTIONS for the relief of tornado sufferers received by the Post-Dispatch yesterday totaled $3334.63. This, with the $5000 Post-Dispatch contribution announced Thursday, brings the grand total of this fund to $10,267.19.

Funds received by the Post-Dispatch are being turned over to the Citizens' Committee for Disaster Relief, which is working in conjunction with the American Red Cross.

NEW YORK BAND PLAYS IN HARD LUCK AT ODEON

Organization Which Offered to Give Receipts to Storm Sufferers Finds $1550 Wreckage of Own.

PROMOTION ARTS YIELD ONLY $50

Busse and Delegation at Station, but Only 70 Pay to Hear Policemen—Afternoon Concert Cancelled.

Not even an eleventh hour inspiration—the offer of the New York Police Department Band to aid the tornado fund, could save the organization yesterday from a financial pinch. Sixty musicians of Gotham's "finest" were advertised to give matinee and evening performances at the Odeon for the benefit of the tornado sufferers.

When the wreckage was explored it was found that the band had lost $1550, and that the victims of the storm would receive nothing but $165 in individual subscriptions which members of the band gave to the Mayor of Murphysboro yesterday morning when their special train passed through the stricken town.

The afternoon performance was abandoned because, at the opening hour of 2:30, there was only $1 in the box office. It was decided willynilly to play in the evening, and invitations were sent to various institutions, including the city sanitarium for the orphaned, blind and aged to attend gratis.

Total Admissions $50.

The entire audience numbered not more than 250. Of these about 70 paid admissions, which totaled exactly $50. It was estimated that the cost of the concert, including transportation here, was about $1600. The band itself assumed the loss, and paid it out of profits earned in other cities.

The band recently earned $27,000 at two concerts in New York, and obtained a furlough of 30 days, during which to carry the evangel of New York police art to the benighted hinterland. It was calculated that, if the provinces failed to take advantage of the message, the surplus would still pay all expenses. But many cities, including Chicago, rallied to the visitors with affluent receipts.

Promotion Arts Fail.

The usual promotion arts were practiced in anticipation of their St. Louis visit. Speeches were made before the Chamber of Commerce, the Kiwanis, and the Rotary and Optimists' Clubs. The Knights of Columbus were reminded that many of the bandsmen were members of their organization. Policemen were asked to drum up buyers of tickets on their beats. Thousands of circulars and posters were distributed.

Charitable impulses occurred to the local managers after it was discovered, at noon Thursday, that the advance sale for the two concerts totaled $5. It was then announced that the proceeds of the performance would be presented to the Red Cross for the benefit of the cyclone sufferers.

Welcomed at City Hall.

When the band arrived at noon yesterday, it was met at Union Station by busses, decorated with posters and girls in Red Cross uniform. With an escort of motorcycle policemen, the strangers drove to city hall, where they happened to encounter the new Board of Police Commissioners, which had been sworn in during the morning. The first official act of the president, Allen C. Orrick, was to welcome the New Yorkers with an address.

The parade motored to the Odeon, where a scene of desolation met the eye. The doors of the hall remained closed. Some 25 persons, half of whom had free tickets, loitered about the lobby. A ticket seller in the box office beguiled the tedium with a crossword puzzle. Not a single St. Louis policeman was visible. At 2:50 o'clock, when the total receipts still hovered around $11, the concert was called off. Most of this sum was refunded, though a few exchanged their tickets for the evening performance.

The band, under the direction of Capt. Paul Henneberg, played with as much spirit last night as if the areas of empty seats had been filled, and as if every note played was not costing it money. Critically considered, it is not one of the great brass bands, but its music would have given pleasure to anyone who enjoys band music. It was well disciplined, used considerable shading, and, despite occasional faults of pitch and wrong notes, had a good enough tone quality and a vigorous feeling for rhythm.

DURALUMIN HULLED FLYING BOAT GOES 128 MILES AN HOUR

Giant Naval Craft in Test on Delaware Attains Greater Than Designed Speed.

By the Associated Press.

PHILADELPHIA, March 21.—Hurling her nine tons of duralumin hull into the air 15 seconds after starting along the surface of the Delaware River, the giant naval flying boat, PN-9, today flew at 128 miles an hour, 13 miles faster than her designed speed, for 50 minutes before a group of naval experts. On returning the PN-9 landed at a speed of 52 miles an hour, her pilot reported. Two 470-horsepower motors drove the plane with its 72-foot wing spread, through the air. The craft is 50 feet long and carries a crew of five.

Commander Ralph D. Weyerbacher, who directed construction of the PN-9, said that the use of duralumin for the hull overcomes the factor of soakage of water in wooden-hulled aircraft which in a year often increases the weight of a plane by several hundred pounds.

After a month's testing the PN-9 will be dismantled and shipped to San Francisco for a non-stop flight to Honolulu from the Pacific Coast.

MURPHYSBORO REFUGEES GIVEN SHELTER, RELIEF WORK IS SYSTEMATIZED

Only Big Problem Now Is to Supply Victims With Water—Two More Deaths Bring Tornado Toll to 191.

By SAMUEL A. O'NEAL,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., March 21.—Most of Murphysboro's refugees were under wood or canvas tonight after squads of militiamen and civilian workers had toiled until after dark setting up tents sent here from all quarters.

With the systematizing of rescue work every phase of the lot of the refugees had been improved greatly since Wednesday's tornado. The big problem now before the rehabilitation committee and one that is causing severe vexation is that of a water supply.

The filtration plant, damaged by the storm, is not functioning and with only a makeshift plant to pump the water through the mains the people are being furnished with a scant supply of water which must be boiled before it is fit for drinking purposes.

Besides the threat to health contained in the unfiltered water, there is the additional danger of fire. If a comflagration should break out in the part of the city which was unharmed by the storm the firefighters would have to depend once again on dynamite to check the flames.

While the committee in charge is fairly well provided at this time with necessities for the refugees there is still an urgent need for certain commodities, particularly foodstuffs. Included in the "want" list made out by the committee are baked ham, sugar, pork and beans, bacon, lard, canned vegetables and canned soups. More than 1000 families were provided with rations at the committee's headquarters in the Elks' Club today.

To Rebuild Shoe Plant.

The first definite announcement of permanent rehabilitation work was made today by the Brown Shoe Co., which suffered heavy loss when its Murphysboro plant was partially wrecked by the storm. The company announced that a squad of workmen would begin Tuesday to reconstruct the building. The completion of the work will afford employment to 400 men and women and will be a step toward bringing industrial conditions back to normal.

The death list in Murphysboro rose to 191 tonight when Mrs. S. E. Shaw, 74, died at St. Andrew's Hospital. Her death marked the first fatal case of gangrene against the spread of which physicians are taking every possible precaution. Mrs. Shaw's leg was broken at the ankle Wednesday and gangrene set in. Today the leg was amputated at the hip but the spread of the disease could not be checked.

A telegram was received yesterday from Percy Owens, chief prohibition enforcement agent in Illinois, advising relief leaders that a supply of confiscated liquor would be placed at their disposal if they can find a use for it. It was stated the offer would probably be accepted.

100 Victims Buried.

More than 100 of the victims of the disaster were buried yesterday afternoon after brief services at the churches. Priests and ministers remained on duty all day to offer a short prayer over each body as it was taken into church before the journey to the cemetery was begun.

During the afternoon when one funeral followed another in seemingly endless procession the clergymen moved to the two cemeteries, Tower Grove and St. Andrew's, on the hill overlooking the desolate Murphysboro. At many times during the afternoon the voices of six clergymen could be heard simultaneously as they spoke the last prayers over as many bodies.

The corps of 40 grave diggers was augmented yesterday by 40 more from other towns and when night fell most of the tornado dead had been laid away. Taxicab drivers and undertaking establishment employes were pressed into service as pallbearers at the funerals, which continued from dawn to dusk.

The friends who ordinarily perform these services were in most cases either dead, lying injured in

CALL FOR SERUM AND DOCTORS IS QUICKLY MET

With Half of the Dead Buried and the Injured Under Care Towns Turn to Rehabilitation.

SIGHTSEERS ARE NOT WANTED

Authorities at One Illinois Point Say Such Persons Will Be Put to Work; 800 Dead, 3000 Injured.

By the Associated Press.

Saddened but undaunted by the havoc of Wednesday's tornado, survivors of the catastrophe in the storm belt of Illinois and Indiana are preparing to turn to reclamation and rehabilitation. With half of the 800 dead consigned to hasty graves and half of the nearly 3000 injured still in the care of doctors and nurses, plans are under way for rebuilding the devastated areas as soon as possible.

Three days of heroic endeavor by thousands of workers spurred to their task by the desperateness of the conditions brought about by the tornado in its 300-mile sweep from the Missouri Ozarks through the Ohio valley, have wrought wonders.

Every homeless person has been housed in some manner. Tented cities have sprung up to shelter the homeless. The injured have been conveyed to the nearest towns with hospital facilities.

Food has been supplied for the helpless, medicines and other comforts have been made available for the wounded and solace has been afforded the bereaved.

Final Total Close to 800.

The death total last night was 808, with almost as many dead identified. While few more bodies are likely to be found among the ruins, a number may die of wounds.

The storm will go down in history as the severest in the history sets a record owing to the use of airplanes and radio in carrying supplies and sending out calls for help. Something like a million dollars was raised in three days to aid the stricken, and subscriptions for relief are pouring in hourly to increase the total.

Sixteen Illinois towns were hit by the tornado and in those municipalities and the rural surroundings 642 lives were taken, while 2110 were hurt, many severely. Murphysboro was the worst sufferer, with half its area devastated, 189 persons killed and 700 injured. Wes Frankfort came next, with 123 slain and 500 maimed.

Town Will Rebuild.

De Soto with 71 dead, Gorham with 64 killed and Parrish with a loss of 43 lives were almost annihilated. Griffin was the heaviest loser in Indiana and in fact in the whole storm, for only a building or two were left standing, and of its meager population, 68 were crushed to death and 200 were injured. Yet even this town will rebuild, the few survivors said today. And Griffin is again in the throes of death, for it reported four deaths to add to its previous total of 54.

On the ruins of Murphysboro's storm-swept area, extending over more than 100 city blocks, a tent city, sufficient to accommodate comfortably 2200 persons, arose yesterday. Cots and bed clothing were installed in each. Erection of the tents, sent from the Government Quartermaster's Department at Chicago, was under the supervision of national guardsmen.

Dr. Herman N. Bundesen, Chicago Commissioner of Health, has gone to West Frankfort for a hurried inspection of sanitary needs in that city. He took with him apparatus for testing drinking water and made the assertion that by 8 o'clock today West Frankfort would have pure water.

Warning of a large number of surgical cases and symptoms of gangrene and tetanus caused the

GIVING SPONTANEOUS ALL OVER AMERICA

Two Box Car Loads of Food, Clothing and Bedding Sent Over the M. & O. to Murphysboro.

St. Louis and the East Side cities continued yesterday their work of mercy—the great task of relieving suffering in the storm-swept towns and cities of Southern Illinois.

Nor was that task ended last night, when a train leaving over the Mobile & Ohio Railroad for Murphysboro, carried out of the East St. Louis yards two cars of miscelloneous supplies gathered up here and in East St. Louis.

Donations had been received at the M. & O. offices in the Fullerton Building here and the Columbia Terminals Co. furnished three large trucks to carry them across the river where other food, clothing and bedding had been gathered.

Donations Quite Generous.

As in St. Louis and East St. Louis donations elsewhere have been generous, and the designated receiving station have been flooded with useful gifts for tornado victims.

Every mode of transportation, from box car to airplane, has been used to get supplies to the relief bases in the quickest time.

The airplane was pressed into service to carry 225,000 units of antitetanus vaccine from the Parke-Davis Co. offices here to Mount Vernon, Ill., whence it was distributed through the stricken district. Fear of lackjaw in epidemic proportions had caused relief workers to issue a hurry-up call for the serum. The plane which carried it had been sent from Mount Vernon to Lambert-St. Louis Field, where it took off at 5 p. m. Friday with its life-saving load, arriving at Mount Vernon at sundown. The shipment exhausted the supply of that serum in St. Louis, and more is being hurried here from the East for distribution.

Collections at Belleville.

At Belleville Supt. Hough of the city schools sent all his pupils home during the first study hour Friday morning, asking them to gather all the clothing that could be spared by their parents. Before the day was ended 15 truckloads had been assembled at the schoolhouses and Col. Paegelow at Scott Field had provided a train of army trucks to send it on to Carbondale for distribution.

Five carloads of fruits and vegetables for the destitute families in the tornado-swept section were contributed by individual members of the St. Louis Fruit and Produce Association.

From all over America there has been a spontaneous giving in response to the Red Cross appeal for funds, according to James L. Fieser, vice chairman in charge of domestic operations of the American Red Cross, who has been in St. Louis since Wednesday, keeping in hourly touch with the needs of the situation through those in charge of direct relief distribution. Red Cross chapters and other charitable and relief agencies all over the country are giving the utmost of co-operation, he said last night before he left for Washington for a conference with John Barton Payne, chairman of the organization. Plans are under way for the permanent rehabilitation of individuals and families through the district, he said.

Sufficient Supplies on Hand.

In a statement last night he asked that no more supplies be consigned to the Red Cross until called for, as it has on hand sufficient to meet present needs.

In East St. Louis, after hearing Maj. Frank R. L. Reardon, Dr. John T. Murphy and City Commissioner John T. Murphy, who told of the scenes of suffering they had witnessed at Murphysboro, West Frankfort and Carbondale, the East St. Louis Relief Committee announced through Chairman A. C. Johnson the following appointments for organized relief work:

Collection of funds, E. J. Coffey; railroads, H. B. Carson, National Stock Yards; Ross Bowles, industries; Herbert Giessing, downtown section; trade unions, Hunter B. Keith; general contributions, A. L. Bowling; A. T. Spivey, editor of the East St. Louis Daily Journal, publicity; Mrs. Louis Boismenue, president of the Queen's Daughters, collections of clothing; Francis A. Tissier, secretary of the East St. Louis Retail Merchants' Association, groceries; Charles Rogers, transportation; N. C. McLean, president of the Chamber of Commerce, care of injured and their relatives.

Queen's Daughters Aid in Work.

In that city the Queen's Daughters made a house-to-house canvass for assistance and on Friday night sent a carload of clothing to Carbondale as the result.

WEST FRANKFORT BURIES ITS DEAD AS NEW TALES OF TRAGEDY ARE TOLD

Laborers Who Escaped by Jumping From Auto, Finds Six Members of Family Dead on Reaching Home.

By ARTHUR H. SCHNEFF,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., March 21.—Completing preparations for the many funerals of its tornado victims, and holding some of these unusually poignant ceremonies today, West Frankfort is entering into the phase of recovery involving steady work and the soothing of time. Meanwhile the tales of sorrow, bereavement, agony and destruction continue to fill the minds and hearts of the people.

Typical is the story of Charles Biggs, a laborer, for whom the depths of affliction awaited when the big wind subsided. He found his family wiped out when he struggled back to his farm home just west of town.

"I saw the tornado coming," he said, "and jumped from my auto into a ditch. The machine turned over a couple of times and I never saw it again. I walked the rest of the way home, a mile and a half. The place was a complete wreck. I found my daughter-in-law, Mrs. Fred Biggs, sitting up, dazed, and she died while I tried to talk to her. Her two daughters were 25 feet away, dead. My mother and wife were there, too, dead. Near by was my 21-year-old son, Fred, dead. Near him was my daughter, Margaret, who was just 16 two days before; she was dead. My other daughter, at the Joiner School, was the only one saved. I was only scratched."

Typical Tale of Tragedy.

A reporter asked Elisha G. Clark, 63, who is in the Masonic Hall, with a leg fractured in two places, "Where's your home?"

"Buddy," Clark answered, "I ain't got none now. When I had one it was at 509 West Eighth streeet, out toward New Orient mine. I was there in the kitchen with my wife and son-in-law, Walter Smith, and Smith's three children. I noticed the wind coming, and then the front window came in. I was knocked behind the counter of the grocery I operated in the front part of the house, and I hung on there. It seemed like ages, but I guess it was only 10 seconds. Next thing, I found myself on top of a pile of uprooted apple trees that blew into the yard. My son's wife, Lelia, was killed. Most of the others were hurt."

Lew Peddeford, yardmaster for the C. & E. I., and Ed Dove, telegraph operator, were in the yard office till it flew away. They were felled, then they crawled to a manhole and hid. When they ventured to thrust their heads out all they could see was an expanse of desolation and the conflagration of the railroad's coal chute, which caught fire from a shanty stove.

The circulation manager of the West Frankfort Daily American asked one of his newsboys who were getting Wednesday night's "extras" why he didn't hustle out. The boy, Dickie Stephens, replied, "How can I? My route's all blown away."

Lying side by side in the improvised hospital at Masonic Hall are Mrs. Elmer Lewis, 27 years old, who is in a delicate condition, and her son, Billie, 5. Billie is not expected to live long, but if he does it is likely he will be blind permanently. His head, eyes and internal organs are wounded. Mother, son and father, the latter a carpenter, were in their home when it was smashed to kindling, and the father was killed. All day Friday Mrs. Lewis pleaded with physicians to let her have a last look at her mate's body. Yesterday, finally, she was allowed to go across the street to the morgue, supported by several attendants, while spectators gaped behind ropes.

Kuocked Into Water.

Abram Quick, a mining engineer, started away from New Orient mine engine room when the storm gan. He walked alongside an elevated railroad spur and saw a flat car loaded with ties whirling through the air. He tried to duck into a concrete subway under the spur, but couldn't

"The wind was going through there like a big cannon," he explained at the hospital. "It knocked me into a puddle and I waited there. My legs were badly bruised. I could see debris piling up all around the puddle."

Foreman McCabe of New Orient mine showed he was made of stern stuff.

"Both my wrists were broken," he related, "so I went to the hospital and saw all the people lying there, waiting for attention for all sorts of wounds. 'My God, when I see these,' I said, 'I don't think I'm hurt. I'm going away.'" And he went.

"That wind sounded like a big buzz saw in a planing mill," said Mike Hughes, who resided north of town. "It ripped the top off our house and the floor went right out from under my wife and me. The brick chimney fell on me and the heating stove came, too.

"A big plank hit my wife. She began to pray." Hughes is being treated at Masonic Hall for head wounds and Mrs. Hughes is there with her wrists broken.

Jerked Lose From Piano.

Mrs. Eloise Wall, 17, and her sister-in-law were preparing early supper for their husbands when they saw a barn flying past the window. Then the top was jerked off their home. They seized hold of the piano as the most solid anchor, but the women and the musical instrument sailed away in three separate directions. Mrs. Wall suffered bruises and scalp wounds.

The wife, son, daughter, son-in-law and grandson of Frank Galloway of Parrish all were killed. Galloway is in the Benton hospital with a fractured leg and other injuries. His family was buried at Thompsonville Friday.

Margaret Parks, 4 years old, of Parrish, told how scared she was when her family's home blew away, and said: "When I woke up, mother was holding me tight in her arms and we were 'way out in a field." Her father could remember nothing of his sail through the air until he came to, tightly grasping a fence post a quarter of a mile from the homesite, and saw his little son coming directly toward him from above. "I reached up," he said, "and was barely able to pull him down by the leg and hold him till the storm ended."

The death toll in West Frankfort has mounted to 123, the last name having been added today, that of Douglas Akin. An additional death of a Parrish victim, that of Joie Roberts, brought the Franklin County list to 166. All but three of the dead have been identified.

Precautions should be exercised to make sure water in open wells which were in the course of the tornado is safe, State health officials have warned. In general, sanitary conditions in the affected areas are satisfactory, and no general spread of fdisease is feared. Seven infectious cases have been isolated in a school room here. None of the schools will be reopened for a week.

SUMMARY OF THE GENERAL SITUATION IN TORNADO AREAS

Illinois Director of Health to appeal for doctors and anti-toxin. There was a quick response by surgeons. At thet same time from Washington came word that serum was on its way.

These smitten districts do not desire the sightseer, curio or memento hunter which are anticipated over Sunday. Military forces are thrown about the Indiana sector to keep them out. Sightseers will only hinder relief. At Benton and other Southern Illinois towns the same word went out. Authorities there added that should any succeed in entering they would be put to grave digging and reclamation.

Through the devastated areas the homeless are still estimated at beyond 10,000.

Determination of the general property and material loss probably cannot be made for days and possibly weeks. Figures variously reported estimate a total between $5,000,000 and $8,000,000. Insurance actuaries now in all fields assert it will take many months to untangle claims and arrive at proper valuations.

ST. LOUIS URGED TO GIVE $500,000 FOR RELIEF WORK

Red Cross Committee, Which Had Set Goal of $100,000, Finds That Amount Is Inadequate.

"St. Louis should give at least $500,000, and give it quickly."

This was the decision reached yesterday by the Citizens' Committee for Disaster Relief, which on Thursday had set a goal of only $100,000 for the tornado sufferers.

A statement issued by the committee, signed by Chairman John Lawrence Mauran and Treasurer Festus J. Wade, follows:

> Each hour reports from the stricken district reveal additional deaths, suffering and destruction of property.
> It is now clearly evident to the Citizens' Committee, working with the American Red Cross, that the amount estimated for emergency relief is but a drop in the bucket compared to the pressing needs as now indicated.
> St. Louis should give at least $500,000, and give it quickly.
> Those who have given already are urged to at once increase their gifts and all citizens of St. Louis must respond to the extent of their ability.
> The need of additional money is imperative.

Contributions of $86,478.

At the Mercantile Trust Co., the headquarters of the Citizens' Committee, it was announced at 8 p. m. last night that the total contributions reported up to that hour were $86,478.

Collections will be taken generally in the churches of the city today. The Church Federation had suggested such a step to the pastors of Protestant churches. Archbishop Glennon, in a letter to the Citizens' Committee, wrote:

"I will approve of the Red Cross Society, making an appeal to the various pastors and parishes to send their contributions to the society for those who are suffering, owing to the late devastating cyclone, and I shall have no objection, but, on the contrary, commend if they take up a special collection during their Sunday services for that purpose."

Appeal to Knights of Columbus.

John I. Griffin, representing the Knights of Columbus on the Citizens' Committee for Disaster Relief, yesterday issued this appeal:

"All members of Knights of Columbus Councils throughout the State of Missouri are urged to respond to the appeal for additional funds. More money is needed and quickly. This call of distress should be answered by every member of the Knights of Columbus within Missouri. 'Do not delay. Send checks direct to Festus J. Wade, chairman, 721 Locust st., St. Louis, Mo."

Results of the appeals of school children for funds are becoming apparent. On Friday afternoon, at the request of Supt. Maddox, all public schools conveyed to the pupils the necessity for relief funds and urged pupils to ask their parents to make contributions.

Activities for Relief of Storm Sufferers in East St. Louis.

The East St. Louis relief organization, co-operating with the Red Cross, is directing its efforts to the collection of funds, clothing and foodstuffs. Six carloads of fodstuffs and supplies and a carload of clothing have been shipped to the storm area. Foodstuffs and supplies were given by the merchants and the clothes were collected by the Daughters of Isabelle. Boy Scouts, under the direction of A. H. Curtis, commander, collected another carload of clothing yesterday.

Expecting refugees and additional injured to be sent to East St. Louis, the Community House and two Y. M. C. A. buildings have been equipped with 25 beds each, John W. Freels, chairman of the Red Cross, announced yesterday. A special request from Murphysboro yesterday morning for infants' underwear, lanterns and bed sheets was filled yesterday, L. H. Forman, secretary of the Chamber of Commerce, said.

The relief fund has reached $1100 at East St. Louis. A. C. Johnson, chairman of the relief organization, has announced the following appointments for collections: Collection of funds, E. J. Coffey, railroads; H. B. Carson, National Stockyards; Ross Bowls, industries; Herbert Giessing, downtown section; Hunter B. Keith, trade unions; A. L. Bowling, general contributions; A. T. Spivey, publicity; Mrs. Louis Boismenue, clothing; Francis A. Tissier, foodstuffs; Charles Roger, transportation, and N. C. McLean, care of injured and refugees.

A report of a survey committee sent into the storm district by the East St. Louis relief organization showed that sufficient supplies were being received at present. John Connors, Health Commissioner of East St. Louis, a member of the committee, pointed out the need of undertakers, and of taking health measures for prevention of disease.

Bishop Henry Althoff of the Belleville diocese announced yesterday that all church collections in the Belleville diocese made today would be used for the relief of the storm victims.

Wind's Caprices Told By Woman Survivor

Evangelist Sought Refuge Under Piano When Rocks Fell Through Skylight, Says Mrs. May Williams of St. Louis.

Injured and bleeding, stunned by the horror of it all, storm victims rushed through the streets of Murphysboro immediately after Wednesday's tornado, praying, crying bitterly, calling wildly on the names of family and friends as they searched through the twisted desolation of the wrecked town. They did not even know they had themselves been hurt.

That is the story told by Mrs. May Williams, a worker at the "Whosoever Will" Mission on Hampton avenue in Cheltenham, a St. Louis suburb, and the daughter of Mrs. H. Vach of 1319 Annie avenue, St. Louis. She went through the storm and escaped uninjured. A letter reassuring her mother of her safety is filled with graphic description of the scene.

Mrs. Williams had been assisting the Rev. and Mrs. Everett Parrott in revival meetings in progress at Moose Hall, in Murphysboro, and was in that structure when the tornado's strength smashed it in. Let her tell the story:

"We left the Logan Hotel at about 2:25 p. m., and a goodly crowd was awaiting us in the Moose Hall. Mrs. Parrott opened the service singing 'More about Jesus.'

Darkness Suddenly Falls.

"She had sung the first verse and chorus which we were repeating when it grew dark as suddenly as a thunderbolt flashes from the sky and there fell upon us what we thought was hail.

"But only for a moment. Then rocks began to break through the skylight above and in a moment's time we were being showered with glass, stones, sticks, old buckets, pans, trash, bricks and anything.

"At first the people were frenzied. The Methodist minister crawled under the piano for protection, and Brother Parrott under the back of the piano. Sister Parrott and I stuck together, closely, and somehow got out of the jam in which the people were milling around.

"We called on God to protect us all. Mother, I wasn't afraid to die, indeed we all looked for death.

"It seemed an eternity. . . . It only lasted five minutes.

"As I stood, helpless, looking up to heaven, I saw the concrete wall at the back of the hall collapse and come crumbling in. Then the roof started to give way and I closed my eyes. . . .

"Suddenly from the bottom of one of the stoves which heated the hall came a great puff and the flames burst out like tongues of fire. There was a sound of an explosion, and the other stove was broken. The whole place rocked.

Great Popping Noises.

"From the outside as well as from within we could hear terrible cries, yells, screams and there were great, popping noises.

"The wind roared—I cannot describe it—and it tore great handfuls out of the roof above us. You could see shapes hurling over us in the air. The only place in our building which wasn't damaged was the spot where Mrs. Parrott and I stood.

"Then the storm passed. There still were cries, but it seemed almost silent. We went out into the street. People ran to us looking for help. There were the wildest rumors. They told us our hotel had been destroyed; that the whole city was in ruins.

"In the streets people were praying out loud. There was no shame about it. No one cared who saw them pray.

"Young boys and girls ran up to us crying . . . they couldn't find father, or mother, or sister, perhaps. The air was filled with the cries of those pinned under wreckage. Brother Parrott helped pull some of the dead and injured out.

"People walked the streets bleeding from their wounds, crying wildly the names of missing loved ones as they looked for their families. They did not realize how badly they were hurt.

Black From Head to Foot.

"We walked the city for an hour or more, terror-struck by what we saw. Everything was in confusion. People went about almost without clothes, with no shoes on, wrapped in rugs or blankets. It was indescribable—the confusion. We picked our way among tangles of wires, trees, poles, brick and lumber to our rooms. The third story of our hotel had been blown away.

"Our plan was to go to the home of one of the Nazarene Saints we knew, and so we packed our things quickly, but by that time the city had caught fire and our friend's home burned.

"Everything was on fire, it seemed. There was no light except that from the flare of flames. There was no water. We were black from head to foot. There was nothing to eat—except that the kind-hearted manager of the hotel found us a bite apiece.

"The fire spread rapidly. It came closer and at last we were driven from the hotel and went over to the depot to wait for a relief train.

"The flames were so close, the air was so filled with red-hot cinders and stifling smoke, that our eyes are still red from the experience, and our clothes smell like half-burned wood.

Explosions Add to Horror.

"Every place that stood was turned into a hospital—if there was enough space left. We visited the high school where the doctors were sewing up wounds, giving emergency treatment, and where other helpers were hauling out the dead. That building, too, you know, was wrecked.

"Excepting the Methodist, the churches were gone. Even it was damaged. No place was life intact. Everybody seemed crazed. People as they walked by glared at us but didn't see. They just walked on. They knew not where. Some of them were carrying anything they might have chanced to pick up. Sometimes we wondered if they knew what themselves.

"As we walked along we saw numberless torn and bleeding bodies. Everywhere in the streets, besides the debris of the buildings and the tangle of wires were automobiles, wrecked, turned upside down.

"Sometimes the streets were completely blockaded and we had to stand there, scarcely daring to move. There were guards at the banks and at the jewelry stores. Goods from the other stores were scatftered wherever the wind willed, throughout the streets.

"They were dynamiting the city now in their effort to stop the flames, and the roar of explosions added to the horror of the fires' glare.

"One young man came up to me and said:

Relief Train Arrives.

"'My sister is dead. I saw her. (She was in the grade school which went down in the storm). My mother and other sister were at home. I've been there. Even the fuondation stones are gone and I cannot find a single stick of the house.'

"Everything was ghastly. We had to pick our way to the station by the light of the flames.

"Truly we were refugees. Everybody had to get out. Then the relief train came. The dead and injured were put on first. We followed. We had no notion of where we were going, but get out we must.

"The train took us to Carbondale and from there we got another to Du Quoin. The hotels were filled with refugees but the town itself seemed deserted, for its people had rushed over to help in the storm area.

"Even in Du Quoin we saw heart-breaking scenes. One father drove up to the hotel with his family in an automobile. His little son, who had been killed, was in the back seat."

REFUGEES IN MURPHYSBORO GIVEN SHELTER

the hospitals or busy performing some of the duties of rehabitation in the city. A graves' registration service was organized yesterday by Joseph N. S. Sletten of Chicago, executive secretary of the National Funeral Directors' Association. Sletten obtained the help of 15 guardsmen and compiled a complete record of interments.

Despite the great number of fatalities there has been found no necessity for burying the dead in pine boxes or other makeshift coffins. A supply of coffins was sent in from St. Louis several days ago and other caskets were obtained from nearby towns.

One of the affecting examples of the thoughtfulness of the outside world in Murphysboro's trials is the shipment of a consignment of flowers from Chicago to be placed upon the coffins. The blooms were sorted out into sprays and one of them was placed today on each coffin before it was borne out to the cemetery.

At a late hour last night all the bodies recovered had been identified, except two which will be held as long as practicable for identification. They are the bodies of a young man and of an infant about a year old. These and the other bodies were viewed yesterday by a Coroner's jury, but an inquest will not be opened formally until other duties are performed.

Unusual Housing Conditions.

The shortage of quarters for the refugees has produced many unusual conditions. In a farmhouse near town, for example, 30 persons are living in quarters built for five. In another house 16 persons, representing several families, are living together. Again, seven families, negro and whites, are living in a cottage in Murphysboro, race prejudices forgotten in the common trouble.

Yesterday afternoon public notices directing townspeople to report their conditions to the committee in charge of relief were posted about the town. Many of the refugees are persones of once prosperous circumstances and pride has kept them from asking for necessities where poorer persons have felt no hesitation. It is believed that many refugees are still bearing hunger and lack of housing facilities in miserable silence and the committee hopes to make them report their condition.

United States Senator William B. McKinley of Illinois yesterday telegraphed the committee authority to draw $1000 on his account for rescue work here. He has given authority for the withdrawal of like amounts to four other stricken communities, making his donation $5000.

The New York Police Department Band, which is on tour, passed through here yesterday and left a $150 donation with Mayor Blair for relief work.

One of the escapes narrated by the citizens is the apparently well authenticated story of Mrs. Dorothy Schwartael, wife of a railroad employe, and her son, Jack. The tornado literally shattered the home of the Schwartzels, on the edge of the city. Mrs. Schwartzel was picked up by the wind and hurled into the lower branches of a fruit tree near the house. Jack suffered a like fate, landing in the tree above his mother and crashing to the ground, his fall broken by the branches. Neither was seriously hurt.

A. J. Roberts, local undertaker, was one of the members of the early rescue parties. Driving through the streets with several injured in his ambulance, Roberts just cleared a brick wall as it toppled and crashed into the street. The fate of a fire truck standing in the street was not so happy. It was caught beneath the bricks and demolished.

The home of the dead proved a sanctuary for the living when the tornado struck Murphysboro's cemeteries. In the Tower Grove Cemetery at the time were William Mullinhall, the sexton, and a helper. When they saw the black funnel whirling down upon them they ran to a burial vault and opening the door stood inside. Neither was hurt although the trees in the cemetery were torn to bits.

Only the barest clews made possible the identification of many of the bodies of the men who died when the M. & O. shops collapsed and burned. The charred remains of two shopmen were identified by the watches found near them. The body of J. G. Andrews, a salesman, who was trying to sell an automobile to a workman when the storm struck the shops, was identified by the charred pages of an automobile catalog found beneath his body.

Four St. Louis Detectives Aiding Officers at Murphysboro.

A detail of four detectives was sent by Chief of Detectives Hoagland to Murphysboro, Ill., yesterday to assist the local authorities in preserving order in the storm-swept area over Sunday, when large crowds of visitors are expected. The assignment was made at the request of the Jackson County authorities.

INSURANCE LOSS WILL BE HEAVY

Arrangements Made to Issue Full Payment as Rapidly as Claims Are Made.

By the Associated Press.

BENTON, Ill., March 21.—Close behind the volunteer relief workers that have poured into the tornado-stricken area since early Thursday morning have come representatives of the insurance companies. Emergency offices are being established and by the early part of next week payment of claims will begin.

Less than three-fourths of the storm loss is covered by fire and tornado insurance policies, according to the estmate of officers of some of the larger companies, completing a survey of the devastated area.

In the towns it is estimated that property was insured for close to three-fourths of its value, especially in the residential district of towns like West Frankfort, where the homes for the most part belonged to industrial employes and were built by building and loan company funds requiring heavy insurance.

In many localities the proportion of insurance to the property value is not over 50 per cent, it is estimated.

The work of the company claim adjusters will be largely a matter of form. In the direct path of the tornado, the destruction of buildings was virtually complete and insurance companies are preparing to recognize the loss at total in most cases. The strain on resources will be severe but arrangements are being made to issue full payment as rapidly as claims are presented.

Combination fire, lightning and wind policies are the principal ones held in Franklin and neighboring counties.

Claim agents who are completing a survey of the stricken localities report that the suffering in the isolated villages and rural districts is still acute. Relief workers are just beginning to penetrate to some of the more remote communities, from which additional bodies of victims are being received from time to time.

Even where families were not almost blotted out, as seems to have been blotted out, as seems to in the path of the storm, fences for miles on either side were torn from the ground and carried away bodily and the roads and fields are so strewn with fallen timber and debris carried from distant points that it is impossible to get from one community to another.

Laundry to Aid Tornado Victims.

Persons desiring to send clothing or other supplies to the tornado-stricken area of Southern Illinois may telephone the Bright & Free Laundry, 5572 Easton avenue, the proprietors of which are prepared to forward goods by the laundry's trucks. The telephones are Forest 2280 and 2281. Those making this offer of transportation are E. F. Bright, E. S. Free and S. G. Clark Jr.

SIGHTSEERS HAMPER TORNADO RELIEF

Illinois Sheriffs to Stop Motorists Going Into Stricken Areas.

Motorists and sightseers are warned to keep away from the storm devastated districts of Southern Illinois today, by Red Cross officials and military and local officers, who yesterday found their tasks of mery seriously retarded by the crowds of morbidly curious.

To keep the highways open to relief traffic, a military pass system is already in operation and those who cannot show credentials signed by the military authorities are being turned back.

In Franklin County the work of relief has been so seriously hampered by those who have no business there that Sheriff Henry D[illegible]ris has issued orders to his deputies to turn back from the county lines today all who cannot show a rightful need for their presence in the stricken towns. He telegraphed the Post-Dispatch yesterday that no spectators would be permitted to enter the County.

Traffic Jams Hamper Relief.

The paved highways of the district have proved an irresistible temptation to motorists. Long lines of traffic on the roads have seriously delayed the truck trains of relief supplies which are pouring in from supply centers.

So dense was traffic on some highways that motorists could proceed only at snail's pace and the progress of supplies to the points where there was utmost need was seriously delayed.

Idle spectators in the stricken towns were at times in the way of rescue and relief workers, and hampered their efforts until they were forced to move on by the authorities.

The Red Cross, in a statement issued yesterday by Chairman J. L. Mauran of the St. Louis Citizens' Committee for Disaster Relief, pointed out that the State of Illinois, through its militia, is ready to take drastic measures if the warning is not heeded.

Militia May Be Used.

"With Morgues filled with unidentified dead and thousands of people homeless, the presence of those seeking only to have their curiosity gratified would be a hindrance," he said.

"Should this appeal be disregarded and sightseers persist in visiting the devastated area, it may be necessary to invoke the militia of the State of Illinois to prevent them from entering the district.

"The Red Cross hopes such drastic measures will not be necessary and that the people will respond to this appeal."

Not only will the motorist who attempts to visit the district probably be turned back before he gets within the boundaries of the affected counties, but it is also unlikely that he will have difficulty reaching home on his return journey.

All available men are needed to handle the relief traffic within the stricken district, and those in touch with the situation point out that sightseers are not only unlikely to reach their proposed destination but instead are liable to cause great jams of undirected traffic which will seriously impede progress in either direction, and will make it difficult to find their way along the way.

In obedience to a resolutio passed at the last session of Co gress, a special committee, co sisting of seven members of th House of Representatives, tomo row will begin an investigatio here of the official conduct of Fe eral Judge George W. English, East St. Louis, to determin whether he should be impeache Hearings will be held in the Federal Building, Eight and Oliv with the possibility of being trans ferred later to East St. Louis.

Twenty witnesses are under sub pena to appear tomorrow. The are expected to testify concernin the handling of bankruptcy an receivership cases in Judge En glish's court, and to acts of allege tyranny. The names of more tha 50 additional witnesses, who wi be summoned at the committee' convenience, are in the possessio of the chairman, Congressman W D. Boies of Iowa.

Missing Witness Sought.

However, a week's search by De partment of Justice agents ha failed to locate Mrs. Grace Thayer wanted as a witness, who disappeared from her place of employment Friday week, a few hour after Chairman Boies had asked the department to afford her protection. She formerly was a stenographer in the office of Charles B. Thomas, then referee in bankruptcy in Judge English's court, against whom criminal action is under consideration by the department in connection with his actions as referee. Efforts to find Mrs. Thayer will continue.

Judge English has been notified to produce any witnesses he may wish to have heard in his own behalf. Counsel will represent him, and it is likely he will be asked to submit to examination. Committees make their own rules of procedure; they are not bound by legal rules of evidence.

The specified charges against Judge English, contained in a resolution introduced in the House by Representative Harry Hawes of St. Louis and in charges filed with the Speaker by four citizens in East St. Louis, are that he permitted a "bankruptcy ring" to operate in his court, by which properties undergoing receivership and bankruptcy were reduced in assets, that he was guilty of tyrannical and oppressive conduct toward attorneys and litigants, and that he participated in, or had guilty knowledge of, other improprieties and irregularities.

Membership of Committee.

An appropriation of $5000 to defray the expenses of the inquiry was carried in the joint resolution authorizing it. The committee is prepared to sit as long as the purpose of the investigation warrants.

Members, in addition to Chairman Boies, are: Congressmen Michener, Michigan; Hersey, Maine; Christopherson, South Dakota; Sumners, Texas; Tillman, Arkansas, and Weller, New York. The first four are Republicans, and the last three Democrats.

As an investigating body, the committee is an exceptionally strong one. All the members are members of the House Judiciary Committee, so selected for their legal training and eminence. It contains some shrewd and aggressive cross-examiners. Congressman Sumners is here, and the others will arrive today. They were preceded by William Meletio, Deputy Sergeant-at-Arms of the House, who will have charge of the witnesses.

Potter to Decide Whether to Prosecute Thomas Criminally.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The question of criminal prosecution of Charles B. Thomas, former Referee in Bankruptcy in the Court of Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, will be decided by United States District Attorney W. O. Potter of East St. Louis, William J. Donovan, assistant to the Attorney-General, said today after he had completed a study of a report on the official acts of the former Referee made by two Department of Justice investigators.

Donovan said that Monday he would send a copy of the report to Potter for whatever action the latter might see fit to take. He stated that he had made no specific recommendations because he wanted a local man to review the evidence of the investigators.

The investigators' report, as related in the Post-Dispatch 10 days ago, sets out 18 alleged irregularities by former Referee Thomas, who acted also as receiver and at-

SIGHTSEERS HAMPER TORNADO RELIEF

Illinois Sheriffs to Stop Motorists Going Into Stricken Areas.

Motorists and sightseers are warned to keep away from the storm devastated districts of Southern Illinois today, by Red Cross officials and military and local officers, who yesterday found their tasks of mery seriously retarded by the crowds of morbidly curious.

To keep the highways open to relief traffic, a military pass system is already in operation and those who cannot show credentials signed by the military authorities are being turned back.

In Franklin County the work of relief has been so seriously hampered by those who have no business there that Sheriff Henry Dorris has issued orders to his deputies to turn back from the county lines today all who cannot show a rightful need for their presence in the stricken towns. He telegraphed the Post-Dispatch yesterday that no spectators would be permitted to enter the County.

Traffic Jams Hamper Relief.

The paved highways of the district have proved an irresistible temptation to motorists. Long lines of traffic on the roads have seriously delayed the truck trains of relief supplies which are pouring in from supply centers.

So dense was traffic on some highways that motorists could proceed only at snail's pace and the progress of supplies to the points where there was utmost need was seriously delayed.

Idle spectators in the stricken towns were at times in the way of rescue and relief workers, and hampered their efforts until they were forced to move on by the authorities.

The Red Cross, in a statement issued yesterday by Chairman J. L. Mauran of the St. Louis Citizens' Committee for Disaster Relief, pointed out that the State of Illinois, through its militia, is ready to take drastic measures if the warning is not heeded.

Militia May Be Used.

"With Morgues filled with unidentified dead and thousands of people homeless, the presence of those seeking only to have their curiosity gratified would be a hindrance," he said.

"Should this appeal be disregarded and sightseers persist in visiting the devastated area, it may be necessary to invoke the militia of the State of Illinois to prevent them from entering the district.

"The Red Cross hopes such drastic measures will not be necessary and that the people will respond to this appeal."

Not only will the motorist who attempts to visit the district probably be turned back before he gets within the boundaries of the affected counties, but it is also not unlikely that he will have difficulreaching home on his return journey.

All available men are needed to handle the relief traffic within the stricken district, and those in touch with the situation point out that sightseers are not only unlikely to reach their proposed destination, but instead are liable to caught in great jams of undirected traffic which will seriously impede progress in either direction, and which will make it difficult to find food along the way.

ENGLISH INQUIRY WILL BE OPENED HERE TOMORROW

20 Witnesses Are Under Subpena to Appear Before House Committee at Federal Building.

SEARCH CONTINUES FOR MISSING WITNESS

U. S. Judge to Be Represented by Counsel and Likely Will Be Asked to Submit to Examination.

Potter to Decide Whether to Prosecute Thomas Criminally.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The question of criminal prosecution of Charles B. Thomas, former Referee in Bankruptcy in the Court of Federal Judge George W. English of East St. Louis, will be decided by United States District Attorney W. O. Potter of East St. Louis, William J. The investigators' report, as reported in the Post-Dispatch 10 days ago, sets out 18 alleged irregularities by former Referee Thomas, who acted also as receiver and attorney in bankruptcy cases. Donovan pointed out that some of these 18 irregularities might merely be improprieties rather than criminal acts.

When asked if Potter, if he decided upon criminal prosecution, would have to report back to him before acting, Donovan replied: "No. He can present the facts at once to the grand jury."

A copy of the agents' report also will be furnished the Congressional Committee, he added, by Representative William D. Boies of Iowa, which will meet Monday in its investigation of the official acts of Federal Judge English. Many of the charges against Judge English revolve around the activities of Thomas, who was appointed Referee by English. Judge English had to pass on most of Thomas' official acts.

Chairman Boies of the subcommittee has seen the agents report. Copies were being prepared today for the subcommitte and Potter. Chairman Boies, accompanied by Representative Earl C. Michner of Michigan and Representative Ira G. Hersey of Maine, members of the subcommittee, left Washington this afternoon. The other members of the subcommittee, Representatives Charles A. Christopherson of South Dakota, Hatton W. Summners of Texas and Royal C. Weller of New York, are en route to St. Louis from their respective homes. With the party which left Washington today were J. G. Rodgers, sergeant-at-arms of the House, Guilford S. James, clerk of the House Judiciary Committee, and two stenographers.

The Finish of a Bank Robber

Photograph shows body of Albert Walters, one of the four men who Friday attempted to rob the Crawford County Farmers' Bank at Steelville, Mo. Walters was shot and instantly killed as he sat at the wheel of the robber's car.

2 EAST SIDE ROBBERS SLAIN IN "HICK" TOWN

One Critically Wounded, Another Caught After Bank Holdup at Steelville, Mo.

The East Side band of robbers who thought the "hick" towns of Missouri would be "easy picking" learned they had made a fatal mistake Friday afternon, when they fell upon the Crawford County Farmers' Bank at Steelville, 95 miles southwest of St. Louis.

The robbery came off in fine desperado style until time for the "get-away" and then the raiders discovered they had walked stupidly into a veritable arsenal of rifles, shotguns and revolvers. When the smoke had cleared, two robbers were dead; one was riddled with buckshot and a fourth was a prisoner.

Only one got away, and some of the possemen who conducted the attack say he was a "tip-off" man who was allowed to escape on purpose. Anyway, he departed without a cent of the $2700 which a companion, a moment before, had scooped into a tire chain bag.

Identity of Dead Robbers.

The dead are Albert Walters, also known as "Bozo," 33 years old, if Mitchell, Ill., and Basil Doman, 30, of Granite City. Walters was shot through the heart with a high-powered rifle as he sat at the wheel of the robber car, and Doman was brought down as he tumbled out of a rear window of the bank. He was filled with bullets from the weapons of business men and farmers who had lain in wait for the holdup men for three hours.

David McClellan, 20, also of Granite City, is now in the city hospital here suffering from buckshot wounds which he received when he made a dash for the car, and Lester Reiter, a 16-year-old boy of Madison, is in jail. He was engaged upon his first robbery and was captured by an unarmed woman as he fled from the scene of the shooting with his empty revolver in his hand.

Steelville's only casualty was one man wounded—A. D. Schweider, a garage mechanic, who was shot in both thighs by Doman. He is recovering at the home of a relative in St. Louis.

COPING, FALLING EIGHT STORIES, KILLS MAN

David Mandel, Standing Between Two Friends at Curb, Hit by Piece of Iron.

David Mandel, 25 years old, a tailor, of 1232 Aubert avenue, was fatally hurt at 3:45 o'clock yesterday afternoon when he was struck on the head by a piece of ornamental iron which fell from a coping around the eighth story of a building at the southeast corner of Eighth street and Washington avenue.

Mandel, with two friends, Samuel Shanker of 5172 Cates avenue, and Michael Schneider of 5159 Cates avenue, was standing near the edge of the walk in front of the store of the Schmitz & Shroder Clothing Co., when the accident occured.

Other persons in the street saw the falling iron and shouted a warning, but none of the three moved. Mandel, the center of the group, was struck on the head and his skull was crushed. He died in an ambulance on the way to the city hospital.

After striking Mandel the iron missile fell to the walk with such force that fragments were broken from it. Two of these struck Miss Nona Williams, 4219 Harris avenue, in the left leg, inflicting painful, but not serious injuries. She was taken to her home.

Miss Williams said she heard the warning shouts of others before she saw Mandel struck, but did not have time to realize what the warning was about before she felt the pain of her own hurts.

The street was crowded with women shoppers and several who witnessed the accident fainted. A crowd quickly collected about the scene and for several minutes traffic was blocked.

HEALTH COMMISSIONER OF CHICAGO TO GO TO STORM AREA

Dr. H. N. Bundesen to Aid in Fight for the Prevention of Disease.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Dr. H. N. Bundesen, Commissioner of Health of Chicago, announced today that he would go to Carbondale, Ill., to join the fight for disease prevention in the tornado area and would take with him chlorine equipment sufficient for the purification of 100,000,000 gallons of water a day. Fiftyq graduate nurses left today for Carbondale, the Commissioner announced.

The Commissioner acted on receipt of a telegram from Col. Harry Orr, commanding the 108th Medical regiment, who wired for aid.

THREE MEN WHO KIDNAPED WOMAN IN AUTO SOUGHT

Victim Tells of Attack After Her Escort Is Forced Out of Machine.

Police today are endeavoring to locate three men who ordered Thomas Byrne, 35 years old, of 6615 Washington boulevard, from his automobile at Lucas and Garrison avenues, at 8:30 p. m. Friday, and drove away with his companion, Mrs. Mabel Wright, 31, of 2703 Washington boulevard, whom they assaulted in the northwestern part of the city and then left her to make her way home.

She reported the kidnaping to the Deer street police at the same time that Byrne told of the robbery and kidnaping to police of the Dayton street district. Besides taking his car, the robbers, who flourished pistols, took what money he had, $10.

At 12:20 a. m. yesterday Byrne's car smashed into a curb at 1900 Belgrade avenue and was badly damaged. Three men jumped out, hailed C. L. Bush, 3933 Washington boulevard, who was passing, and demanded that he throw up his hands; but he stepped on his gas and escaped.

WAR LIKELY WITHIN 20 YEARS, SAYS FISKE

Admiral Declares Increasing Foreign Trade Means Increasing Probability of Conflict.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—There will be "increasing probability of a foreign war" during the next 20 years, and therefore the United States "must always maintain a state of reasonable preparedness for war," Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske, retired, declared tonight in an address before the Politics Club of Columbia University.

He explained that, in his opinion, the increasing foreign trade of the next 20 years "means increasing liability of conflict with competing nations, because of the enormous amounts of money involved." For the same reason, he said, he considered it "probable that wars on the ocean will be much more frequent and tremendous in the future than they have been in the past."

Admiral Fiske told for the first time, he said, a story which, in his opinion, explained the "basic cause of Mr. Wilson's conduct as Cmmander-in-Chief of the army and navy."

A Physical Coward."

He said that in 1913 President Wilson accepted an invitation to witness navy target practice in Chesapeake Bay. Later, he said, President Wilson wrote the Secretary of the Navy that he would fulfill the engagement, "but," he added, "that he was looking forward to it with the greatest possible dread."

Therefore, said Admiral Fiske, the request for the President's presence was withdrawn, and he never went to the target practice.

"Some time after that," continued Admiral Fiske, "I spoke of this incident to ex-President Roosevelt.

"'That explains many things,' said he. 'The man's a physical coward.' I answered that it seemed to me that it was merely a case of nerves."

$79,734,490 IN GASOLINE TAXES PAID BY MOTORISTS

Of This Sum, $48,711,326 Was Used Last Year in Road Maintenance and Construction.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Motorists in 35 States and the District of Columbia last year paid $79,734,490 in gasoline taxes, of which sum $48,711,326 was used in State road maintenance and construction. Much of the remainder collected was turned over to county and local road funds.

The Department of Agriculture, in announcing these figures tonight, estimated that only half of the automobile owners in the country contributed to the fund, although all but 13 States levied a gasoline tax. The average amount paid annually where the tax was imposed was $10.30 per vehicle.

California, with a 2-cent tax, collected $11,993,222, of which $5,996,611, was applied to State roads. Pennsylvania collected $9,089,541, the second largest sum, with a 2-cent levy, but the department had no record of what part of it was used for highways. Wyoming's 1-cent tax brought only $200,319, all of it being used for roads. The State has increased the tax to 2½ cents per gallon.

Arkansas' 4-cent tax, the largest of all States, brought the State $2,768,535, of which $2,268,535 was applied to road work.

RELIEF WORK WELL ADVANCED IN INDIANA STORM ZONES

Death Toll in Griffin Swelled to 581—Money Badly Needed to Rehabilitate Town.

By the Associated Press.

INDIANAPOLIS, March 21.—Relief work in the Indiana storm zones at Princeton, Owensville and Griffin was well under way today. Most of those who lost their lives in the Wednesday tornado were buried.

While many of the more seriously injured still remain in hospitals at Princeton, Owensville, New Harmony and Evansville, many who were slightly hurt have been removed to homes of relatives and friends. The death list is now placed at 109.

Military authorities prepared today to prevent an influx of sightseers into the stricken area Sunday. Owensville and Griffin will be patrolled by State troops with orders to let none but those on relief work enter.

At Griffin today the body of Sydney Hyatt, 35 years old, was found under piles of brick between the restaurant and general store. Three others, F. R. Biggerstaff, 31; Nina Housek, 34, and Ruby Cleveland, 14, succumbed to injuries in Evansville hospitals. This swelled the Griffin death total to 58.

Adis Smith, 50, succumbed to injuries at Poseyville.

Money is needed badly, C. N. Garrett, former postmaster at Griffin, said, if the town is to resume existence. He estimated the property loss at nearly $500,000. Insurance would not aggregate more than $40,000, he said. Children who attended the consolidated school there will be placed in schools in nearby towns. Residents will be asked to house them.

If the Wabash River does not leave its banks tomorrow Griffin will be free from flood worry. The river has been at the danger mark for several days.

C. W. MORSE SERIOUSLY ILL FROM PARALYSIS

New York Financier and Former Convict Unconscious Since March 13.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21—Charles W. Morse, financier, has been unconscious in his home, 160 West 59th street, since Friday, March 13, when he suffered a paralytic stroke and hemorrhage of the brain. Two physicians are in attendance, and his wife and a male nurse are constantly at his bedside. He is 69 years old.

A week ago yesterday a taxicab drove up to the apartment house, and the driver notified the doorman that his passenger, ill, had asked to be taken to that address. The passenger, Morse, was carried to his apartment. The driver left without explaining where he had picked Morse up. Mrs. Morse was not at home at the time.

Dr. Henry James has been attempting to revive Morse. He called Dr. Frederick Tilney for consultation. Tonight they described the patient's condition as "serious."

Morse returned to New York from Washington, apparently in excellent health, March 11, with his attorney, Judge Nash Rockwood.

His illness comes as preparations are being made in the Federal courts here to try him and his three sons on indictments charging use of the mails to defraud investors in varioues shipbuilding companies.

Morse first came into the public eye as the ice king of New York. Then he became owner of a group of New York banks and of several transportation and shipbuilding companies.

On Jan. 3, 1910, after a sensational trial, he was sent to Atlanta Penitentiary for 15 years for misapplication of funds and false entries in the books of the National Bank of America, one of his properties. On Jan. 18, 1912, he was pardoned by President Taft after surgeons said he was suffering from Bright's disease, arterial sclerosis and symptoms of paralysis.

AIR MAIL LOSES RACE WITH CHICAGO ATTORNEYS

Appeal Bond Signed by William Wrigley Arrives After Substitute Is Filed in Court.

CHICAGO, March 21.—An airplane and legal race was ended today with the lawyers a winner by at least 16 hours in the matter of filing an appeal bond in the great chewing gum court battle.

Appeal bonds signed by William Wrigley Jr., chairman of the board of the William Wrigley Jr. Co., which he had dispatched from Catalina Island by airplane which intercepted the San Francisco-Chicago air mail at Reno, Nev., yesterday reached his attorneys at 8:30 today. But the lawyers more than 16 hours earlier, it was disclosed, had filed a similar bond which was approved by Federal Judge Wilkerson in a suit by the L. P. Larson Co.

The Larson company based its case against the William Wrigley Jr. company on charges of unfair competition involving the color scheme on a gum wrapper. Last year in the Federal District Court, a master in chancery recommended a finding for $2,860,083 against the Wrigley company, which added interest from March 12, 1918, the total approximating $4,000,000. Judge Wilkerson cut the judgment to $1,471,101 and reduced the interest period. Neither side was satisfied, and both announced appeals would be taken to the Circuit Court of Appeals.

DON'T CROWD, PLENTY FOR ALL

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Representative Sol Bloom of New York was here today trying to give away 50,000,000 gallons of intoxicating liquors owned by his constituents. The lot contains rum, gin, whisky and alcohol and it is in bonded warehouses. Bloom's proposition was to donate the liquor to anybody who could get it out of the warehouse without additional cost to the people who own it.

"This liquor," said Bloom, "has been in the warehouses since prohibition went into effect and it is breaking the people to keep up the rentals and other costs. It cost five cents a barrel per month storage before the country went dry and then it jumped to $1.00, but was later reduced to 50 cents."

RELIEF FUND FOR FARMERS

CHICAGO, March 21.—Illinois farmers today started to raise $174,000 for the permanent relief of their stricken brethren in the rural districts of the tornado zone of Illinois.

"This aid will be that of one farmer for a brother farmer, to put the farmer in the devastated region back on his feet, back in business," said representatives of the Illinois Agricultural Association today.

County farm bureaus in 87 Illinois counties have been instructed to raise a quota of $2000 each among the farmers and to be expended by local committees in the tornado region strictly for the farmers.

Boy, 5, Injured by Automobile.

Salvatore, 5-year-old son of Joseph Olivostro of 709 Carroll street, was knocked down by an automobile as he played in the street in front of his home at 6:30 o'clock yesterday. The driver of the car did not stop to pick up the boy, who suffered scalp wounds.

Tells of Results in Use Of His New Antiseptic

Discoverer of Hexylresorcinol Employed It for Most Part in Cases Submitted by Other Doctors.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 21.—Wonderful results in treatment of disease by hexylresorcinol, the powerful new antiseptic, were made public today by its discoverer, Dr. Veader eLonard, chairman of the committee on internal antiseptics, national research council. Hexylresorcinol is 50 times more active than carbolic acid in its power to kill disease germs in the genito-urinary tract. Dr. Leonard's work was carried on at Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene.

Three types of disease germs, known best by their production of pus and irritation, staphylococcus, streptococcus and bacillus coli, Dr. Leonard said, have been combatted successfully by the antiseptic. The first two, he declared, were compelled to give in after treatment ranging from two to 19 days, but the third, bacillus coli, a germ which infests the large intestine, requires more patient effort, since its point of origin is not in the genito-urinary canal and is not subject to the local action of hexylresorcinol.

Cites Significant Case.

Dr. Leonard characterized as a significant example of the drug's action the following case of its application to an infection of staphylococcus discovered in a boy after an operation for appendicitis. The operation had appeared to be successful. But the patient suffered from chills and fever. He went from bad to worse and was expected to die. Relief measures were applied by way of the mouth, injections into the veins and by drains affixed to the seat of the infection.

When death was awaited momentarily, the father of the patient, a physician wired Dr. Leonard asking him to send hexylresorcinol and directions for administering. Dr. eLonard complied and advised that the drains be removed from the patient so as to prevent the diversion of the antiseptic from the points it was desired to reach. In 48 hours, he said, the patient's temperature was normal and in six days the infection had disappeared.

The cases which he presented, Dr. Leonard declared, were for the most part those of other physicians, selected because he felt "testimony of others would be more convincing than material he had observed himself."

Ingredients of New Antiseptic.

Hexylresorchinol, he said, filled the requirements which 12 years ago had been declared necessary for a genito-urinary antiseptic. These conditions were that it should be chemically stable, nonirritating to the genito-urinary tract, poteutly germicidal, capable of elimination in high percentages by the kidneys, and soluble to a high degree. The perfection of such an antiseptic, he declared, was attained by the combination of resorcinol with carbon atoms.

The effect of the antiseptic, Dr. Leonard said, was to combine at once with the secretions of the kidneys and to render those secretions themselves antiseptics. This, he declared, was especially true as long as the secretions were acid in character. Should enough sodium bicarbonate be given the patient to make the kidney secretions alkaline, Dr. Leonard said, the power of hexylresorcinol was destroyed. The effect of alkalinity upon the drug, he declared, was disgcovered with the help of Dr. Martin Frobisher of the Hopkins school.

As hexylroorchinol is an irritent to the stomach, it is put up in olive oil solution in a gelatinous capsule. It is administered after meals, Dr. Leonard explained, so as to mingle with the food and prevent immediate contact with the bare stomach walls.

RED CROSS EXTENDS WORK OF COLLECTING RELIEF FUNDS

All Large Chapters in Country Designated as Depositories—Adequate Food Supplies.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—All large Red Cross chapters throughout the nation were designated today as depositaries to receive funds for relief of the Mid-West storm sufferers. At the same time Red Cross headquarters here announced that its workers had telegraphed that every known sufferer was being given emergency care.

"This means," a statement said, "that medical attention is being given the injured, that Red Cross canteens everywhere are putting out adequate food supplies and that temporary housing problems have been met."

"Your chapter," read a notice sent out, "is authorized to accept in behalf of the American Red Cross for transmittal to national headquarters at Washington all contributions for the relief of the disaster sufferers. Adequate publicity should be immediately given to this fact. Individual contributions will be restricted by the Red Cross to the relief of any particular area when so designated by the donors."

EXPERT NURSES PRESSING NEED IN STORM-STRICKEN AREA

With Hospitals Full, West Frankfort and Murphysboro are Calling for Trained Assistants.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—There is still a need for nurses and a leader in relief work, Dr. Thomas A. Carter of the Columbus Hospital, one of the first volunteers to go into the storm-stricken territory, said today.

"Last night both West Frankfort and Murphysboro were calling for more nurses," said Carter. "The hospitals are full, there is a grave possibility of a spread of infecutious diseases and much underwear and night shirts are needed. There are plenty of surgical instruments, for major operations, but not enough for the treatment of the minor injuries."

James D. Snyder of Benton, Ill. of Gov. Small's personal committee who issued an appeal last night for more trained nurses, said again today that relief nurses were badly needed. However, said Snyder, "we do not want untrained nurses. Expert nurses, however, are needed and needed in a hurry."

CANADA HIT BY STORM

Telegraph and Rail Disrupted by Worst Blizzard in Years.

By the Associated Press.

WINNIPEG, March 21.—One of the worst blizzards in the past 10 years swept over the prairie provinces yesterday, badly demoralizing railway transportation service, telegraph communications, and vehicular traffic generally. Many towns were completely isolated by the blocking of the roads and trails by enormous drifts.

The storm centered in Manitoba and Southeastern Saskatchewan, the wind reaching a velocity of nearly 70 miles an hour in the Brandon district. No property damage or loss of range stock has been reported. The snowfall in the snow-swept area was one of the heaviest of the season, and following so closely in the wake of the 12-inch fall two weeks ago, has greatly added to hte menace of a second flood situation.

WILLIAMSON COUNTY TO GIVE $10,000 TO AID SUFFERERS

Residents Also Have Contributed Food and Clothing and Sheltered Storm Victims.

By the Associated Press.

MARION, Ill., March 21.—Herrin and Williamson County will contribute between $10,000 and $20,000 in cash and supplies to the relief of the tornado victims besides furnishing houses, food and clothing for the homeless. Marion, now facing a depression due to shut down of coal mines, has raised $4000 in cash. Pupils in the Marion High School contributed over $300. Store buildings, schools and homes today were turned into vast workshops preparing sheets, bed clothes and infants' wear for the needy.

The first tornado policy paid here was upon an automobile, the owner receiving $360 on a policy that had cost him 80 cents.

Williamson County doctors and relief workers, mobilized the night of the tornado, have been constantly on duty since. Labor unions and lodges are making large contributions to the general fund besides caring for their brother workmen in the stricken communities. The farm bureau has sent horseback runners out into the farm communities to ascertain the needs there. The war-time rolling kitchen of the Marion American Legion was rushed to Murphysboro and is still being used to feed workers, troops and refugees.

RELATIVES IN GERMANY CABLE REGARDING SAFETY OF MAN

News of Tornado Had Been Received by Radio and Broadcast by German Stations.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

MURPHYSBORO, Ill., March 21.—A cablegram from relatives in Germany, asking about the safety of Alphonse Gephart, engineer, at St. Andrew's Hospital here, was received today by Gephart.

The cable explained that news of the tornado had been received by radio, broadcast apparently from German stations. Gephart had not been injured.

SHEPHERD, BACK IN CELL, AWAITS ACTION AS TO BAIL

counsel in support of the motion for bail, but not read in the proceedings, said that Faiman had violated many laws and was subject to prosecution in the court over which Judge Olson presided. It added that he was promised immunity; that he had been in Judge Olson's and the State's Attorney's custody continuously, and that he was now in custody of the State's Attorney at a hotel at the expense of the people though no capias had been served.

A desire to blackmail Shepherd on the part of Faiman, and a scheme to break the will of young McClintock, which gave the greater portion of his fortune to his foster father, are the motives for the activities against Shepherd, William Scott Stewart, criminal attorney, told the court in his plea for bail for Shepherd.

Meanwhile, with Shepherd in a cell, Faiman is held at the instance of the State, under guard in a hotel. This action was assailed by Shepherd's attorneys today, "as Faiman is a guest of the State and if his confession can be believed he is equally guilty."

COLISEUM HERE CHANGES OWNERS; TO BE REMODELED

Sale of Structure to New Company, Described as Subsidiary of New York Concern, Announced.

The St. Louis Coliseum, which has had a more or less stormy career since it was built in 1909 on the site of historic Uhrig's Cave, at Jefferson and Washington avenues, has changed hands again, this time to be remodeled as a natatorium and sports arena, at a cost which the promoters say will exceed $200,000.

A definite announcement of the transfer last night confirmed reports that had been current for several weeks. The structure owned by the St. Louis Coliseum Co. was transferred yesterday to the New Coliseum Co., described as a subsidiary of the National Arenas Syndicate, Inc., of New York, a company formed to establish a chain of such arenas and natatoriums in different cities.

The financial consideration involved in the transfer was not disclosed, but it is said to be $300,000. Eastern capital is interested in the new company, and officers of the old company are on the directorate of the new. T. P. Bates, president of the old company, and M. J. Pickering, who will manage the new project stated that $200,000 was deposited in a St. Louis bank yesterday to cover the first cost of reconstruction.

Officers of New Company.

The officers of the new company are Theodore Crane, a New York capitalist, president; Dan W. Jones and J. Franklin Whitman, vice presidents; Walter R. Mayne, secretary, and W. H. Brien, treasurer, with Bates, Pickering and R. King Kauffman, of the Mercantile Trust Co., on the board of directors.

The idea of the natatorium-arena in St. Louis is said to have been conceived by Samuel Bowman, real estate dealer, who in 1921, seeing the success of Madison Square Garden in New York, tried to interest "Tex" Rickard in a like project for the Coliseum. Rickard did not respond, but Bowman's activity aroused the interest of other New Yorkers.

Bates stated that the Coliseum is booked through April 26, when the Police Relief Benefit closes, and it is planned, on the morning of April 27, to begin excavation for a swimming pool on the arena floor. The program calls for enlargement of the seating capacity to provide for conventions and sports events on a larger scale than possible now. The remodelling will improve the acoustics and increase the angle of visibility from the seats, providing a seating capacity of 10,000.

It is planned to operate the natatorium from May to October, and use the building for all purposes during the rest of the year, much as is done now. The Natatorium Construction Co. of New York has contracted to build the pool, which, it is said, will be ready June 1.

KENTUCKY AND INDIANA SEND AID TO ILLINOIS

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARRISBURG, Ill., March 21.—Many trucks filled with provisions of all kinds, clothing, bedding and medical supplies have been passing through Harrisburg this morning, coming from Kentucky and Indiana bound for the tornado district. Upon a call from Murphysboro for more nurses, Rotary and Kiwanis Clubs hurriedly sent five auto loads of women to that city.

Harrisburg raised $1000 cash last night and committees are making a house-to-house canvas today gathering clothing and wearing apparel. One special committee is gathering bedclothes. All will be sent to the stricken district this afternoon.

U. S. Tourists Ask About Storm.

NAPLES, March 21.—When the steamer Rotterdam, which is touring the Mediterranean arrived today numerous anxious inquirers visited the American consulate to obtain information about the disastrous storm in the Middle West. There are 600 Americans cruising on the ship, and many of them have relatives and friends in the stricken area.

Personal Narrative of Post-Dispatch Writer At Scene of Tornado

Confusion and Grief Alternate in West Frankfort as Victims Multiply and Work of Rescue Is Hampered by Terror-Stricken Inhabitants.

By RICHARD G. BAUMHOFF,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., March 21.—A vivid, moving picture of disaster, fear, horror, desolation, sorrow, charity and bravery passed before the eyes of the writer, in the hurried movements necessary in getting news of the disaster wrought by Wednesday afternoon's tornado at West Frankfort.

The Post-Dispatch received the first word of the Southern Illinois havoc within 30 minutes after it occurred and began arrangements at once to have its staff men reach the scene. Two reporters and a photographer left St. Louis at 6:30 p. m. Wednesday in an automobile and made the 95 miles to Duquoin by 9:45 p. m. They stopped at the Illinois Central depot there and just then the first relief train, bound for West Frankfort from Centralia, passed through. This reporter caught it as it was leaving, while the others went on to De Soto and Murphysboro.

Sky Lighted by Fire.

A big locomotive rushed the carload of physicians and supplies over a branch line. All the way from Benton to West Frankfort the sky was made luridly, fearsomely bright by a distant fire. Trainmen thought the flames were at Herrin, but they proved to come from a refuse pile near here. They keyed the relief party to a high state of nerves. All night long, while West Frankfort began to get control of its situation, the blaze kept alive the creepy awe of forces beyond man's power that the tornado first had instilled.

At the station here disshelved youths, who had been working hard, met the party, which included the first persons on the scene from any distant point. Physicians and the writer piled into a waiting Ford of uncertain age and were taken to the United Mine Workers' Hospital, the improvised hospitals and the two undertaking establishments for a hasty survey. The simple expedient of carrying a bag of first-aid equipment transformed a reporter into a doctor's assistant to gain unquestioned entry.

Ambulances Rush Wounded.

On the streets of this city of 20,000, strangely silent crowds shifted about. Ambulances shot back and forth with noisy bells. The congestion of the wounded in their resting places was great, and activities of willing volunteers increased the confusion. Girls who probably never saw serious wounds before gave what help they could. Couches of all sorts held the injured.

There were no outcries from the sufferers. Here and there one moaned in agony. Faces above makeshift covers strove to repress the signs of pain and sorrow and fear. Men with fractured skulls lay quiet. Children with broken limbs were comforted by strangers. Maimed women sought news of their babes. Youths who could move a bit begged cigarettes. Those who needed major operations but had to wait their turn submitted gladly to opiates as physicians reached them. Everywhere the glare of electric lights and the stir of people kept the wounded awake.

Before midnight 84 of West Frankfort's dead had reached the morgues and embalmers were struggling against time in cramped rooms and interrupted by crowds of anxious survivors seeking relatives. Some of the dead lay naked, others only half concealed by sheets. Some bodies bore livid mutilations or burns. Formaldehyde fumes assailed the eyes. Worst sight of all, and one which turned everybody away with a gulp, was a row of 16 dead children of tender years huddled on a table.

Desolation Everywhere.

All night long the unwonted bustle kept up on Main street. A few blocks away was the wide swath cut by the wind, where stir and light were gone and streets had disappeared with everything else. Instead of block after block of the homes of coal miners' large families there was nothing but kindling wood, junk, mud and the spots where frail men had bled and died under nature's scourge.

There the drivers of the dilapidated flivver that had met the train took the correspondent. Smashing across wreckage, the car went to the heart of the devastation, only to stick in the mud. On all sides were the shadowy spots of death, lighted by the relentless glare of the distant fire. The car mired in a mudhole down to the hubs. While its occupants pushed and shoved men appeared as from the earth. They were miners guarding the remnants of their property or specially deputized as policemen on watch for ghouls. Their flashlights snapped on and off. A pair of the officers slipped forward and challenged the automobile party with rifles till the mission of news was explained.

All the while melancholy croaking of frogs smote the ears.

The officers picked the way to a tent where J. H. Young, a miner, was keeping a lonely vigil next to the remnant of his home. Soberly, almost piously, Young showed how his old automobile had held the walls up and saved his family. His campfire was the one cheery spot in the vast area.

Barely discernible in the north was the bulky shadow of the New Orient mine tipples, which were stripped and twisted. On another side, flames of a burning coal bunker leaped up. The men pointed out the spots where more bodies were expected to be recovered. They recounted rumors that a man had been shot as he sought to steal a dead woman's diamond.

Another visit to morgues, at 2 a. m., and then the party started for Benton in hope of finding a telegraph wire operating to St. Louis. West Frankfort had no outside wire service available, except for emergency use, for three days. Herman Craig and Morris Wollard, painters by trade, but the guides, helpers and friends of the Post-Dispatch man for 72 hours, put the car over the concrete and cinder road in record time.

A railroad operator at Benton tried unsuccessfully for an hour to get St. Louis on the wire, while the reporter scribbled a story in longhand, trying not to hear the chatter of trainmen. Then it was back to West Frankfort, all hope of sleep forgotten, to get the latest list of the dead and to take a town photographer to the stricken area at daybreak. Dawn's cold, gray light etched the scene just as it had been since the casuals of the storm had gone, and as it never looked again, after salvagers and curiosity seekers invaded it.

Another speeding to Benton resulted at last in a telephone connection at 8 a. m., which was kept for an hour and a half, while the Post-Dispatch received its first account of the disaster. There was breakfast eventually, and other meals followed in their usual number, but at strange hours. Back to the storm area was the next step, coupled with the necessity of getting a pass from the National Guard officers who had arrived.

Guards Regulate Traffic.

Back and forth—to the wreckage, the morgues, the hospitals and the newspaper office — the story led. By afternoon officials had instituted guards and traffic regulations which stopped the confusion of visitors, but slowed the pace of those with business. Printed signs, "Doctors," "Officers," "Red Cross," "Injured," "Central Illinois Public Service Co." and so on appeared on windshields of privileged cars.

Thursday night there was some rest for the weary newsgatherer in a Benton hotel, which was one of the buildings there deprived of electricity by a distant wire break. Not much candle was burned between supper and bedtime. The faithful Craig brought up early Friday a fairly complete list of the dead prepared by the city editor of the West Frankfort paper, and this was transmitted to the Post-Dispatch.

Recurrent trips through West Frankfort and the devastated area showed how the townspeople were hustling with remarkable unanimity to take care of the dead and injured and prepare for the inevitable future of physical and economic recovery. More passes became necessary. The Police Chief supplied one. A traffic man handed out one from the Sheriff. National Guard officers found it a bit of relief to joke over an elaborate document signed by a number of them, which turned privates' challenges into salutes.

Horror Wears Away.

A rumor spread through the town Friday afternoon that 15 more bodies had been found towards Zeigler. The reporter, a companion coming from another area and an Associated Press man could not chase this down, as the ambulances tore past, for their car had a temporary breakdown. Later, a taxicab served for two hours while the miraculous and pitiful story of what had happened to the community at Caldwell, about Mine No. 18, was gathered.

So it went. The horror of it all gradually wore away. The undercurrent of excitement died down, yet the people remained sobered. It was touching and significant to hear how many persons in the path of the wind had prayed for divine protection, more for loved ones than for themselves. The uniformly kind treatment of these people to the St. Louisans was striking: here was none of the toughness sometimes associated with Southern Illinois mining towns.

Unfortunate Populace Brave.

Driver Craig, after supper Friday, drove the Associated Press man to Benton, and pressed on with others, dropping a Decatur reporter at Duquoin and taking one of the P.-D. men to Belleville. The cold wind that came up was not conducive to ease, nor was the puncture near Mascoutah, when an inner tube flew out of its tire at 40 miles an hour. That and a pin at Benton caused the only tire trouble of the period; all the nails and rubbish at West Frankfort utterly failed. The flivver connected with the last car for St. Louis at Belleville, then Craig and Wollard returned to West Frankfort, obtained the latest bulletins from the editor there and relayed them to the reporter waiting at the Benton telephone. Developments of the story slowed today.

If this reporter saw death, devastation and suffering enough to leave an indelible picture, that picture was nothing compared to the things borne and seen by the brave and unfortunate populace of West Frankfort.

TORNADO ZONE IN NEED OF SURGEONS

Gangrene Has Aperaed Among Injured—Washington Sends Antitoxin.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill. March 21.—Immediate need of surgeons who will donate their time until the injured in the tornado zone all receive attention, today prompted Dr. I. D. Rawlings to appeal to county medical societies in Illinois for help. At the same time he addressed urgent telegrams to the army, navy and public health laboratories at Washington, asking for supplies of antitoxin for gangrene, which has appeared among the injured.

Dr. Thomas Leonard, Assistant Director of Public Health, advised Dr. Rawlings that there are 463 surgical cases in and near Murphysboro demanding attention; 305 in West Frankfort, and 70 cases in the Herrin hospital, brought from Bush.

Because surgical attention has been delayed he reported that gangrene is spreading rapidly. It is caused by dirt in wounds, and was the most common cause of deaths in the early part of the world war.

Leonard's telegrams to Washington follow:

"Gas bacillus gangrene among tornado victims. Is antitoxin available from any source. If so, please order 100 doses for direct shipment to Dr. Thomas H. Leonard, Carbondale, Ill. Charge to this department."

According to Dr. Leonard's report, the surgeons who arrived first have nearly all returned home. The appeal consequently is for as great a number of surgeons as possible. Enough physicians are there, but the need is extreme for surgeons.

In Murphysboro there is need for 108 major operations and 255 minor operations; in West Frankfort, 110 major cases and 185 minor; in Herrin, 70 major and minor.

AID IS SOUGHT FOR FARMERS

Editor, St. Louis Post-Dispatch:

OWENSBORO, Ind., March 21.—In 12 square miles of our farming community 75 farms were completely devastated and 40 farms partly destroyed with the crop season at hand, the needs of farmers are enormous as all farm implements and most of the livestock was destroyed. Money and machinery are needed most. All contributions will be acknowledged by the First State Bank or the Old State Bank of Owensville.

First 30 of De Soto's Storm Victims Buried In Little Cemetery There

Boxes Are Lowered Into Graves Row on Row — Spray of Flowers Sent From Chicago for Each.

By the Associated Press.

DE SOTO, Ill., March 21.—In a tiny country cemetery, adjoining the desolate wreckage of what was once the village of De Soto, the townspeople today buried the first of their dead, the victims of Wednesday's tornado.

Thirty of the town's population of 500 were returned today to De Soto soil and laid at rest among their silent neighbors. Sixty-five grave diggers were at work opening new graves. The small cemetery by Monday will have more than half a hundred newly made mounds.

Only a handful of people came to the cemetery today, for more than 70 of the villagers lost their lives and twice that number were injured.

Original plans to bury most of De Soto's dead in one grave were abandoned when it was found that funeral services could not be held simultaneously, and row on row of graves awaited their occupants, while the men folks of De Soto opened still others.

Hearse After Hearse.

Before noon the little town, deserted except for De Soto people, began receiving back its own. A hearse, sometimes with only a few accompanying it, and sometimes followed by a small procession from Carbondale, would enter the cemetery, unload its burden and hurry away.

Neighbors of the dead read the name on the rough wooden box, carried it tenderly to a grave designated for the person, and sometimes without the formality of prayer or spiritual consolation from a minister, lowered the body to its resting place.

Dividing the Flowers.

Boxes of flowers sent from Chicago were carefully sorted into 71 small sprays by the loving hands of women who explained:

"We have no flowers, and we do not want to miss anyone."

At present there are 71 known dead.

De Soto hopes the list is complete, but those digging in the wreckage insist other bodies are beneath it, particularly at the school building, where children were crushed beneath the tons of brick.

Several children were buried today and a few little graves received babes-in-arms. The same simplicity marked the burial of old and young alike. There was the same solicitude and sympathy for the bereaved.

As the burial proceeded, children, no longer awed by the scenes about them, began playing about the tombstones and clambering on the rough wooden boxes piled beside the yawning graves. Wan smiles appeared on the faces of some of the women as they watched. Children have not been playing in De Soto since last Wednesday and the fact that they so soon have forgotten the tragedy seemed to cheer their elders.

Airplane Salutes Dead.

As De Soto performed the last task for its dead and prepared to take up the task of reconstructing homes from the mass of tangled wreckage, a Government airplane circled the little town and its cemetery three times, dipping gracefully as it swung over the open graves.

It exemplified to the mourners the sympathy that a nation has extended to themselves and others like them. Late in the day the graves were refilled, except for those that will receive their dead tomorrow.

Then the people of De Soto went from the cemetery to what was left of their homes, as one mother who left a little boy in the cemetery expressed it, "to begin life again."

A man who saw the Wednesday storm approaching recognized what it was, saw it destroy the town of De Soto and helped drag out the dying and the dead from the debris, told his story today.

He was F. M. Hewitt of Carbondale, former State Senator, and he told of seeing the great funnel-shaped gray and black cloud coming toward him on the horizon, "cleaning the surface of the earth as it came like a huge plane."

Saw "Big Boiling Clouds."

"I went with T. L. Cherry" he told a representative of the Associated Press, "to the home of a De Soto woman to transact some business. The lady was showing us her six-weeks-old twins when we saw the clouds looming on the horizon. We went outside and there were big boiling clouds with a funnel-shaped black center. I said that I believed it was a tornado and we went to the home of a woman across the street who came out carrying a baby to watch the phenomenon.

"We could see that it was coming nearer, and on the horizon during intermittent flashes of lightning could see timbers and other debris which seemed to be floating in the air on the crest of the wind. I advised against going inside but finally we all went into the home of the neighbor woman.

"The wind increased to the roar of a tremendous draft, then it sounded like a lumbering wagon coming down the street.

"Suddenly the house we were in was lifted for about 10 feet and moved through the air, settling about 20 feet distant. We then got outside as fast as we could.

Held Tight to Post.

"Cherry was knocked unconscious by a flying timber. I felt as if I were going to fly and was being drawn straight up into the air, then I fell down. I saw a post near by and thought if I could get to it I would not be sucked into the air. I finally crawled to it and held tight.

"I felt rather foolish and wondered what people would think if they saw me lying flat on the ground and holding fast to a fence post. As we came from the house we could see houses and other buildings lifted into the air in a mass; then could see them disintegrating and melting away before our eyes.

"After it was over I remember first hearing the cries of babies everywhere and then of frantic mothers searching for their children. I got to my feet and looked around. It seemed to me that bodies were everywhere, particularly the bodies of old people and of children. Some of them had all their clothing torn off.

Cries of the Injured.

"I tried to help the women hunting for their children; then I heard the screaming of the injured. I would go to one person and start elsewhere to get help for him, only to find another person more desperately hurt. Then I would hear another cry and find another still more seriously injured. I never returned to the same person twice.

"It seemed that I was the only person alive and I was short of breath. I wondered if I was the only one to escape the tornado, only to die of suffocation. Then I saw a neighbor who had been a short distance away during the tornado. It seemed to me he and I were the only persons left and I felt when I saw him that he was the only friend I had in the world and didn't want to lose sight of him. We started pulling out the dead and injured from the wrecked homes, and then others came to help. I returned and found that the woman and her twins had escaped."

INFORMATION BUREAU FOR THOSE DESIRING NEWS OF RELATIVES IN STORM ZONE

THE St. Louis Chapter, American Red Cross, has opened an information bureau for St. Louisans who have been unable to get in touch with relatives in the stricken district.

The chapter will wire to the Red Cross man in each town, and have the person looked up of whom information is wanted. No charge will be made.

The bureau is in charge of Mrs. Louise Adams, 2221 Locust street, and the phone number is Bomont 1940.

GIRLS LOST MOTHER IN STORM

Hospital Visitors Would Adopt Two Indiana Sisters.

By the Associated Press.

PRINCETON, Ind., March 21.—Several persons who have visited the hospital here where lie 35 of those injured in Wednesday's tornado, have sought to adopt Harriet McClurkin, 5 years old, and Ada McClurkin, 4, sisters, who were injured in the storm which took from them their mother. Their father was kicked to death by a horse several years ago.

The little orphans, Harriett with a broken arm, and Ada, temporarily blinded by a blow on the head, are the favorites of the hospital. Never have they cried or complained, although both little girls have suffered intensely, Miss Maud Hutchinson, head nurse, said. Dolls and toys, gifts of persons who have visited the children's room, litter their beds.

CHAPMAN FACES TRIAL FOR LIFE WITH GRIM HUMOR

Says It Will Be the Reputed "Super-Bandit" Jury Will Be Judging and Not Himself.

BURIES SELF IN BOOKS IN CELL

$1,500,000 Mail Truck Robber Is Charged With Killing Policeman in New Britain, Conn.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

HARTFORD, Conn., March 21.—"It won't be me they are trying. It will be the 'man in the iron mask'. The same way Paris turned out to glimpse him whisked through its streets to the Bastile, Hartford will turn out to see me. I won't be a real man to them. I'll just be part of the show."

That is the statement Gerald Chapman sends to the New York World and Post-Dispatch through his counsel, Frederick J. Groehl of New York, who visited him today at Wethersfield prison, four miles south of here on the west bank of the Connecticut River.

Chapman, central figure in the $1,500,000 mail truck robbery on Broadway and in a dramatic escape from the Federal penitentiary at Atlanta, stands indicted here for the murder of a policeman in the neighboring city of New Britain last October. Day after tomorrow he goes on trial in the red brick courthouse in the heart of this old town.

If the jury says "guilty" the gallows waits for him in the prison yard at Wethersfield.

He is right in anticipating intense popular interest. Already his forthcoming trial is ranked as the most memorable in the history of Connecticut. For Hartford it promises to be the most spectacular event since the October night in 1687, when the Colonists spirited the royal guarantee of their liberties out from under the nose of Sir Edmund Andos and hid it in the tree which became the Charter Oak.

All Mail Opened.

In six weeks Chapman has never breathed fresh air or felt unfiltered sunlight fall on him except for two hurried trips to the courthouse, the first to enter his formal plea of not guilty, the second to hear a motion for a change of venue argued. What exercise he gets he takes alone in a stretch of corridor between the second and third gates of the prison keep. Of all the officers and inmates of the place only the warden and a single deputy have been permitted to speak to him or approach within speaking distance.

The only other human being to have conversational access to the prisoner has been his counsel, Frederick J. Groehl of New York, whose visits necessarily have been brief and infrequent.

All mail coming for him has been opened and minutely examined by prison officials.

The reason for the extraordinary precautions with which he has been treated is his reputation. Ever since the mail truck robbery in the fall of 1921 the newspapers have habitually attached to his name the epithets of "super-criminal" and "super-bandit."

But Chapman neither sits and broods nor paces his cage like a wild beast. Shut off from the tangible world of his fellows, he buries himself in books. And his reading—as becomes a man whose physical resemblance to a scholarly recluse has been repeatedly noted—is solid reading. The volumes he borrows from the prison library are on historical topics.

Has Grim Sense of Humor.

"Even to his counsel," said Groehl, "he is not talkative. He keeps his troubles to himself. He seems to me in this case the victim of the fables which have been woven around his name, and which having reached and saturated the minds of his prospective jurors, along with all the rest of the public, must necessarily greatly impair his chances of receiving an absolutely fair and impartial trial at their hands.

"Regarding the outcome of his trial, he is coolly cynical. 'Judge,' he said to me on my latest visit, 'you've got more hope than I have. It won't be me they're trying. It will be the Super-bandit. Not only everything I've ever done but everything anybody has ever said I've done will weigh against me with the jury. The cards are stacked against me this trip'."

"And then," Groehl went on, "he surprised me by chuckling. He has a strong sense of the ludicrous. 'Judge,' he said, 'They'll be trying the super-bandit. But I'm his proxy. The only meat they've got for his gallows is Gerald Chapman, so they'll use that. Life is a funny layout.'

The same grim sense of humor also came to the surface, Groehl said, when the prisoner spoke of the young man who is his original and chief accuser, Walter Shean, scapegoat son of a wealthy and respected Springfield family. Shean was caught at the scene of the New Britain burgalry, and named Chapman as the slayer of the policeman.

Is Nearly Broke.

"The same people who swallow all super-bandit stuff find no difficulty in believing a super-bandit would pick a small-town boob like Shean to work with," was Chapman's comment. "They believe, too, that the super-bandit was blowing safes in a one-horse department store in a little mill eown. The two ideas don't fit together unless your'e good at thinking in circles."

There is one circumstance, however, in which Groehl's client finds little to amuse him. At a time when his life hangs in the balance he is all but out of funds. For preparing his defense, hunting up witnesses and retaining associate local counsel familiar with the jury panel and Connecticut court procedure he has only about $250.

"When he was arrested in Muncie late in January," Groehl explained, "he had on him a substantial sum, some $4500 or $5000. Unless adverse ownership of currency can be otherwise proved, the law presuppose that title is vested in the possessor. The postal inspectors who took charge of Chapman seized his cash along with his other personal effects. When we applied for the retunr of the money to be used in his defense against the murder charge, we found it had been subpenaed by the State as evidence for this trial. Little wonder the man is cynical. Every card in the deck is stacked against him, as he puts its."

His Alleged Crime.

The murder for which Chapman will be tried next week was done just at dawn of a Sunday morning. A New Britain stableman early at his work saw figures moving inside a department store on the main street. He notified police headquarters. Five officers answered. Two approached the front door of the establishment. Three went down the alley leading to its rear door and the livery stable.

The two in front caught a man who ran out of the store and made for a parked automobile. The three who entered the rear door saw a man at work on a battery of five safes in the store office on a mezzanine floor. They attempted to rush him. He came down the narrow stairway shooting and Officer James Skelly fell with a bullet through his lungs. The burglar dashed on through the open front door and frightened a few early risers on Main street. Nobody tried to stop him and he soon ran out of sight.

The captured marauder, according to reports at the time, was immediately taken to the hospital where Skelly had been carried in a dying state, and was there identified by the wounded policeman as the man who had fired the fatal shot.

The prisoner attempted to give an assumed name, but was soon identified as Walter Shean of Springfield. He thereupon electrified the countryside by declaring his fugitive accomplice had been none other than the notorious bandit and prisonbreaker. Chapman, he declared, had been living for several months at a hotel in Springfield under the name of Waldo W. Miller.

This announcement was at first received with scepticism, for a man who had seen the slayer run from the store brandishing his pistol was taken to New York and identified a suspect named Stuyvesant as the culprit.

Run Down in Muncie, Ind.

Stuyvesant was picked out of a lineup of 30 men by the New Britain accuser and on the strength of that identification held 10 days by the police authorities for extradition to Connecticut.

But no case was made against Stuyvesant. The Connecticut authorities set out to find Chapman, for whom postal inspectors were also looking as a fugitive from Atlanta. Two months ago he was run down in Muncie, Ind., returned to Atlanta, and early in February "loaned" to Connecticut to be tried for his clife.

Chapman has from the moment of his arrest in Mpuncie, in Januarq, denied having had any share in the New Britain affair. The actual record, aside from a commonplace conviction for grand larceny, comprises just three dramatic moments—the mail truck robbery, the escape from the prison hospital at Atlanta and the vastly more difficult and daring because unaided, departure from the town hospital at Athens, Ga., where he lay sick an weak with three bullet wounds, two through his legs and one in his kidney.

Further Discoveries at Sanctuary of Punic Venus

Heads of Seven Steles Erected to Commemorate Sacrifices to the Goddess Uncovered at Carthage.

EXCAVATION CAMP, Carthage, March 21.—Gratifying results are being obtained at the Franco-American Expedition's excavations at the Sanctuary of Tanit — The Punic Venus—where the top level of buried Carthage has now been reached.

The first careful digging in this stratum today revealed the heads of seven steles of sandstone and limestone, erected to commemorate sacrifices to the goddess with "The Face of Baal." They have not been entirely uncovered for the painstaking methods required to prevent breaking hidden objects or overlooking tiny but often important evidence of past civilization take time. Many things which otherwise would be lost are recovered by subjecting the earth dug up to a thorough sifting. Workmen are encouraged to be careful to keep on the alert by giving them small cash prizes for objects they find.

Present Status of Work.

The Punic level, which is nine feet below the present surface of the ground, has been reached only in a small portion of the plot being excavated. Rapid progress is being made in clearing away the remainder of this surface, or the "Roman" level.

The area over the Sanctuary of the Godess now available for excavation is unfortunately not more than an acre, for the land around it already has been covered with suburban residences. As a matter of fact, the ground in which the steles are being dug up already has been sold as building lots and partly covered by a house erected before the sanctuary was discovered three years ago. The expedition, which is carrying on small excavation previously made, may have to undermine or condemn the house.

A stele found yesterday which has now been completely uncovered is considered from the viewpoint of art and workmanship one of the best discovered here. Its design, which consists of a palm tree column on either side of two birds about to alight in a tree, is different from the usual decoration. Many urns also have been found which are being left to dry before examination of the contents. Similar urns found in previous excavations here contained bones which experts declare to be those of infants sacrificed to the Vampire Venus of Carthage.

Two Still Lower Stratas.

Beneath the punic level in which these have been found there remain two still lower stratas of an even older period of Carthage yet to be examined. Heavy rain and windstorms are interfering with the work.

Countess de Prorok with her baby daughter has joined the Count here, where she will remain through the season as hostess to the 20 members of the Franco-American expeditin, to whom she has already thrown open her Arab villa. She expects also to have as her guests a little later Misses Emily Smith, daughter of the Governor of New York, and Katheryn Maxwell and Lescelles Maxwell of New York.

Maj. F. C. Shorey, representing McGill University on the expedition, arrived with the Countess.

ONLY 4 OF BAKER'S 27 BILLS PASSED SO FAR BY HOUSE

Administration Program Admittedly in Bad Shape With Session of Legislature Nearing Close.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 21.—Administration bills conferring more powers on the Governor have fared badly in the House, which thus far has passed only four of the 27 bills on the administration program with the session of the Legislature rapidly nearing a close. Three of the principal measures extending the Governor's power, and in one instance increasing his control of patronage have been defeated.

The Baker legislative program is in bad shape, Republican leaders admitted today. Efforts will be made to jam some of the Governor's bills through the House early next week, in connection with the pending attempt to put the Baker tax increase bills over the hurdles. Baker this week ordered the House Republicans at least to try to pass the tax increase bills after they virtually had thrown the measures in the discard. Such of these efforts will depend largely on the response to notices sent out today by Speaker Parker to about 12 or 15 Republican representatives who have gone to their homes, to be here Monday prepared to stay the rest of the week. Present indications are the session will end about March 28.

Gov. Baker's budget bill, which would have given him a virtual dictatorship over the business management and policies of all State departments and institutions, except the courts and Legislature, was killed when an effort was made to engross it in the House. Opposition to the bill was not directed against the budget system in Government, but against provisions of the bill which centralized far-reaching powers in the hands of one personal appointee of the Governor.

Republicans to Try Again.

As first drafted the budget bill designated the Governor's private secretary as Budget Commissioner. In an effort to quiet opposition it was amended to make the chairman of the Tax Commission appointed by the Governor the Budget Commissioner. However, the bill was decisively beaten.

The House yesterday romped on the Governor's agricultural consolidation bill, which would have merged several separate agricultural departments under a commissioner of agriculture. Appointment of this commissioner, his five deputies, and all other employes, would be subject to the Governor's wishes and they could be removed any time at his pleasure. The Republican leaders hope to gain reconsideration of the vote by which the bill was defeated if they can muster enough strength next week.

The House also struck out of the appropriation bills a section designed to take out of the hands of the State Military Council the supervision of the expenditures of the Missouri National Guard, and placed that power solely in the Governor's hands, although the State law prescribes the power shall be exercised by the military council. The council is made up of the General in command of the State troops, the Adjutant-General and the commanding officers of the various regiments.

Administration Bills Passed.

Administration bills passed thus far include one limiting the traveling expenses of the State employes on official business; two bills tightening up the provisions of the law imposing 2 cents a gallon on gasoline used for motor vehicle fuel; and a bill consolidating in the Attorney-General's department some of the legal work now done by separate attorneys in the State departmente. The latter bill did not originate in the Governor's office, but was indorsed by Baker.

The bills now are in the Senate. Ten companion bills to the agricultural consolidation bill which have been engrossed, were dropped to the informal calendar after the defeat of the agricultural consolidation measure yesterday. Another bill consolidating the State Industrial Inspection Department, Bureau of Mines and Board of Boiler Rules with the Bureau of Labor Statistics was chased to the engrossment informal calendar once, when its sponsors could not show the economies claimed for the bill, but the measure finally got through to engrossment yesterday and is on the calendar for passage.

The tax bills increasing the property tax, State income and corporation franchise taxes, are at the foot of the calendar for passage.

Economy Bills Seemed Doomed.

Two Baker economy measures, abolishing State aid for teacher training courses in high schools and for payment of the county school superintendent salaries in each of the counties, still are in House Committees and now have slight chance of ever getting through even if reported out. Other bills abolishing the State Library commission and taxing public utilities one-twelfth of one per cent of their receipts for maintainence of the Public Service Commission, are caught in the legislative jam.

A Senate Democratic caucus measure, which would tighten the enforcement of the State income tax law and transfer supervision of collection of the tax from the State Auditor to the State Tax Commission has passed the Senate and is in the hands of House committee. Baker indorsed the bill, but it is being held up by the House committee apparently to enforce passage by the Senate of some of the numerous House bills already sent to the Upper House. The House committee also has indicated it would make several amendments which virtually would kill the bill.

ST. LOUIS COUNTY TO VOTE ON $5,000,000 ROAD PROGRAM

Special Election Authorized for April 28 to Pass On Proposed Bond Issue.

The St. Louis County Court yesterday authorized a special election for April 28 to take a vote on a proposed bond issue of $5,000,000 for new roads in the county and an additional $750,000 for improvements in the Courthouse.

It is proposed to tear down all but the south wing of the structure and rebuild.

The plans call for a jail on the third floor, which would do away with the jail in the present quarters.

LIQUIDATOR OF DEFUNCT HOLLAND BANK EXAMINED

John E. Cahill Denies Officers of Concern Were Favored Over Others in Settlements.

HIS ACTS APPROVED BY COURT, HE SAYS

Farris Committee to Question J. B. McCutchan About Failure of Trust Company at Gorin, Mo.

By a Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 21.—The Farris committee investigating the management of the Department of Finance under Commissioner Millspaugh today examined John E. Cahill, Millspaugh's special deputy in charge of the defunct Holland Bank of Springfield. Cahill denied that officers and former officers of the bank were favored over others when it came to settling their debts to the bank. He said all debtors were treated alike.

Six contracts in settlement of approximately $300,000 owed the bank by directors and others were placed in the record here last week, at which time Senator Hamlin of Springfield, a member of the investigating committee, expressed belief the contracts were disadvantageous to depositors.

Cahill testified that the contracts were approved "as the best possible under the circumstances" by a depositors' committee, the Greene County Circuit Court and the McDaniel National Bank of Springfield. The McDaniel Bank is directly interested in the liquidation of the Holland Bank, as it advanced 40 cents on the dollar to depositors of the latter.

Cahill Presents Testimonials.

Cahill presented affidavits from George D. McDaniel of the McDaniel Bank and the members of the depositors' committee commending his administration of the bank. The Holland Bank will receive "all or a goodly portion" of the money owed to it by the makers of the contracts, Cahill said.

The debtors also owed other parties besides the bank and had the bank sued them into bankruptcy instead of settling by contract, the bank would have received less of the debtors' assets, Cahill added.

In reply to a question, Cahill said he had never been connected with the Holland Bank, prior to his appointment last June as Deputy Finance Commissioner. At that time he was cashier of the American Savings Bank at Springfield and also conducted a small bank at Willard, Mo., near Springfield.

Other Witnesses Heard.

Other witnesses were E. N. Ferguson, chairman of the Holland Bank, Guy S. Mitchell, vice president, and J. L. Hine, a former vice president. All were indebted to the Holland Bank when it failed, Hine owing the most, $107,120. They testified they had turned over all their assets to the Holland Bank and other creditors in settlement of the debts.

Among the notes for which Ferguson settled was one for $15,000 in the name of his 27-year-old son, J. P. Ferguson, who has been in charge of subdivisions at Shreveport, La., in which his father was interested. The note was unsecured by collateral, but the father had guaranteed payment to the bank. He testified his son received none of the $15,000, the note being "accommodation paper" for the father, who received the $15,000. The Louisiana property incidentally was not turned over to the Holland Bank. Ferguson testified it went to creditors in St. Louis.

McCutchan to Be Questioned.

The investigating committee expects to hear testimony Wednesday from Jerome B. McCutchan of St. Louis regarding financial operations which preceded the failure of the Citizens' Trust Co. at Gorin, Mo., and other Missouri banks. McCutchan was a director of the Gorin Bank and also of the Interstate Casualty Co. of St. Louis, which also failed.

Subpena servers had looked for McCutchan for two weeks. After Sheriff Schuler and Frank Armstrong, Senate reporter, had failed to find him, a police watch was kept on his apartment on Eastgate avenue. Yesterday Senator Farris received a telegram from Chief of Police O'Brien notifying him that McCutchan had been served.

ILTON H. RUDOLPH DIES

Advices from Wichita, Kan., yesterday announced the death in a hospital there of Milton H. Rudolph, 64 years old, formerly of 75 Vernon avenue, superintendent of in and outbound freight of the Frisco, Rock Island and Chicago & Eastern Illinois railroads, which roads maintain a joint agency for the handling of freight traffic at 229 Biddle street.

At the Biddle street office yesterday it was said Rudolph had left St. Louis Jan. 9 for the West, a trip to regain his health. He taken to Wichita about a nth ago after being stricken train at Hutchinson, Kan. The hita dispatch said Rudolph's th followed a paralytic stroke.

Politics and Politicians

Republicans Will Try to Cultivate a Belief That Warren Was Beaten Out of Desire of Opposition to Annoy Coolidge—Party Whip Used on Both Sides.

BY CHARLES MICHELSON,
A Staff Corespondent of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The chief Republican political activity of the coming summer will be the planting of the Warren myth; that is, the cultivation of the belief that the late Ambassador to Japan and Commissioner to Mexico is a great and stainless hero who was sacrificed by a sordid and brutal coalition of Democrats and disloyal Republicans to gratify their diabolical design of annoying the President.

This thing of annoying the President is pretty much of a myth itself. Bills have been passed and bills have been defeated; men have been confirmed and men have been rejected, for reasons adequate or inadequate—but there never was a bill or a nomination that met its fate because somebody wanted to make the President unhappy.

A more prifitless undertaking than spiteing the President would be hard to think of. It it were done, nobody could brag about it; and unless it is assumed that such Democrats as Robinson, Walsh and Simmons, and such Republicans as Borah and Norris—either of whom could have had the nomination for Vice President—have the mentality and motives of schoolboys making faces at their teacher, the hypothesis cannot stand up.

The simple fact is that Mr. Coolidge chose the wrong man for Attorney-General and true to the instincts of all men in big office could not admit that there was any flaw in his infallibility. It is a safe bet that had the President read the letters that passed between Charles Beecher Warren and Henry O. Havemeyer and the record of Warren's examination before the Congressional Committee he never would have gone into history as the third President since the foundation of the country to have a Cabinet appointment turned down by the Senate.

Another safe bet would be that if there were some sort of Australian ballot system in the Senate for voting on nominees, so that the President would not have known who voted with and who against him, Warren would have received fewer than half a dozen votes instead of the 39 that went to him.

Senators Begged Coolidge Not to Submit Name.

Nearly every influential Senator begged the President not to present Warren's name the second time; that was after they had heard the letters read; yet most of them voted for him just the same.

Of course, there was politics in the struggle; but politics does not make black white. Your politician has to have something substantial to go on, particularly when he has to draw from the other party enough support to win his fight. Some of the Democrats doubtless fell in under the party lash; but, on the other hand, some of the Republicans were told that if they would shift to the President's side in this case, prospective opposition candidates for their places would be induced to withdraw so as to leave the way to renomination unobstructed.

Nevertheless, it will be presented to the country that nothing but malignant partisanship and hatred of the President prevented the bestowal on the nation of the highest type of lawyer and patriot as the head of the Government's legal department. Moreover, stranger things have happened than that this view will be accepted. The equally picturesque myth "Coolidge or chaos" was swallowed whole in the election last November. Part of what was meant by that alliterative phrase was just what happened in the Senate just adjourned—that unless Mr. Coolidge returned to the White House there would be a Congress unresponsive to executive guidance.

Vice President Dawes is going to help; for to crystallize the myth it is necessary to rub in the unworthiness of the Senate. Dawes likes the speech he made at his inaugural in which he jumped on the Senate for its rules permitting filibusters. This summer he means to repeat that speech with variations through the country. The more bricks thrown at the Senate the more easy it will be to drive home the thesis that the defeat of the President was founded in iniquity.

Incidentally, the Vice President in this way will make some amends for his absence from the Senate, which was responsible for the undoing of Warren, even if his primary purpose is only to correct what seems to him a blighting defect in the accomplishing of legislation, and his secondary idea is to prevent the country losing track of him in the dim obscurity of the vice presidency.

Doubt Whether Democrats Played Good Politics.

There was plenty of politics in the Warren episode, but there is a question raised by the experts in the game whether the Democratic part of it was good politics. It may be that Warren would have been worth more to them as part of the Republican administration in the next election than as an example of what they saved the country from. Those Havemyer-Warren letters could have been shouted from the stump with great effect when the Democratic spellbinders are telling the country how Calvin Coolidge is delivering it, bound hand and foot, to the mercy of the trusts.

Instead, the Democrats have inadvertently brought about the presence in the Cabinet of the most picturesque figure of a generation.

John Garibaldi Sargent's six and a half feet of homely personality, his trick tobacco pouch and his deceiving air of simple, rural New England ingenuousness are likely to count a whole lot with an electorate rather tired of custom-built statesmen. Like every other enterprise, an administration has to be advertised to be successful, and the placid trout fisherman of Ludlow, snatched to the glittering eminence of the Cabinet, is an appeal to the movie imagintion which is hard to beat.

The people are likely to forget Warren in their interest in the man substituted for him. Actually Warren just happens to be one of those who regard any governmental interference with business as excuseless truckling to the mob. He juggled shares and effected combines like dozens of others who saw no sin in monopoly and no evil in hamstringing a competitor in the course of building up a fortune. Any jury of trust magnates would acquit him without a stain on his character. Naturally, when he was cornered on the witness stand he shuffled and sidestepped and gave oblique answers.

None of this characterizes him as a proper man to be Attorney-General, however, and none of it will be dwelt upon when the shocked Republican statesmen are building up the myth of the martyrdom of Warren and the baiting of the President.

ALOE WILL SUPPORT AND VOTE FOR MILLER

Wires That He Has Been 'Life-Long Republican With No Wavering.'

Louis P. Aloe, former president of the Board of Aldermen, who was defeated for the Republican mayoralty nomination March 13 last by Victor J. Miller, telegraphed yesterday from Hot Springs, Ark., in response to an inquiry by the Post-Dispatch, that he would support Miller for election April 7.

Aloe said after the primary that his defeat had been brought about by the "expenditure of Ku Klux Klan money sent here from Georgia" and the failure of Collector Koeln to support him. Koeln supported former Circuit Judge J. Hugo Grimm, who ran third.

Aloe explained that he could not say then whether he would support Miller until he had inquired into the "forces" which brought about his nomination, and added that Miller had spent "10 times as much" as any other candidate.

"I have been a life-long Republican," his telegram read, "with no wavering interval of devotion to the principles of the great party and as such I will support and vote for my successful opponent, Victor J. Miller and the entire Republican ticket, at the election April 7.'

LONDON WOULD HEAR BERLIN ON SECURITY

Herriot Is Told That European Pact Under Other Conditions Would Violate Good Faith.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 21.—M. de Fleuriau, who arrived in Paris during the night, fresh from contact with the British Government as French Ambassador in London, gave Premier Herriot this evening the results of his conversations with British officials regarding the question of European security.

He informed the Premier that the British Government adheres to the idea that the German proposals for a security pact must be taken into consideration and that a previous understanding by France, Belgium and Great Britain is impracticable.

The British contention is understood to be that a previous arrangement for security by France, Great Britain and Belgium, such as M. Herriot has asked for, would be tantamount to a reflection upon the good faith of the German proposals; that the Berlin Government must first be given a chance to specify the terms which, in its judgment, would form the basis of an effective agreement.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 21.—The Havas News Agency learns from an authoritative source that the German Government is prepared to demand admission of the Reich into the League of Nations without reservations.

"If this is confirmed," adds the agency, "it will hasten the negotiations already opened with a view to solving the problem of security."

SIX CONVICTED IN CHICAGO IN SACRAMENTAL WINE CASE

Two Former Prohibition Enforcement Agents Among Those Accused of Conspiracy.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Two former prohibition agents, a millionaire sacramental wine dealer and three other men were found guilty of conspiracy to violate the prohibition act through abuse of the sacramental wine privilege, by a jury's verdict returned today before Federal Judge Cliffe.

Parry Ex, the wine dealer; Bernard Rumps, and Albert Bennett, the former prohibition agents, and Max Gerber, Herman Schiffman and Charles Koenigsberg, lieutenants of Ex, were the men convicted.

The investigation begun last fall led Federal investigators into evidence of false withdrawal permits which resulted in the arrest of the two agents. Evidence of at least one of the fake congregations in the name of which sacramental wine was withdrawn and distributed was produced at the trial.

DEMOCRATS IN PLATFORM PLEDGE BUSINESS RULE

City Administration Free From Spectacular Is Promised in Document on Which Igoe Stands.

The platform of the Democratic party, upon which its candidates will seek election April 7, pledges an efficient business administration, free from the spectacular, and emphasizes the "well-poised statesmanship" and calm judgment of William L. Igoe, the party's candidate for Mayor. A Mayor, Comptroller and 14 members of the Board of Aldermen will be chosen at the April election.

The central theme of the entire document is that the party pledges and Igoe's past record guarantee a safe, sound and efficient administration of the city's affairs. It points out that it is just a business task with nothing of the spectacular about it.

"The situation at this time appeals to the calm, serious thought of every good citizen," it reads, and later declares that Igoe's career of four years in the House of Delegates and eight years in Congress has been one of "sensible, sane conduct, based upon good judgment from an understanding of the needs of both his city and the nation."

"Spoilsmen Must Go."

A significant pledge, of interest to the army of 7000 city employes, is that no city employe will be removed from his position for political reasons, but that "the spoilsmen, the inefficient, the wasteful and the arrogant must go." It adds that those who hold their positions by reason of their experience and efficiency, who are now serving "because the machine required some balance to secure a proper function of government," will be retained.

Comment on the Republican platform, published yesterday, is made only in the instance wherein mention is made of the Ku Klux Klan. Of it, the platform says:

"The statement in the latest Republican platform, that "almost every Protestant Christian, white, native-born person who offers himself for public office is charged with being of or affiliated with the Ku Klux Klan," is a crafty and covert appeal for the support of that organization. By cunning indirection, it has thus brought into this campaign the false issue of the Ku Klux Klan, which means race antagonisms and religious intolerance. It seems to court the support of those whom it supposes to be allied to the tenets of that secret and un-American organization. If it means to make the principles of that orginzation an issue in this campaign, we accept the challenge and will appeal to the intelligent, sober-minded and tolerant citizens of this city to, at once and forever, stamp out that sort of false patriotism."

Law Enforcement Issue.

The principal plank of the Republican platform, law enforcement, is briefly dismissed with "a solemn pledge to the people of St. Louis that every law which the Mayor's official power enables him to enforce, or to have enforced, will be executed fully, impartially, and invariably, without respect to personal or political influence.

It is charged that the representatives of the Republican party have not rendered satisfactory service in the last 12 years, the period of Mayor Kiel's three administrations.

The control of municipal affairs by the Republican party for 16 years, with no minority representation for ten years, is pointed out with the observation that "never was official opposition so needed in St. Louis as now, when the Republican party has complete control of the city government, without minority representation of any kind. Notwithstanding their complete control of the city's affairs and undivided responsibility for legislation and administration, the representatives of this party have not rendered satisfactory service."

Assails Municipal Waste.

"For 12 years every necessary advantage our people should enjoy has been permitted, if not encouraged to depreciate, by those in charge of the municipal government," the platform says. "The burdens of taxation have increased; smoke almost smothers us and our estreets are disgracefully dilapidated, and there has been waste and mismanagement in the municipal departments."

The platform pledges studious care of tax assessments and expenditures; furtherance of the city's business dealings and travel commensurate with its aspirations; amplification of recreation grounds; capable adjustment by efficient officials of such problems as expansion of the city limits; ways and means to utilize the municipal bridge; the local transportation facilities; Judges of high character for the City Courts, with vigorous prosecution of all offenders against city ordinances; appointment of a commission of architects and engineers to develop the design of the Memorial [illegible] as approved by the voters; cheerful conformity with the intent of the charter in the matter of a non-political civil service in the selection of employes; and a candidate for Mayor who will build for the city and not to further personal ambitions and will administer its affairs with calm, well-tempered judgment strengthened by the advice of all classes of citizens."

The personal platform of Igoe, pledging an economical, efficient and nonpartisan administration of the city, is made a part of the party platform.

WATCH DOG KILLED, SO THIEVES TAKE TURKEY OFF PORCH

Owner Certain Crooks Poisoned Animal in Order to Work Unmolested.

Today the Frank Maginns will serve sandwiches at dinner, provided they can find anything to make sandwiches with. Not that the Maginns are mean and frugal livers. Not at all, and quite the contrary. The Maginns contemplated a turkey today, and had gone as far as buying one weighing 10 pounds. But the Maginns made the great mistake of leaving it in a basket hanging on their back porch, at 5566 Maple avenue, and about 8:30 last night some pirate came along and eloped with it.

This followed less than a week after the poisoning of the Maginn collie, which crawled into the back yard last Sunday, laid down and died.

"I have my own theory as to this dog poisoning and turkey business," said Maginn last night. "Some crooks, and I think they're crooks right in this neighborhood, poisoned my dog, who was a great watch-dog, so they could come and steal from me. They would never have got my turkey if my dog had been alive. And the mean part is they waited to take the turkey until the stores were closed and tomorrow we'll have to eat sandwiches—provided we can find anything to make sandwiches with.

"My dog hasn't been the only dog poisoned in this neighborhood Other dogs have been poisoned. If we catch the crooks who poisoned that dog I'm in favor of hanging them."

POLICEMAN HELD FOR THE CORONER AFTER KILLING YOUTH

Probationary Patrolman J. E. Koons Says F. E. Hanneman Jr. Attacked Him With Crank Handle.

Probationary Patrolman Joseph E. Koons of the Mounted District was suspended by his commanding officer yesterday afternoon after he had shot and killed Frederick W. Hanneman Jr., 22 years old, of 5461 Robin avenue. He is held for the Coroner.

The killing followed an encounter of Koons and young Hanneman in a gasoline filling station at 5636 West Florissant avenue. In suspending Koons, Capt. Hanna, commanding the Mounted District, declared that from the evidence available it appeared the policeman had fired in self-defense.

Koons was off duty at the time of the shooting and had gone to the station in civilian clothes from his home at 4707 Beacon street, to have some ignition points tested. When he entered the station Hanneman was there purchasing some piston rings.

"He didn't say a word when I came in," said Koons, who is 27 years old. "He just rushed me and swung at me. I dodged, but his fist struck me on the forehead. I shoved him away, but he picked up an auto crank handle and came for me. Then I drew my revolver and fired one shot."

The bullet struck Hanneman in the heart. Edward Mueller, in charge of the station, told the police his back was turned and he did not know there was a disturbance until he heard the shot. He said when Hanneman fell he still had the crank handle in his grasp.

SALARY INCREASE MEASURES FACE DEFEAT IN SENATE

JEFFERSON CITY, March 21.—St. Louis representatives who introduced 24 salary bills in the House, which would add about $925,000 a year to the expenses of the City of St. Louis, have been working hard to get the pay bills through the House, and have succeeded in sending 15 of them over to the Senate. But none of the bills have been passed in the Senate and some of them probably will die on the Senate calendars.

Six other bills helping along "the boys back home," who draw pay from the city, have been engrossed in the House and are on the calendar for third reading and final passage. The remainder of the St. Louis pay and job creating bills are waiting engrossment and may have trouble getting through.

Speaker Jones Parker has been the most active of the St. Louis delegation in putting through the salary measures for St. Louisans. His name was signed to 16 of the 24 bills.

Representatives E. G. Davidson and Ittel each appeared on seven salary bills. Representatives Huber, Papke, Schneider, Chouteau, Moberg, Goodenough and Riedinger each joined in a few.

St. Louis salary and job bills passed by the House include the police pay bill, carrying an increase of $715,000 a year; four of the circuit attorney's increases for employes in the recorder's office, the court house janitors, circuit clerk, probation officers, coroner and all of his staff and proposed additions, clerks of the St. Louis court for criminal causes, and the St. Louis Court of Criminal Correction, and a measure creating three new circuit judgeships.

HADLEY VOICES NEED OF BETTER LOCAL POLITICS

Forecasts Scope of Government Institute in Which Washington U. Will Act With Women's League.

With the possible exception of the "old South" no section of America so greatly needs instruction in good government and politics so the region tributary to St. Louis, Chancellor Hadley of Washington University told the Post-Dispatch yesterday in discussing the Second Annual Institute of Government and Politics in which the university is to co-operate with the League of Women Voters this week. The institute sessions will be held at Hotel Statler, beginning at 10 a. m. Tuesday morning and continuing through Thursday, when the school closes with a dinner at 7 p. m.

Great Need for Instruction.

"This may not be a pleasant or popular statement," Chancellor Hadley continued, "but statistics which test political and educational standards show that in Southern Missouri, Southern Illinois, Western Tennessee and Kentucky, Arkansas, Louisiana, Mississippi, Oklahoma and Texas there is greater need for educational and political progress than in any other section of America, with the possible exception of the old South."

"Washington University is not trying to take part in politics, but we do feel that only good can come from such an exposition and discussion of public questions as is proposed in this school, and by setting up correct standards by which the people can properly pass upon men and measures.

"Last year's experience and the program arranged for this year have convinced the university that this enterprise is of real value and should be continued. We hope to make it, with the continued co-operation of the League of Women Voters, an Institute of American Politics and Government of importance not only to this section, but to the entire country.

To Stress City Election.

Chancellor Hadley forecast, briefly, the scope of the coming Institute.

"On account of the city election and the questions affecting education involved that subject is given special emphasis in the program at the request of the League of Women Voters," he explained. "Paul C. Packer, dean of the College of Education at the University of Iowa and one of the recognized leaders in educational work in this country, will discuss educational questions together with Dr. Frank L. Wright and Prof. Forrest E. Long of Washington University and E. M. Grossman," he explained.

"Former Gov. Charles S. Whitman of New York will deal with problems of law enforcement and observance. No one in this country is better qualified to do this. As District Attorney in New York City he conducted the most notable and successful prosecution of criminals that this country has known, when he convicted Police Lieutenant Webber and four gunmen of murder in the first degree, and as Governor saw to it that the sentence was carried out. As chairman of the Committee on Law Enforcement of the American Bar Association for the last two years he has made a special study of this problem including a personal investigation of the processes of the English and French courts. The report of his committee is accepted as an authoritative statement on this subject. Gov. Whitman will also speak before the Bar Association. Discussion of this subject will also be participated in by Mr. A. V. Lashly, director of the survey now being conducted in this State by Judge John W. Calhoun of the Circuit Court.

"Dr. Harold G. Moulton, former head of the Department of Economics of the University of Chicago, for several years director of the Institute of Economics at Washington, D. C., and vice-president of the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government, will discuss problems of economics and particularly the Dawes plan.

"Dr. Thomas H. Reed, head of the department of political science, University of Michigan, with Judge Henry S. Caulfield, Prof. Charles E. Cullen, Chester E. Rightor of the Detroit Bureau of Government Research, and Mr. Felix E. Gunn, Deputy Comptroller of St. Louis, will discuss the question of municipal government; while Dr. U. B. Phillips, professor of American history, University of Michigan, will deal with historical questions of special interest to St. Louis.

"All of these men are recognized leaders in their several lines of work and I feel that their views will be of particular interest and value to the people of St. Louis at this time."

The program has been arranged by a committee consisting of Dr. Thomas M. Marshall, Dr. Everett S. Lyon and Dr. Arnold L. Lien, representing Washington University, and Mrs. Fred J. Taussig, Mrs. Henry Hopkins, Miss Lola Fuchs, Mrs. Frederic Arnstein and Mrs. Evarts Graham, on the part of the League of Women Voters.

F. A. THORNTON, ON ST. LOUIS U. FACULTY 19 YEARS, DIES

Complications Following Nervous Breakdown Cause Death; Funeral Tomorrow.

Prof. Francis A. Thornton, until last September professor of economics at St. Louis University, died yesterday at his home, 1717 Belleview avenue, Richmond Heights. Complications which followed a nervous breakdown early in December caused his death at the age of 51 years.

Prof. Thornton was born in St. Louis and educated at St. Louis and Washington universities. He was on the faculty of St. Louis University for 19 years and was one of the organizers of that university's School of Commerce and Finance. He resigned as secretary of the school last September when he organized Thornton Institute, a downtown evening school of commerce and finance. He was engaged in writing a textbook on economics when he became ill in December.

Funeral services will be held at 9 a. m. tomorrow from St. Luke's Catholic Church, Richmond Heights, with interment in Calvary Cemetery. Prof. Thornton is survived by his wife, Mrs. Stella M. Thornton, four sons, Hamilton, John, James and Edward Thornton, and a daughter, Miss Stella M. Thornton.

MOTHER HELD FOR BEATING SON

Chicago Woman Put Under Year's Probation After Boy Goes Home.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Jackie Nelson, who has been Assistant State's Attorney Marie O. Anderson's guest for the last two weeks, was returned to his parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. Arnold Nelson, today in the Court of Domestic Relations. Mrs. Nelson, who assumed responsibility for the beatings inflicted upon her son, was put under a year's probation.

Mrs. Ida Anderson testified that Jackie had once walked more than five miles to her home to avoid being beaten. In the two weeks that Miss Anderson was Jackie's "mother," she has developed a philosophy of children. She told how kindness held the boy to her home and how a reward for good behavior kept him from doing things little boys shouldn't do.

DOCTOR, DRUG ADDICT, ENDS LIFE BY HANGING IN CELL

J. A. McAllister, 42, Was Held By East St. Louis Police On Bad Check Charge.

Dr. J. A. McAllister, 42 years old, drug addict, who had served four penitentiary terms, was found dead hanging to a belt he had fastened about his neck in a cell in the East St. Louis police station at 1 a. m. yesterday. McAllister kicked a stool from beneath his feet after he attached the other end of his belt to bars above his head.

He was being held by the police for investigation on a charge of passing worthless checks. Inquiry failed to confirm this, however and the police are at a loss to understand why McAllister surrendered for investigation. He claimed to have been a graduate of Rush Medical College, class of 1904.

What will happen on the home-stretch?

THE history of the race track is a story of victories by fine blooded horses. It is always a thoroughbred that thrills his owner by coming through on the home-stretch to win.

And there is a similar story of success in the garden. It's the purebred seeds which reward the gardener with a full and complete harvest.

For blood will tell in the garden just as it tells on the race track. Purebred stock has the "stuff"—the vitality and quality which makes it start with vigor and finish a winner instead of an also ran.

Plant Ferry's purebred Seeds because they have a purebred ancestry. The sound, flavorful vegetables you gather—the fragrant flowers that cheer you will prove that it pays to put your faith in these seeds.

We know the history of our seeds. For sixty-nine years we have watched the ideal parent plants, roguing out undesirables, selecting the finest for harvest. Then after each harvest we test these seeds in our great proving grounds to observe their trueness to type.

Look to Ferry's purebred Seeds as the means to a paying garden. Buy them now "at the store around the corner" from the familiar Ferry Box. Plant them with the same faith that you have in the sun and rain and soil.

Free Soap from Trees!

THE only oils in Palmolive Soap are the priceless beauty oils from these three trees—and no other fats whatsoever.

That is why Palmolive Soap is the natural color that it is—for palm and olive oils, nothing else, give Palmolive its green color. It is nature's formula to keep that schoolgirl complexion.

Wash, cleanse, launder with any soap you wish. But when beauty is at stake, use Palmolive, the soap made to protect it.

Dear Madam—

Present the coupon below to your dealer. Accept from him please, at our expense, an extra cake of Palmolive Soap with the purchase of three cakes. The coupon entitles you to this special offer.

The clear, fresh skins you see everywhere today prove Palmolive results . . . a soap made by beauty experts—more than merely soapmakers—to foster fine complexions. 60 years of study stand behind it.

Nothing is hidden in Palmolive Soap. There is nothing to hide. Men don't paint nature in order to improve it. The only secret to Palmolive is its blending. And that is judged one of the world's priceless beauty secrets.

Now, in justice to yourself, accept this special offer. Present the coupon below to your dealer. He will give you one extra cake of Palmolive Soap free with the three cakes you purchase.

Then note Palmolive results on your own skin—and your children's. See what a difference even a few days will make.

BENJAMIN R. DYSART, 92, SERIOUSLY ILL AT MACON, MO.

Attorney Is Said to Be Only Survivor of Constitutional Convention of 1875.

Harry T. Turner of 1206 Temple place yesterday received word of the serious illness of his brother-in-law, Benjamin R. Dysart, an attorney of Macon, Mo., who is now 92 years old and said to be the only survivor of the constitutional convention of 1875.

Turner was informed that Dysart could not survive long, having contracted severe pneumonic trouble. He is an uncle of Thomas N. Dysart of 47 Westmoreland place, vice president of the William R. Compton and American Trust companies.

Dysart, for more than 50 years, has been identified with legal affairs of North Missouri. He is, in all probability, his relatives say, the only living person who heard Missouri's distinguished Senator, Thomas Benton, speak. He many times told with pride of having heard Benton talk at Bloomington, Mo., which was then the county seat of Macon County.

Illinois Tree 104 Feet Tall.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHAMPAIGN, Ill., March 21.—The largest tree in the State of Illinois is in the Broomfield Woods, several miles northeast of here, according to Robert B. Miller, State Forester. The tree, which is a burr oak, is 104 feet in height and measures 25¾ feet in circumference 4½ feet from the ground.

You just KNOW he's Well
You just know he's NOT Well

You, too, can have this snappy, happy, healthy look

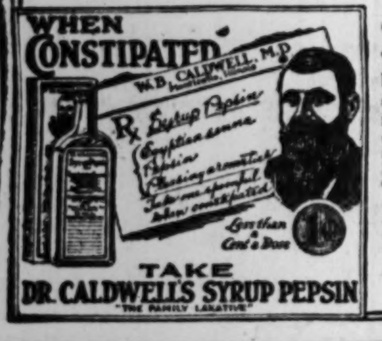
There is no reason for you to look or feel this way

CONSTIPATION means WEAKNESS

Constipation is practically universal among civilized human beings. It is a national curse causing inefficiency and physical unpreparedness. It causes disease, premature old age, lessens endurance and resistance, and many times fatal illness is directly traceable to its obnoxious results. The clear eye, healthy look, vim, vigor and vitality can be had only when the bowels are free and are moving regularly.

Dr. Caldwell's
SYRUP PEPSIN
The Family Laxative

—promptly relieves constipation. It is not a bitter medicine nor a griping, nauseating, uncomfortable physic. It is a pleasing liquid combination of Egyptian senna, pepsin and aromatics that Dr. Caldwell, with his long and extensive practice, found effective and an aid to Nature in performing her proper functions when the bowels were mistreated through improper food, lack of exercise, and indifference to physical sanitation.



Gently Restores The Bowels To Health

The first dose will gently ease the bowels to action and as Nature resumes her proper functions, the dose may be gradually decreased. Your bowels should act at least twice daily. If they do not, you need Dr. Caldwell's Syrup Pepsin. 10,000,000 bottles sold annually prove its effectiveness. Used nationally over 30 years.

It is sold everywhere medicine is sold—and guaranteed. Try it at our risk. Your druggist will return your money if it fails to do as promised.

STUDIES IN NUDE IN PRIVATE SCHOOL STIRRING ENGLAND

Objections Made to Mixed Bathing and Romps Out-of-Doors Without Clothing.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

LONDON, March 10.—Revelations regarding a sort of modern "Babes in the Wood" school, in which children of both sexes are reputed to be allowed, even encouraged to run about the grounds naked, have stirred British educational and social workers and a heated controversy is raging regarding the desirability of a curriculum including study of the nude in co-educational establishments.

The school is at Walsham-le-Willows, Suffolk, and is conducted by Maj. Theodore J. Faithfull, a veterinary surgeon, and his wife. It is a "private school" and the Government Board of Education claims it has no jurisdiction over it, but officials admit they have heard of its "study of the nude" methods.

Bathe Together.

Maj. Faithfull flatly denied that his pupils were in the habit of running about naked, pointing out that such a thing would be impossible in England, if only for climatic reasons, but he admitted that, in summer, the pupils indulged in mixed bathing, followed by romps and exercises in the sun—and that bathing costumes were not permitted. Also at the art classes, conducted by Mrs. Faithfull, it was customary for a boy and girl pupil to disrobe, so that their fellow-students could sketch them in the nude and receive lessons in anatomy.

This admission is mainly responsible for the press and public outcry and efforts are being made to stir up the local education authorities to some sort of action. Maj. Faithfull says he is educating his pupils on "psychological" lines and denounces public criticism as due to "silly modesty."

"Children, by seeing each other without clothes," he declares, "learn to ignore the differences of sex as they are generally understood. It is the only way to give children the proper perspective of sex and I have found, after many years of biological and psychological study, that it is best to go straight to nature. As for the summer bathing and romping on the banks of the pool naked, the children get sunbaths, which are the best thing in the world for their physical health."

The Priory Gate School, as the Faithfull establishment is called, is in large, woody grounds and the "forest life" idea is encouraged, the children being divided into groups, called "elves," "woodlings" and "trackers." There are 26 pupils, ranging in age from 6 to 16, of whom six are girls, the eldest being 14. They are mostly the children of parents living abroad and it is contended by critics that if such were not the case decent parents would not permit their offspring to remain at such an establishment.

Maj. Faithfull explains that he started his school at Sunbury, Middlesex, about four years ago, with his own five children, and numerous parents were so much impressed by his methods that he had to take his present larger premises.

"The outcry against my nude classes is ridiculous," he says. "Life is a natural thing and nudity is only shameful because we have made it so. Under our method children make quicker progress with their studies than they do at ordinary schools, because those questions, or complexes, which arise in their minds with regard to sex are thoroughly explained to them.

Few Rules.

"I also believe that children develop more happily and more healthily if the sexes are together. Many ruined lives and unhappy marriages can be traced to these early misunderstandings. We have as few rules as possible and believe to a large extent in a 'go-as-you-please' form of education. The pupils select what subjects they would like to study at any particular time."

Numerous educational experts and social workers are arguing for and against the Faithfull methods, the consensus being that the nudity phases are undesirable and immodest. One local tradesman removed his son from the school on account of the nude studies, but another parent living in the neighborhood heartily indorsed Maj. Faithfull's claims and expressed satisfaction over the progress made by her son.

Normally the living conditions of the children would be regarded as ideal, for the school is a fine, large airy building with admirable grounds. The Faithfulls teach the children no political creed and they all attend the local village church on Sundays. The vicar, while expresing general disapproval of the nude studies and holding the belief that Maj. Faithfull's theories were mistaken, declined to enter into the controversy, admitting he had no other grounds for complaint, or any reason to interfere with the conduct of the establishment.

WOMAN COUNSEL FOR HUSBAND IN FEDERAL COURT HEARING

Mrs. A. H. Montgomery Represents Former Operator of Finance Firm On Fraud Charge.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Mrs. Austin H. Montgomery, small and dark haired, appeared yesterday as counsel for her husband. He is on trial in Federal Court on charges of misuse of the mails in connection with the failure of the Community Finance Co., alleged "blind pool," which failed two years ago for $1,300,000. George Z. Medalie is his attorney.

Mrs. Montgomery before her marriage was Miss Augusta Schwartz. She was the second woman attorney admitted to practice in the Federal Courts. Mrs. Montgomery's brother, Henry L. Schwartz, also is a defendant. There are eight other defendants, including Montgomery's father, who never have been apprehended. Montgomery is held in $75,000 bail, which he has been unable to raise.

Yesterday developed favorable testimony for Montgomery. Louis S. Gleischman, office manager of the former New York Stock Exchange firm of Miller & Co., said Montgomery had a room, at a branch of that former firm, put through orders for 75,000 shares of stock and met margin requirements as high as $100,000. The Government charges that Montgomery made false representations of his "connections."

BROWNS DEFEAT BROOKLYN, 3-0, IN TEN-INNING BATTLE

Cards Get 16 Hits and Win, 12 to 1

Kunz and Fowler Pounded by Rickey's Men in Easy Victory Over Oakland Coast League Team.

From a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

OAKLAND, Cal., March 21.—Pounding Earl Kunz, a former Pirate and Chester Fowler, the young left-hander, who was with the club for a time last fall for 16 safeties, the Cardinals defeated the local Pacific Coast League club here today, 12 to 1. Leo Dickerman pitched the first six innings for Rickey and permitted but four safeties. Frank Frankhouse, who replaced him, gave three in the last three rounds.

Tommy Thevenow, who is making a bid for the shortstop berth, continued his good hitting today. He singled his first two trips to the plate. Rogers Hornsby and Jim Bottomley came out of their swatting slumps, each poling a triple.

Thevenow Drives in Run.

Thevenow drove in the first run of the contest in the second round, when he singled Gonzales across. The Cuban catcher, making his first appearance in a game this season, singled and reached second on a wild pitch. The fourth was the big round. In this five runs were produced as a result of five hits, and three bases on balls.

A single by Douthit, Hornsby's triple and an infield out gave two more in the sixth. In the eighth, Bottomley tripled with the bases full and scored himself when Bell singled.

The lone run for the Oaks came in the fifth, on a pass to Rees, an infield out and a double by Lafayette, who pounded out three safeties during the clash. The run came off Dickerman.

In the ninth inning, Taylor Douthit and Howard Freigau collided, chasing pinch-hitter Good's drive, and for a time it looked as if Freigau was seriously injured. But for Douthit's leaping over him, it is likely that Freigau would have suffered serious injuries. As it was, Freigau was only temporarily dazed. Douthit made the catch.

The teams are scheduled to play again tomorrow.

This Was Easy.

MUELLER STARS AS CARDINALS' SECONDS BEAT SACRAMENTO

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

STOCKTON, Cal., March 21.—The Cardinals' second team won from the Yannigans of the Sacramento (Coast League) club here today, 10 to 8, in a game featured by ragged pitching and the hitting of "Heinie" Mueller, of the Cardinals, who obtained two singles, a double, home run and walk in five trips to the plate. Mueller drove in four of the 10 St. Louis runs.

Roettger played a nice game in left field and handled six putouts faultlessly. Ullman, the young catcher from Hollywood, made two singles.

OWN AND BINSLEY TAKE SECOND PLACE IN A. B. C. DOUBLES

By the Associated Press.

BUFFALO, N. Y., March 21.—Bowlers from Toledo, O., furnished the high scores today in the two-man and individual events of the A. B. C. tournament and also won a place among the high 10 for all-events.

Charles Brown, Toledo, who topped 697 pins for his three games in the five-man event last night, continued his sensational rolling in the doubles this afternoon, scoring and with Jack Binsley took second place. Their total for the three games is 1258 pins.

A Milwaukee pair also placed among the two-man leaders today, ler and A. Yuhnke tying for with a total of 1235 pins.

Nurmi Regains Form and Wins 1 1-8 Mile Race

Finn Shows No Ill Effects From His Recent Illness.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Paavo Nurmi, Finland's super athlete, running his first race since his collapse in Madison Square Garden, Tuesday night, easily won the mile and one-eighth special at the Post-office clerks' games, in the 69th Regiment Armory, tonight. His time for the distance was 4:59, which was 3 1-5 seconds slower than his own world's record for that distance.

The peerless Finn was not pushed at any time during the race, winning by more than 75 yards from Andy Craw, running unattached. Gunnar Nilson, Finnish-American A. C., was third. Nurmi ran easily and showed no effects of his recent illness.

Plant Sets Record.

Willie Plant, Morningside A. C. star and premier walker, broke the world's record in the one and one-half mile handicap walk, one of the feature events in the Post-office Clerks' games in the Sixty-ninth Regiment Armory here tonight, when he made the distance in 10:05 3-5 seconds, clipping 2-5 of a second off the mark established by George Goulding of Canada in Brooklyn on March 1, 1912.

Allen Helffrich, Penn State's star performer, loafed through to an easy victory in the 800-yard run, negotiating the distance in 2:02 3-5 Sid Leslie, New York A. C., was second, and James J. Connolly, former Georgetown athlete, placed third. Jack Sellers, New York A. C., and Walter Mulvihill, Holycross, completed the field.

Lloyd Hahan, Boston A. A. miler, won the mile special in 4:21 3-5. Leo Larrivee, Holy Cross, was second, with Willie Goodwin, New York A. C., third. Hahn won by 15 yards.

KINSELLA WINNER IN SQUASH EVENT FINAL

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Walter Kinsella again won the world's open squash title this afternoon by defeating John Jacobs, professional at the Harvard Club, in the final round of the annual tournament at the Fraternity Club in three straight games. The score was 15-6; 15-6; 15-12.

Kinsella, who first gained his world's honors in squash in 1914, retained his title in 43 minutes.

Elign High Wins Title.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

URBANA, Ill., March 21.—Playing a strong game throughout, Elgin High captured the Illinois State high school championship tonight by winning over Champaign High, 25 to 17. Third place honors went to Canton High by virtue of a 33 to 17 win over Marion High. Last season, Elgin High also won the State championship.

4 New Marks Are Set in Valley Meet

Nebraska Is Winner, With Kansas Second and Missouri Third—Pikers Place in but Two Events.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 21.—Four records were broken and two tied in the annual Missouri Valley Conference indoor champion track and field meet here tonight. Nebraska won the title, with Kansas second and Missouri third. The pole vault, the final event of the meet, decided the winner.

Washington University of St. Louis placed in but two events. Hageman gaines fourth place in the high jump, in which Poor and Graham, representing Kansas, tied the Valley standard of 6 feet 3¼ inches. McDonald of the Pikers tied for second in the pole vault.

The first record to fall came in the mile run, when Ralph Kimport of the Kansas Aggies negotiated the distance in 4 minutes and 25 4-5 seconds. The previous mark was established by Pittenger of Missouri last season. In gaining the victory, Kimport beat a field of 14 starters.

Richerson Sets Record.

Doss Richerson, the Tiger star, established a mark of 46 feet, 10 1-8 inches in winning the shot put. The former mark was 45 feet, 1 3-4 inches, made by Bradley of Ames in the 1922 meet.

Palzer of the Kansas Aggies established a mark of 9 minutes, 37 1-5 seconds fo rthe two mile run, while the Nebraska mile relay team hung up a standard of 3 minutes, 29 2-5 seconds. Weir of Kansas tied the 50-yard low hurdle record of 6 seconds.

The Washington U. relay team, running against Grinnell in its heat, was defeated. The time was more than eight seconds behind that made by Nebraska in winning over Kansas.

Huskers Win Five Firsts.

The points were apportioned as follows: Nebraska 30, Kansas 29, Missouri 23, Kansas Aggies 13, Grinnell 8, Oklahoma 7, Washington 3, Drake 2 and Ames 1.

When the pole vault, the final event was started, Kansas was leading the Huskers, 29 to 28. In the vault, Nebraska gained two points as a result of a tie for second, while the Jayhawkers failed to place. Nebraska accounted for five firsts, Kansas took three and Missouri two.

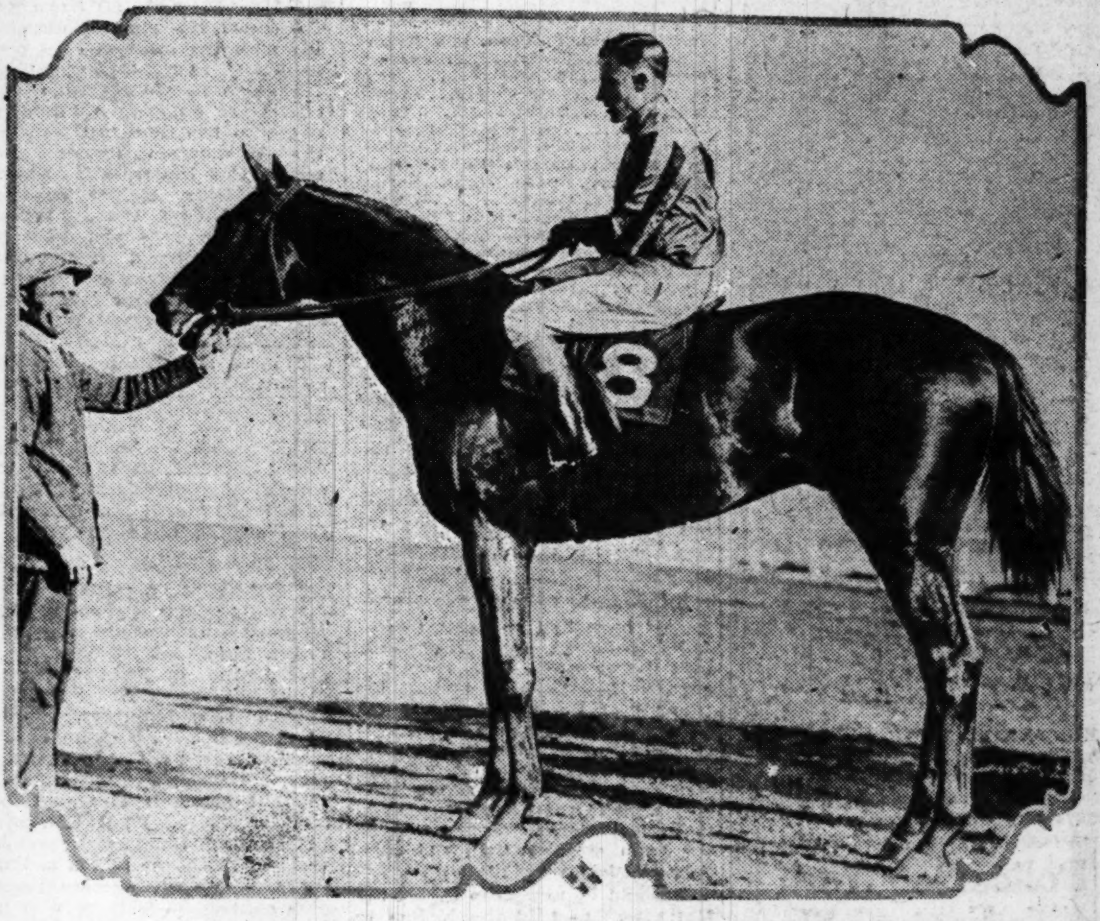
PIKER STUDENTS WANT JOHNSON RE-ENGAGED

Students of Washington University, dissatisfied with the recent announcement that Vincent Johnson, swimming coach, would not be re-engaged for next year, are circulating a petition requesting the university authorities to reconsider their decision.

Johnson has coached the Pikers for two seasons and Washington has captured the conference tank championship both years.

Winner of One Derby, Well-Backed to Win Another



HEDGEFENCE.

This good three-year-old also has a fine chance to win the $50,000 Coffroth Handicap, next Sunday. He won the Tia Juana Derby for his owner, Mrs. Payne Whitney. Joseph L. McAtee is in the saddle.

Hedgefence to Get Severe Test In $50,000 Coffroth Handicap

Next Sunday's Race Will Show Whether Mrs. Whitney's Fine Colt Has Real Derby Caliber—Tia Juana Derby Winner Has Started Only Four Times.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

TIA JUANA, Mex., March 21.—What will Hedgefence, the Tia Juana Derby winner, do in the $50,000 Coffroth Handicap here, next Sunday, is the question most frequently asked among racing folk here, today.

Mrs. Payne Whitney's handsome son of Whisk Broom II already has won over a big following here. Although in all his career he has been to the post but four times, it is conceded that if he makes a good showing against the many older horses he will be asked to defeat, next Sunday, he will rival Quatrain for favoritism in the Kentucky Derby.

If Hedgefence should win the Kentucky event, the winter book will receive another lacing such as that which followed the victory of Black Gold, last year. Hedgefence opened at 60 to 1 in the winter books and was nibbled at slowly until he hit the 40 to 1 mark. Then came the Tia Juana Derby and the victory of Hedgefence in this event sent his price down to 20 to 1, where it remains today.

His race in the local Derby, the first on the continent this year, by the way, made such an impression on the bookies that he is only 6 to 1 in the advance betting on the Coffroth Handicap.

Osprey and the great Chilhowee, older horses, naturally have the call. They were at 4 to 1 today.

Hedgefence will probably be in at light weight next Sunday, and Chilhowee and Osprey will be giving away plenty of actual weight. Even with the weight allowance, a victory for Hedgefence would be a great achievement. Besides the horses named, such other good ones as Phulsa, Cherry Pie, Sunspero, Lucky Play, Spic and Span, Cherry Tree, Little Chief General Thatcher and others will probably go to the post.

Did Not Race as 2-Year-Old.

Hedgefence never was sent to the post as a 2-year-old. He is a big, strong horse and all the better for the fact that he did not begin racing until he was a fully matured colt. All his starts have been at this track. His first race was a six-furlong affair. Carrying 110 pounds he romped over Romany Rye, Olivia Rockford and others in 1:12 4-5. That the clockers knew all about Hedgefence in advance of his first race was shown by the odds, approximately 1 to 10 being laid against him.

His next start was at one mile and he lost in 1:39, after being messed around at the start. He closed like a big train in the stretch to finish third.

His third race was at one and one-sixteenth miles. Carrying 118 pounds he showed the way to a fair field in 1:46 3-5, closing with a tremendous rush in the stretch, coming from fourth place to win by one-half a length.

His fourth start was in the Tia Juana Derby, which he ran in 1:55 2-5, close to the track record, without even being extended.

The Coffroth Handicap will not only test his derby quality but, if he wins, it will make him the leading money earned of 1925. With this purse to his credit his winnings for the season thus far would approach $60,000.

Gould and Wear Lose Title Match

Cutting Brothers Are Winners in Court Tennis Final in 5 Sets.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Cutting Brothers, C. Suydam and Fulton of New York, won the national court tennis doubles championship this afternoon, defeating Jay Gould of New York, and Joseph W. Wear of Philadelphia, who had held the title for six years. The scores were 6—4, 6—4, 0—6, 2—6, 6—2.

The Cuttings took the first two sets after a hard battle, but Gould and Weir swept the third for a love score and also won the fourth. The Cuttings rallied in the next, snatching the title with a 6—2 set.

The match was played on the courts of the Racquet and Tennis Club.

Deardorff Wins City Cue Title

Victor Makes Strong Finish in Final Block to Defeat Kirk.

Making a garrison finish, Eugene Deardorff last night defeated Harry Kirk in the city amateur three-cushion championship final at Peterson's hall. The total score for the two blocks was Deardorff 100—6—158; Kirk 95—7—157.

Kirk started the evening's play with a lead of 12 points, which forced Deardorff to score 62 points to Kirk's 35 for the evening's play. Deardorff's 62 points were amassed in 84 innings.

TILDEN BEATS RICHARDS IN STRAIGHT SETS IN SOUTHEASTERN FINAL

By the Associated Press.

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., March 21.—William T. Tilden II of Philadelphia, national tennis champion, won the Southeastern tennis championship this afternoon at the Florida Country Club when he defeated Vincent Richards of Yonkers, N. Y., in three straight sets.

The scores were 7—5, 6—1, 6—4. In the first set Richards pressed the champion. At one time the score was in favor of Richards, 4—2. The champion, however, soon regained his top form.

In the semifinals of the doubles, Jack Caldwell of Atlanta, Ga., and S. Robertson of Greenville, S. C., defeated Beals Wright of Boston and Howard Voshell North and South champion. The scores, 6—4, 6—3, 2—6, 6—8 and 6—2.

In the doubles final Tilden paired with A. H. Chapin Jr. of Springfield, Mass., defeated Jack Caldwell, of Atlanta, Southern champion, and S. Robertson of Greenville, S. C., 6—4, 6—4, 7—5.

SWIM RECORD BROKEN AS YALE DEFEATS NAVY IN DUAL MEET

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 21.—One intercollegiate swimming record was shattered in a dual meet today when Yale defeated the Annapolis Midshipmen, 39 to 23.

Bronson, Yale's speed king, in defeating Rule, the Navy ace, negotiated the 100-yard free style in the fast time of 24 6-10 seconds, which is 2 1-10 seconds better than the mark of Dave Jones, former star of Brown University. Yale won the 200-yard relay in the fast time of 1 minute 40 seconds.

Each team got three first places but Yale got its advantage for placing more seconds and thirds.

Dodgers Hitless for Five Innings; Sisler Starts Winning Rally

St. Louis Manager Singles and Scores on Williams' Double, a Walk and a Sacrifice Fly.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEARWATER, Fla., March 21.—George Sisler and his Brownies were forced to travel ten innings today against the Brooklyn Dodgers before they could get started on a batting rally that really counted for something worth while.

Then the leader of the Browns and his crew of sluggers put on a hitting spree that resulted in the third victory of the four-game series, score 3 to 0.

Hitting seemingly was a lost art for the heavy swatters of both sides, during the nine innings of the route. In nine innings the Browns ran up a total of four scattered hits, while the Dodgers collected a like number. Good pitching by the hurlers of the contending teams, with some extremely spectacular fielding, was responsible for the scant number of safe blows.

"Lefty" Schwartz, a hurler in whom Manager Robinson seemingly places a lot of confidence, was on the firing line in the extra inning. Sisler led off with his first hit of the game, a dandy single to left field. Ken Williams doubled to right field, Sisler reaching the far corner. Joe Evans, who had been inserted into the game in the eighth inning, drew a pass and filled up the bases, with none down. Toney Rego's best effort brought forth only a short fly to Zach Wheat and all the base runners stood still. Herschel Bennett was the next hitter and the speedy center fielder cracked the opposing pitcher's offering to deep right field, Sisler racing home on the sacrifice fly for the first score of the strenuous struggle.

Lamotte's Hit Clinches Victory.

Robert Lamotte, who had taken Gerber's place in the eighth, then walloped a long single down the third base line which permitted Williams and Evans to chase across the counting station in easy fashion.

Edward Stauffer, right-handed flinger from Peoria, brought the most interesting inning of the game, from a St. Louis point of view, to a close by hoisting a long fly to Wheat in left field.

Jack Tierney of the Brooklyn team caused just a wee bit of uneasiness, in the Dodger's half of the tenth, by starting off with a clean single to center field. Wheat, heavy hitter, was the next batter, but he failed to come through with anything that even closely resembled a hit, sending a roller to Sisler whose shot to Lamotte forced Loftus, a pinch runner, at second base.

Jack Fournier, a mighty hitter of the horsehide, was next up and his healthy swing resulted in a tall fly to Joe Evans. Edward Brown, a tall rangy outfielder whacked one of Stauffer's offerings to right field for a double. Wheat pulling up at third base. Dick Cox ended the game by rolling to Robertson for an out at first.

Vance in Good Form.

Arthur Vance, pitcher selected by the National League Trophy Commission last season as their choice for National League honors, opened on the mound against the Browns. Vance was in rare form, Hank Severeid getting the only hit made against this star in the three rounds that he worked. Hank got away with a scratch hit along the third base line. Vance fanned Robertson and Sisler in the first round, Bennett in the second and he issued two walks.

Jesse Rush, a very tall right-hander with a decidedly funny windup, pitched the fourth, fifth and sixth innings and he had very nearly as much success as did Vance. He walked a couple of batters in the fourth, allowed Tobin and Gerber to hit singles in the fifth and in the sixth he tossed a fast one which hit Williams, while Leo Dixon walloped a single to left field.

Beck Unhittable.

Walter Beck, the tall right-hander, opened against Brooklyn and the Decatur boy twirled very good ball. He issued one pass and hit two batters. Not a Brooklyn player was able to touch Walter for a safety.

Bradford Springer relieved Beck and the Detroit semipro was a bit wild in the fourth, passing three men after two were down. He was saved from being scored against in this inning when, with the call 3 and 2 on Rush, the tall pitcher swung and missed a low ball for the third strike. After this inning Springer pitched good ball.

Edward Stauffer was on the mound in the seventh, eighth, ninth and tenth rounds. He allowed five hits and two walks. Outfielder Brown, who made a pair of doubles, seemingly took keen delight in the offerings of Stauffer.

Phil DeC. Ball, owner of the Browns, saw the game. Mr. Ball intends to be present next week when the Browns go to Sarasota to play the New York Giants. He also will take in the games against Buffalo at Palmetto and the Boston Braves at St. Petersburg.

NATIONAL REGATTA GOES TO PHILADELPHIA

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The annual regatta of the National Association of Amateur Oarsmen was awarded tonight to Philadelphia. The regatta will be held this year Aug. 7 and 8 on the Schuylkill River at Fairmount Park, Philadelphia. The regatta will be held one week after the Canadian championships on the Henley.

The question of holding a combined American-Canadian regatta, recently discussed by officials of the two associations, was favorably considered by the executive committee of the N. A. A. O.

MRS. JESSUP RETAINS INDOOR TENNIS TITLE

BROOKLINE, Mass., March 21.—Mrs. John B. Jessup of Wilmington, Del., successfully defended her title as national women's indoor tennis champion today by defeating Miss Anna H. Fuller of Cambridge, 6—3, 7—5, in the final of the 1925 tournament on the Longwood covered courts at Chestnut Hill.

Mrs. J. Dallas Corbiere and Mrs. William Endicott of Boston won the doubles championship by defeating Miss Martha Bayard of Short Hills, N. J., and Miss Katherine Gardner of Cambridge, Mass., 8—6, 6—4.

Mrs. Jessup and Karl S. Pfaffman of Quincy won the mixed doubles title, defeating Miss Isabella L. Mumford of Boston and James Davies of Los Angeles in the finals, 4—6, 7—5, 7—5.

Urbana, Ill., 41, Western M. A. (Alton, Ill.) 12.
Carbondale 14, E. St. Louis 13.

NIGHT GAMES.

Centralia 18, Mt. Vernon 15.
Urbana 29, Roosevelt 12.
McBride 27, Central 16.
Carbondale 28, University City 8.

McBride High School, runner-up for the championship in the St. Louis Preparatory League, advanced to the semifinals in the Mississippi Valley basketball title tournament being conducted at the Washington University gymnasium by eliminating Central High School, last night, 27 to 16. Central won the championship in the Interscholastic League, losing but one game.

In the first half, the teams alternated in the lead. At the close, McBride was leading, 16 to 13. In the closing period, the good work of Koob, right forward, enabled the McBride quintet to run up a commanding lead. Koob counted five field goals in the closing period and accounted for all but one of his team's points in the half. Frank also starred for McBride, while Cameron was the outstanding player for Central.

Excellent Passing Team.

An excellent passing game, coupled with a sound defense, has enabled the McBride quintet to reach the semifinal round. The players of the five are all of uniform size an at times the pass attack resembles that of a college team instead of a high school aggregation. In addition, Koob and Anderson are able to shoot from all angles.

Of the quintets remaining in the running for the championship, McBride and Centralia are favored to fight it out for the title. Central advanced to the semifinal by defeating Mount Vernon, 18—15. Another semifinalist is the Urbana, Ill., five, which won from Roosevelt High, 29—12.

Semifinals Tomorrow.

Carbondale, Ill., was the other five to enter the semifinals, eliminating the University City aggregation by the top heavy score of 28 to 8. The Illinois quintet led from start to finish.

In the first game of the semifinals, tomorrow at 2 o'clock, Centralia will play Urbana, while at 3 o'clock, McBride is scheduled to oppose Carbonadale.

Laswell Wins Handball Final

Californian Retains Honors He Won Last Year; Will Show Here.

By I. N. KESSLER,
Of the St. Louis Handball Team
Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CLEVELAND, O., March 21.—Maynard Laswell of Los Angeles again won the singles championship, defeating young Al Schoufelberger of Detroit, in a killing three game battle, 16-21, 21-9, 21-14.

"Schauf" started out in great form and took the first game with his wonderful "kill shots" with either hand.

Laswell was slow in getting started, but when he got going it was all Laswell. He goes after his man at a killing pace, and never lets up.

"Lefty" Dworman and Bill Kammann of Detroit won the doubles championship, defeating a very strong team Lennon and Sackman of New York, 21-15, 21-13.

"Lefty" played a great game and his famous "kill shot" was working in great order. He got some nice assistance from his teammate who had everything. This was the real surprise of the tournament.

We have succeeded in arranging to have the present champion Laswell, and the 1919 champion, "Murderball" Bill Ranft to stop over in St. Louis for two nights, Monday and Tuesday, for exhibition games at the National Athletic Club.

Police Dog Work To Feature Show

Efficiency in Guarding Homes and in Trailing Fugitives to Be Demonstrated.

The use of dogs in the protection of homes and business institutions from intruders with criminal intent will be demonstrated at the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club's fourteenth annual dog show, to be held at the Coliseum, Friday, Saturday and Sunday, April 3, 4 and 5. A daily feature of the dog show will be the field trials of the shepherd, or more commonly called police dogs, in which the entries will be judged as to their qualities and training in the apprehension, attacking and guarding of prisoners.

That the work of the dogs in these tests may be realistic in every detail, employes will be dressed in armored suits, especially designed for the purpose, to take the part of prisoners under attack by the dogs. Another feature being arranged, according to Gerald B. O'Reilly, president of the Mississippi Valley Kennel Club, will be the judging of bloodhounds in the trailing of persons. For this feature of the dog show fleet-footed employes will be given a good start on the dogs and will be trailed by scent over a considerable distance covering several blocks of city streets, the chase ending in the judging arena—unless the pursued be overtaken by the bloodhounds before the goal of safety is reached.

MUNN TO BE OFFERED MATCH WITH WINNER OF COLISEUM MAT FEATURE

Two heavyweight bouts and a middleweight event make up the program for a wrestling show to be staged under the direction of Thomas N. Packs at the Coliseum next Thursday night. The feature attraction will bring together Dick Daviscourt of California and Oreste Vadalfi, Italian heavyweight, in a finish match, best two out of three falls to decide.

Frank Judson, former coach of the Harvard University wrestlers, will meet Yussiff Hussane, a Turkish heavyweight, in the semifinal attraction.

Johnny Kilonis, former middleweight champion of the world, takes "Cyclone" Robinson of Oklahoma City in the inaugural bout. The preliminary events will be limited to one fall each.

Promoter Tom Packs has announced that he will offer Wayne Munn, the new haevyweight mat champion, a match with the winner of Thursday night's headliner. Munn has spurned several offers from Packs for a match in this city with either Joe Stecher or Jimmy Londos but the Coliseum promoter believes the champion will agree to defend his title against either of the principals in the impending tussle.

Daviscourt last Friday was thrown by Ad Santel, now considered only a third-rater.

INDIAN BASKETBALL TEAM TO PLAY HERE AGAINST ST. L. U. HIGH

Athletic authorities at St. Louis University High School announced last night that word had been received from Chicago to the effect that the Indian basketball team of St. Francis Mission, South Dakota, would play the St. Louis University High School team at St. Louis U. High gymnasium next Friday evening. The Indian team competed in the National Catholic championship at Chicago last week. The five is made up entirely of full-blooded Sioux Indians. They will appear in Indian regalia.

By Dent McSkimming.

Municipal soccer will be given a test against the professional variety at St. Louis University Field this afternoon in a city championship game between the St. Matthews of the public park league and the Ben Millers of the St. Louis Soccer League.

Although in the past the professionals have had no great trouble in establishing their superiority over the amateurs here, there is a general inclination to respect the chances of the St. Matthews because of the presence in their lineup of eight former professional players. These former big leaguers are playing as well or better than when they were in the major circuit and their experience tends to make the team steadier than the ordinary Municipal League eleven.

It would be unwise to expect the Matthews to hold the Millers to less than three goals. The professional champions have proved themselves excellent opportunists even against a remarkably tight defense. It will be interesting to see how Halfback Barnard and Fullback Hack, both professionals, attempt to cope with the clever left wing of the Millers.

Some Good Forwards.

Jimmy McCarthy, Lehman, Berry and McGann all played well against the Henses last Sunday when the St. Matthews won the municipal championship and it is expected that they will show flashes of good football against the Millers. Their attack is based upon surprise movements and speedy thrusts rather than upon systematic short passing. Lehman is an excellent shot and a fair "weaver." He is considered the best center forward in the entire Municipal League this season.

Billy Quinn, at center halfback, was recognized as St. Louis' greatest halfback for about five years. He voluntarily stepped down from the professional to the Municipal League this season because of dissatisfaction over conditions in the big league. Because of a death in his family last week, Quinn wished to remain out of the game today but late yesterday he promised Manager Dalton that he would be at his position.

Barnard and Snyder, the wing halfbacks, have both played in the major league. Their greatest asset is a willingness to try hard at all times. Neither is as finished a football player as Quinn.

Veteran Fullbacks.

Andy Hack and Paddy Burke, the fullbacks, know enough about the game to keep the backfield from getting stage fright. Hack, at right full, will have a tougher job stopping Fitzgerald and Mulroy than will Burke have in getting Eddie Dunn and Bollam under control.

Nick Reidy, the goal tender, is an old acquaintance of professional soccer followers. He has played the greatest game of his career this season. According to Manager Dalton of the Matthews, Reidy is returning from Independence, Kan., for the game. He plays third base for the Independence baseball team.

FOUR SWIMMING AND TWO TRACK RECORDS SHATTERED IN MEET

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Four swimmink records and two track marks fell in the annual Northwestern University national track and field meet which closed here today, giving Atlantic City (N. J.) High School first place in the tank affair and Cedar Rapids (Ia.) High School first in the track meet.

Atlantic City High School swimmers hung new marks in the 160-yard relay when they clipped three seconds off their own record last year, establishing a new time of 1:16 3-5 seconds; in the medley relay they knocked 6 3-5 seconds from their own record of a year ago, traveling the distances in 2 minutes 6 2-5 seconds. Scherer, Atlantic City, backstroke artist, covered 100 yards in 1:08 3-5 seconds, or eclipsing the old mark by 1-5 of a second, established last year by Hill of Hyde Park, Chicago.

Another mark of the natators to go by the board was in the 40-yard swim, when Walaitus, Detroit Northern High, bettered the mark set jointly by Gaw of Duluth, Minn., and Howell of Hyde Park, Chicago, who hung up a figure of 19 1-5 seconds, while the Detroit swimmer covered the dash in 19 seconds flat.

In track events, the Senn High School team, Chicago, ran to a new record in the four-fifths of a mile relay in the time of 2:49 1-5 seconds, or 1 second better than the ercord of Deerfield High School.

Gist of Hyde Park High School, Chicago, shattered the half-mile mark of Stock of Rockford, who in 1922 ran the distance in 2:4 2-5, while the time today was 2 minutes flat.

GOLF
J. ROY STOCKTON

New Pro at Midland.

MIDLAND VALLEY has abandoned the plan of dispensing with the services of a professional and has appointed Wyndham H. Monroe, who will report for duty April 15. Monroe, who has been instructor at the Washington indoor golf course this winter, was assistant to Willie Hunter at the Richmond Golf Club, London, England, in 1909 and later in America he served at the Oak Park and Edgewater clubs in Chicago. For four years he taught in the Chester Horton indoor school in Chicago.

Monroe is a hustler, a wide-awake, progressive pro and will be popular at Midland Valley. After other professionals had failed to make a go of the indoor teaching game here he started a pupil-getting campaign that brought him a large-sized class.

Why Is a Pro?

MIDLAND'S experiment of going along without a professional was watched with interest. Lynnwood D. Saunders, chairman of the Greens Committee, said the club was not "against" pros, but merely wanted to experiment with an open mind, to see if a pro was necessary. Charley Clarkson was the last regularly employed instructor there. When Clarkson left Midland, Delmar Binsbacher was put in charge of the caddie shack, which was operated as a club concession. This year Ollie Bockenkamp, a brother of Dick, was given the caddie house job. At most clubs the caddie house privileges go with the pro job, the instructor making a profit on the sale of clubs and equipment. Midland experimented to see if the caddie house could be made to yield a profit for the club.

Several clubs in the South and one or two in Chicago tried the same experiment with indifferent success.

ONE feature cannot be overlooked. The caddie house is part of the service a club must give its members. If the professional profits by the efficient handling of concessions, it seems reasonable to suppose that he will have more interest in the shop than if it were a club enterprise. Then it seems reasonable to suppose that having an instructor is an asset. New members frequently are beginners and even old members like to have a professional around to straighten out their game occasionally.

If one club goes without a professional, members at that club will visit other clubs to get their lessons and that may not be good advertising for the club which has no instructor.

Long Goes to Galesburg

HAROLD LONG, product of the Municipal links and one of the cleverest golfers among the St. Louis-bred professionals, has signed as instructor at the Soangetaha Country Club at Galesburg, Ill. He will report for duty March 28. Long usually finishes well up in the money no matter how fast the field in any tournament. He has a fine golfing temperament and his prospects as a tournament player are bright.

How Many Sticks?

THE usual pilgrimage to the sporting goods houses will begin soon, with new converts to the grand old game purchasing their first outfit of sticks. How many do they need and what kind should they buy?

Lou Hamel, a St. Louis-bred professional, who has made the selling of golf equipment his specialty, offers some advice to the beginners.

"Nine out of 10 beginners have a rough idea of what they want and their first request will be for a heavy club," Hamel writes. "Thus they make their first mistake in the majority of cases. In selecting your wooden clubs pick one with a head so light that you don't feel that there is a load on the end. Pick a light club. The professionals who make a living by playing golf, don't use a club with a heavy head, and they don't overlook any bets.

"Five clubs are enough for the beginner. They are the driver, brassie, midiron, mashies and putter. The length of the club is determined by the position or stance of the individual, rather than by his or her height. For instance, a man 6 feet 2 inches with long arms using an upright swing will use a shorter club than a man 5 feet 7 inches, who has short arms and who uses a flat swing. For that reason it would be well to take a lesson or let a professional look you over before you invest in any equipment.

"There are other points about golf equipment which the beginner should know, and in future contributions to this column I will outline these points."

Harry Wills, Starting Story Of His Life, Says Meanness Guided Him to the Fight Game

Negro Challenger of Jack Dempsey Tells of Fights for Nickels and Dimes and Just for the Sake of Fighting; Stolen Ride Gave Him Chance as Jockey.

This is the first chapter in the story of the life and ring career of Harry Wills, as told by the negro heavy-weight boxer to a correspondent of the Post-Dispatch. Wills is generally recognized as being Champion Jack Dempsey's most dangerous challenger, and it is virtually certain that the titleholder will meet the negro before he retires.

CHAPTER I.

To begin at the beginning, I was born in New Orleans in 1892, the year that Jim Corbett beat the great John L. Sullivan for the heavyweight championship. It was in a little frame house on Annunciation street in what was known as the "Garden" district, near the racetrack, that I first saw the light.

Harry Wills.

Father was a bricklayer and he did not have very steady employment. He had a tough time feeding all us kids, for there were six of us and we all had good appetites. My father and my brothers and sisters are dead now. Mother still lives in New Orleans together with two daughters, the result of a later marriage.

Always in Trouble.

I was only 6 years old when father died. I was a wild little devil, always into mischief of some kind. School was one of the things I hated, and, although I attended the Fisk Public School on Liberty street until I was 10 or 11, I did not learn much.

Playing hookey to go after crawfish that could be sold in town for 25 cents a sack cut into my studies considerably, so that all I ever acquired was a little reading and writing and a smattering of arithmetic.

Another way of picking up some change in those days was by gathering up cotton bale buckles that dropped off loads along the cotton routes. These buckles brought from 3 to 5 cents apiece, according to their condition. I did well at this racket for I had sharp eyes. Sometimes I found them before they got lost.

Fought for Dimes.

Down at the docks, where I spent most of my time, we used to fight for nickels and dimes. This was right in my line, for I was bigger and stronger than any of the other kids of my age.

I inherit my unusual strength from my parents. Dad was 6 feet 3 inches high and weighed 275 pounds, most of it solid muscle. Mother is no pigmy, either. She weighed 220 pounds.

I was just naturally mean and loved a fight. Nowadays there is no more peaceable person than Harry Wills. I'd do most anything in reason to avoid a muss, but in those days I was just poison. Seemed like I was never satisfied unless I was mixing it up with some one. Never cared much who it was or why. Any excuse would do to start a fight. It was that way all through my early career in the ring. It is only lately that I got sense enough to avoid trouble instead of looking for it.

The only thing I liked better than fighting was riding horses. We never had any of our own, but that made no difference. Whenever I saw a saddle horse hitched to a post I got a yen to straddle him. If the owner was not in sight I'd take him for a run around the block and put him back before it was found out.

This habit got me into trouble one day and probably affected my whole career. A man named Leo Leonard, who owned the biggest livery stable in town, knew of my tricks, having suffered more than anyone else from them. He vowed he would break me of stealing rides.

Putting a nice new saddle on a horse that had never been broken, he hitched him to a post in front of his place about the time he knew I was due to come along on my way home from school. That new Mexican saddle caught my eye at once. Looking around carefully to see that there was no one in sight, I loosened the rope that tied him and hopped into the saddle.

Right away I found out that something was wrong. The first thing that horse did was to stand on his hind legs and throw himself over backwards. I scrambled out of the way just in time to avoid being crushed. Afraid to let go for fear the horse would be lost and afraid I'd be killed if I didn't, I suddenly made up my mind to go through with it. As he scrambled to his feet, I jumped into the saddle again. This time he set off as hard as he could tear. I let him have his own way for several miles, just guiding him a bit when there was danger of hitting something. Finally he began to slow down. Soon he let me turn him and take him back to the stable.

To the Racetrack.

The owner was waiting for me out in front. With a stern face he told me that he was going to have me arrested for stealing horses—a very serious crime in those days. I was frightened stiff and the tears began to roll down my cheeks, when I noticed he was shaking with laughter.

I began to laugh, too, then, glad to find that I was not going to get into further trouble. He wound up the incident by complimenting me on my riding ability and invited me out to the racetrack, where, he said, I could do all the riding I liked and perhaps get paid for it, too.

Kirkwood Beaten In Title Contest

Warsaw Five Eliminates County Quintet in Basket Game at Columbia.

COLUMBIA, Mo., March 21.—Warsaw High School won the championship of class B in the State high-school basketball tournament at the University of Missouri here today, defeating Kirkwood, 17 to 15. The game was probably the hardest fought of the tournament.

Kirkwood held a lead through the first half, during which its floor work was superior to that of the Warsaw team, and which gave it a lead, 11 to 7, at the end of the second quarter.

Kansas City Westport became scholastic champion of Missouri by defeating St. Joseph Central, 18 to 16, in an overtime game. Westport will represent Missouri at the annual national scholastic tournament at Chicago in April.

Central set the pace at the start of the game, and was leading at the half, but the last two quarters and the extra period brought the score frequently to a tie, and saw the lead change hands rapidly.

OTHER YANKEES SCORE

Second in Pole Vault and Third in the 220-Yard Dash Also Registered.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 21.—With ample American aid, Oxford defeated Cambridge by six victories to five in their fifty-seventh intervarsity track and field competition at Queens Club today. Three of the six firsts scored by the dark blues were won by Americans, R. L. Hyatt, formerly of Harvard, capturing both the pole vault and the weight putting, while W. E. Stevenson, ex-Princetonian, broke the tape in the quarter-mile run three yards ahead of D. G. A. Lowe, star of the Cambridge runners.

Several thousand partisans of one or the other ancient English universities witnessed the sports, which were run off in a melang of springtime weather such as England alone can experience.

Three intervarsity records were broken, but two of these events, the pole vault and the 220-yard hurdles, have been contested by Oxford and Cambridge for only three years, so that no great credit is taken by those who won them today because they did better than their predecessors.

Porritt Winner in Dash.

But A. E. Porritt, the New Zealander, who won the 100-yard dash in 9 9-10 seconds, accomplished something that seems to be of consequence in the long record of rivalry between Great Britain's two ancient universities. The dark blues have raced against the light blues over the 100-yard route since 1864, but never until this afternoon has one of them dashed the distance in less than 10 seconds.

Stevenson, former Princetonian, greatly impressed the Oxford supporters by his victory in the quarter-mile. At that time each side had won four events and Lowe, Cambridge, was thought likely to defeat the American, who obviously was not enjoying the uncomfortable weather. However, he overtook Lowe as they turned into the finish stretch and won with a lead of three yards, in 51 seconds.

Easy Victory in Vault.

The pole vault, which still is a novelty to most English athletes, was an easy victory for two Americans, R. L. Hyatt and C. B. Wright of Southern California, who represented Oxford. Hyatt still was jumping with heavy trousers on when one of the Cambridge vaulters, T. R. Scott, fell by the wayside with the bar at only 10 feet, and the American had not yet shed his sweater when the other Cantab, R. H. Bailey, failed to make a vault of 11 feet. Hyatt got over the bar at 11 feet 6 inches, but Wright failed to do so, giving the Harvard vaulter the victory.

Porritt, the hero of the 100-yard dash, was defeated in both the low and high hurdles by Lord Burghley of Cambridge.

THE SUMMARIES.

Ed Delehanty, the "only Del," was born in Cleveland, and h picked up his baseball in that city. He played on the old river bed which was the site where the great sand-lotters of Cleveland made good. All of the Delehanty family were players and firemen. Not far from the Delehanty house in Cleveland one of the city fire companies was located, and "Del" practiced with the men on the lot next to the engine house when he was a boy.

He could hit anything anywhere, and he was as likely to strike out in a pinch as anything else, yet that was just where he was strong, because the pitchers, in trying to work him, would either send him to first o get in the hole and have to serve a fairly good ball, and then Delehanty would cut loose. He did not like any kind of a ball that zipped around his neck, and the pitcher who could feed him with fast ones of that nature could send him back to the bench. The trouble was that there were few clever enough to do it.

Delehanty played ball around Cleveland and then drifted down to Mansfield, O. While with that club he received an offer from Wheeling, W. Va. He was short of funds, which habit clung to him a greater part of his life, and so he started out for Wheeling, which was further along the B. & O. than Mansfield, with a good pair of shoes and a lot of determination. He caught enough rides to make the walking easy and had not been in Wheeling a week before he was the sensation of that part of the world.

Purchased for $1900.

Philadelphia heard of him and obtained his release from the Wheeling club for the huge sum of $1900. That price was the highest at the time it was offered that ever had been advanced for a ball player.

His last year in baseball was with Washington. He had fallen off in batting but he was still able to hit the ball better than .300 then.

Tunney Offered Dempsey Match At Los Angeles

Event Hangs Fire Pending Negotiations for Bout With Gibbons.

By the Associated Press.

CHICAGO, March 21.—Billy Gibson, manager of Gene Tunney, American light-heavyweight champion, announced here tonight that he had received an offer from Tunney to box Jack Dampsey in a 10-round no-decision contest in Los Angeles in June. He said, however, that he would withhold acceptance of the offer, pending the outcome of negotiations for a 15-round bout to a decision with Tom Gibbons in New York during the summer season.

Gibson said Gibbons had been offered $75,000 to meet Tunney, but that the St. Paul heavyweight had displayed no inclination of accepting it.

"Tunney is willing to meet Gibbons at catch weights or the light heavyweight limit," Gibson said. "We are ready to guarantee Gibbons $75,000. This is an offer he cannot refuse, as he previously agreed to meet Tunney in Madison Square Garden and would not have received more than $25,000.

"Tunney is a logical opponent for the St. Paul heavyweight. Gene has grown heavier and stronger and is developing into a full-fledged heavyweight. Gibbons should meet him and the winner could be matched with Dempsey for a title contest."

Tunney worked out here today, leaving later for St. Paul to meet Harry Greb, former light heavyweight champion and present middleweight champion, in a 10-round contest next Friday night.

Uniform Weight Tennis Ball to Be Compulsory

New Rule Adopted by International Federation Goes Into Effect Jan. 1, 1926.

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 21.—A tennis ball, uniform weight, size and resiliency, will be compulsory in all international matches played after Jan. 1, 1926, the International Tennis Federation decided today at its annual meeting, in which 20 countries were represented.

The federation also adopted the American foot fault rule. It received favorably applications for Austria, Hungary, India, Ireland, Greece and Ecuador, who will become full-fledged members in due course. No request for admittance was received from Germany.

Regarding the new uniform tennis ball, the federation decided that no monopoly would be given to any company, but that the ball presented by any manufacturer, to be accepted, must meet the specifications laid down by a committee of four which the federation appointed.

The adoption of the American foot fault rule seems likely to raise havoc among the most prominent French players, the French interpretation having allowed the server to drag the pivot foot across the base line at the moment of impact, giving the server a few feet "fudge." Henceforth the American method of forcing the server to stand with both feet behind the base line without touching it, and demanding that one foot remain in contact with the ground during the entire service action will be rigorously applied.

Italy, where the server has been permitted to spring before the moment of impact of racquet and ball, voted against the rule.

WRAY'S COLUMN

Quick Rich.

ONCE upon a time Tom Gibbons fought ONLY on percentage. All his matches were made on this basis. Gibbons and his manager always took the commendable stand that Tom was worth only a percentage of what he could draw at the gate.

Yesterday, Eddie Kane, for Gibbons, announced that he would not let Tom fight Harry Wills, the negro, unless Gibbons were guaranteed $200,000—more money than Gibbons has earned in his entire ring career.

Gibbons is not a champion. Nor is Wills, his proposed opponent. If Wills is entitled to the same sum, the overhead against the BENEFIT receipts would then figure $400,000 for just one bout.

Gibbons has set the pace. Wills will not minimize himself. And so the old match either will not go through, or its "benefits" will approximate those of the Chicago bout, where Benny Leonard got $25,000 and the Milk Fund $25.

What Ails Tom?

GIBBONS seems to be suffering from the quick-rich fever, after all these years. Up to the time he fought Jack Dempsey at Shelby in 1923 his largest single earning was less than $15,000, made in a title fight with Harry Greb.

He fought Dempsey on percentage and drew a blank plus defeat.

He also fought Carpentier on percentage, at Michigan City, and for the first time received real money—something like $50,000.

But now Tom has entered the Big Guarantee game. But you can't blame him, so very much. Wills is likely to trim him, thereby bumping Tom out of a title match with Dempsey. Also, Tom is nearing 36 years of age, and can not expect to have many more years of earning capacity in the ring.

And so it's $200,000 or no fight, with Thomas.

Our guess is that there'll be NO fight.

Some Muss.

"SPEEDY SCHAEFER, a cocky little rooster, who can wrestle and knows wrestlers, has returned from Memphis where he was an interested onlooker at the foreign invasion of Wayne Munn's preserves, by Wladek Zbyszko and Kotsonaros.

"Munn didn't make a good impression that night," Speedy stated. "Just after it had been announced that Munn would meet any wrestler in the world, Zbyszko hopped into the ring, peeled off his coat and said that he was there to help Munn give a little exhibition and incidentally to offer himself as one of those included in the 'any man in the world' challenge.

"Munn didn't wait for developments. He skidded through the ropes and disappeared, waiting until the storm passed when he returned and did his little stunt of throwing Jack McCarthy around.

"Zibby was surely ready to go through with his stuff and it is too bad they couldn't have let it go forward. There isn't any doubt what would have happened to Munn."

Meaningless Challenges.

MUNN from the beginning has said that he was ready to meet anybody. When "anybody" showed up, it seems always to have developed that the "anybody" meant was anybody en rapport with Munn's manager.

Whenever a REAL opponent was proposed, it always has developed that Munn had no time for that particular wrestler.

Not less than a dozen wrestlers have offered to take up Munn's gauntlet. But when they got there the cupboard was bare. The gauntlet had gone.

In its place was only a long line of venerable excuses.

Less Noise, More Action.

IT'S for Munn to prove his case and increase the number of his admirers. The public is ripe to back up Munn. He is an American, affable, good to look upon, a fluent conversationalist and makes a fine personal impression.

All that is needed to elevate Munn to be the most popular champion in American history is for him to step out and do what he says he is willing to do—flop a few men on the all-comers' plan.

Not until then will Munn's challenges ring true or will he himself get the credit that might be his.

Wrestling a lot of hand-picked opponents will not get the big fellow very far.

A Great Race.

THE Browns may be having trouble with McManus and Jacobson, but just now that is the only cloud on the American League team's horizon. In every other way the Browns are growing better, day by day.

It may be accepted as certain that the pitching staff is 40 per cent better this year by reason of Gaston, Blaeholder, Bush and a revived Vangilder. The regular and second strings of the hurling staff both have gained.

Dixon seems to have proved his class as a catcher and the outfield will be well taken care of, even if Big Jake continues to sulk.

McManus' absence from second base would be a distinct loss.

Can't Win Without Hurlers.

HOWEVER, second basemen will not make or wreck a championship club. Rogers Hornsby couldn't, despite a world's record year, lift his team out of second division in 1924.

But pitchers a team MUST have—and enough of them.

Early reports from the Browns' camp this year indicate that for the first time in some years the Browns will be adequately represented on Hurling Hill—and that spells a good showing.

In fact, in view of the prospective closeness of the American League race this year, with McManus and Jacobson in line, the old hope is once more due to "spring eternal" at this the vernal equinox.

KING NADI, BOUGHT FOR $600, IS PROMISING DERBY HOPE

Troxler Colt Ran Impressive Races Last Year

Son of King James Beaten by a Nose in a Thrilling Duel With Captain Hal.

QUOTED AT 25 TO 1

Owner Says Horse's Value Has Gone Up to $60,000 Since He Was a Two-Year-Old.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

LOUISVILLE, Ky., March 21.—According to John J. Troxler's own estimate, King Nadi, his Kentucky Derby candidate, is today worth 100 times as much as he was 18 months ago. In a letter from New Orleans Troxler said that he had received several flattering offers for the brown son of King James—Nadinette recently, but he had placed a value of $60,000 on him, and he would not part with him for one cent less. It was in the summer of 1923 that he purchased the colt as a yearling for $600.

King Nadi wound up in the front rank of the Western 2-year-old division last season, and his worth as a yearling cannot be counted against him. It must be remembered that Master Charlie, champion juvenile last year, which earned $95,525 in purse money, was sold for $1000 at the same time that King Nadi went for $600, and many other horses that brought small amounts as yearlings turned out to be cracking good 2-year-olds.

King Nadi started 10 times in 1924 and he is credited with four victories. He also finished second three times and his purse money won totaled $4875. He was a bit late coming to hand, it being June 14, at Latonia, before he made his racing debut. His initial effort found him unplaced, and he did not start again until Oct. 2, at the same track, when he again failed to finish in the picture. A week later he came within a short margin of winning, Fairy Master beating him a head. Then began his good racing.

Lost to Good Nags.

On Oct. 11, at the Milldale track, he left the maiden ranks and ran three-quarters of a mile in 1:12 1-5. His next out found him stacked up against Lee O. Cotner, which could probably have beaten any 2-year-old in America on that day, and he finished second to the R. W. Collins colt. This race was at six furlongs, and Lee O. Cotner galloped home with an eight lengths' lead in 1:11 4-5. He led throughout and tore off the first quarter in :23 4-5, and the half mile in :45 4-5.

When he began racing at Churchill Downs on Nov. 8, there was a thrilling duel between the Troxler colt and A. A. Kaiser's Captain Hal, in the Golden Rod Handicap, the latter getting the decision by a nose. King Nadi was in receipt of 17 pounds from the Kaiser representative, and the Captain came within an inch of finding the weight concession too much.

Then came the shifting of the racing scene to Lexington, and Troxler decided to retire King Nadi for the winter. He changed his mind after the Lexington session got under way and began training the colt again, with the result that he got him to the post three days before the meeting closed, but he was dead short and backed up after running five furlongs. It was that race that caused Kentucky State Racing Commission to issue a ruling revoking Troxler's training license, as King Nadi came back on the closing day of the fall meeting and won an illegal event easily, and the turf governing body held that he showed a form reversal.

A Reversal of Form.

His ignominious defeat was suffered on a fast track, while he showed his good performance in the mud. The commission did not take this into consideration, evidently, and when they withdrew Troxler's license it caused the body to becoming laughing stock of the turf world. It was not long until the commissioners saw the error of their way and restored him to good standing.

In winning his final race of the season, King Nadi ran a full second faster than Candy Kid, winner of the rich Breeders' Futurity, did over the same distance that day. Unfortunately, Troxler's horse was not eligible for the stake.

Throughout the winter the King James colt has been under care of Trainer Bob Frakes at the Kentucky Association track, Lexington, and, according to word from the latter, he could not have put in a better off-season under any conditions. Troxler will again take him over when he returns from the Crescent City and give him final preparation for the Derby. He is a long shot in the winter book, though quoted by some as low as 25 to 1.

King Nadi possesses excellent blood lines, his sire being a son of Plaudit-Unsightly, and in his day an unusually useful race horse. He won 24 races during his five seasons of activity, and quite a few of them were stakes. He took down $107,546 in purses.

How to Play B·I·L·L·I·A·R·D·S

By CHAS. C. PETERSON

(This is the seventh article of a series by Charles C. Peterson in which an endeavor is made to assist the amateur billiard player to imprive his game.)

(Copyright, 1925.)

THE RAIL BRIDGE

Ninety per cent of shots made with the ball close to the rail are made with the cue almost level.

I emphasize this because I find that a constant error made by amateurs is that of elevating the cue immediately when the ball rests near the cushion. Elevation is only necessary when a half masse stroke is wanted and this is not frequent.

As can be observed in the accompanying illustration, the rail bridge is a solid support in which the first and second fingers press gently against the cue and form a slot through which the cue slides easily. The matter of elevation is easily regulated. The top surface of the cushion acts as a guide, the cue resting flat upon the cushion, which is itself a slightly beveled edge.

This rail bridge should be used in preference to most of the insecure emergency bridges used when it is necessary to distort the hand to get a grip on the cue.

It is well to bear in mind that conditions do not always make it possible to use the bridge as recommended here, but under ordinary circumstances the rules outlined will prove applicable and helpful.

Municipal A. A. To Hold Boxing Show Wednesday

Best Local Amateurs to Engage Special Bouts at Battery A.

The Municipal Athletic Association will return to the amateur boxing game in the role of promoter Wednesday night when a show will be held at the Battery A. Armory, Grand boulevard and Hickory street. No shows have been held by the Municipal A. A. for about one year. During this interval teams have been developed at Sherman and Mullanphy Community Centers and a majority of the best amateurs in St. Louis are Park Department proteges.

Lew Terry of the South Broadway A. C. will probably meet Eddie Goldberg in one of the headliners. Goldberg, who lost a point decision to Terry last week, has expressed his eagerness to get a return match and it is understood that Terry is willing to accomodate.

Twenty-five entries have been received. There will be four special attractions with the best amateurs in town on the program.

Dr. C. M. Westerman, member of the Western A. A. U. Registration Committee, announced yesterday that he is eager to receive contributions to a fund to send Ray Alfano and one or two other local champions to the senior A. A. U. tournament at Boston next month. He has received two $5 contributions from sports enthusiasts, he said.

YALE WATER POLO TEAM BEATS ANNAPOLIS, 34-30

By the Associated Press.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., March 21.—The water polo teams of Annapolis Midshipmen surprised the crack team of Yale here today, Yale winning by the close score of 34 to 30. The score at half time was, Yale, 11; Navy, 10. Navy got a two-point lead at the opening of the second half. The Elis, however, soon went out in front but the Middies were ever a dangerous threat.

BELFAST, March 21.—Distillery won the Irish Football Association cup today, defeating Glentoran in the final by two goals to one.

How a Race Horse Tipster Ran $7 Into Several Million by Lucky Guess on 10 to 1 Shot

New York World Turf Expert Tells How Touts Fleece Trusting Fish Out of Thousands of Dollars—Horses Without a Chance Tipped to Win.

This is the second of Mr. Ryall's three articles on horse racing tipsters and touts.

By G. F. T. Ryall,
Of the New York World Sport Staff.

(Copyright, 1925.)

Not so long ago the writer received the following letter, apparently from a man of small means in a Mid-Western city:

"I understand you have an inside line on the racing game. I am a small player but am willing to make it right for the winning information. Let me know your terms."

Some tout is going to "lay a horse to that sap," according to the vernacular of the fraternity.

The operations of peddlers of racing information run all the way from selling tips on a card for a dime or a quarter to organized companies housed in luxurious offices handling commissions that run from $10,000 to $20,000 a day.

Jack Sheenhan was one of the first to depart from the hustlers' direct approach and sell his tips on a card. He started peddling "Jack's Tips" outside the race track gates in Chicago in the early eighties and for a couple of seasons had the field almost to himself. His imitators now are legion. They still hawk "Jack's Tips," but "Green Cards" and "Red Cards," "Stable Boy" and "Ex-Jockey" or "$100 Specials" for $1 are more popular nowadays.

The Old Fox.

A little higher scale are the sellers of mimeographed sheets of "ratings" and "selections." These men actually do try to pick winners, for the value and popularity of their selections depend on the number of winners they pick. They always make a few blind guesses with the hope of picking a horse that will win at 20 to 1, on the theory of the English tout who said: "I wants to give you a long 'un, Gov'nor, any fool can pick the favorite."

Perhaps one of the quaintest characters that ever stood outside the race-track gates was "The Old Kentucky Fox," as he called himself. He was a negro, a little wisp of a man, with hair like a halo of cotton wool, and he must have been close to a hundred years old when he died last year. His cry was, "The Old Kentucky Fox! I got 'em yesterday and I got 'em again today!" In his slave days he was a jockey for a Southern stable and he spent all his life around the racetracks. He really did know something about horses and picked a lot of winners.

King of the Tipsters.

It is a far cry from him to that king pin of tipsters, George Graham Rice, who founded Maxim & Gay, a concern that handled millions of dollars from all over the United States and Canada. Seven dollars was all Rice had to his name one day in the early nineties, and he spent that for an advertisement in a racing paper announcing that for a subscription of $5 a day he would send out one horse, a sure winner at a long price. As proof of what he could do, he announced that a horse named Silver Coin would win that afternoon at New Orleans at a long price.

It always has been believed that Rice was taking a "shot at the moon." But Silver Coin did win that day, and at 10 to 1, and Rice ran that $7 up into several millions and a big stable of horses that included Gold Heels. Many racegoers still remember the banners outside Sheepshead Bay, the tally-hos and the full page advertisements, for Rice was no piker.

The Swindle Game.

Those were the days when tipsters basked in a Danae's shower and it was no uncommon sight to see hundreds of men and women lined up before the offices of tipping bureaus waiting to give in their $5, $10 or $20 to be placed as the tipster saw fit on the day's one best bet. But greed, the get-rich-quick urge and the postal authorities killed them all.

New Orleans in those days was the chief field of operations of these companies and where most of the subscribers' money was bet. Many times it was not bet at all.

A tip would be broadcast that a certain horse was to win. The horse hadn't a chance. Thousands of dollars were received to be let on it. The tipsters, by a display of great confidence and much money, would succeed in backing the price down, perhaps from 50 to 1 all the way to 6 to 5, often without getting a dollar on. Of course, the horse was beaten, but the chart showed the subscribers of that tipping bureau that a plunge had been made, for their special had been backed from 50 to 1 to 6 to 5, and a cleverly worded letter allayed any suspicions.

Government Steps In.

Finally, however, the Federal authorities put an end to such swindles, which it is estimated aggregated hundreds of millions, and the companies that employed 40 stenographers to get out their letters and paid milkmen and postmen commissions for securing new subscribers were forced out of existence.

A few tipsters still occasionally distribute circulars at the race tracks offering the public the opportunity to become a "partner" in a big racing stable, with the attendant "betting privileges," but none has the elan of the operators of 20 years ago who made fortunes—and lost them bucking another man's game.

It is more profitable and less hazardous for swindlers to work quietly with a couple of boys who look like jockeys. These are sometimes introduced as riders of the prominence of Sande, Kummer or Parke, who are willing to put a bet down on a "sure thing." They can make a quicker getaway, too, if the victim emits too loud a squawk.

In Mr. Ryall's third article, next Sunday, he explains how the tipster hooks his victim.

OSAKA MAINICHI NINE WILL VISIT AMERICA

By the Associated Press.

OSAKA, March 21. — The Osaka Mainichi baseball team will sail from Kobe March 28 for a tour of the United States.

The team will reach Honolulu April 9 and will play American, Japanese and Hawaiian teams there, San Francisco will be reached about May 12.

Present plans call for a stay of about a month on the Pacific Coast after the players return from a tour which will take them as far as New York. Games have been scheduled in all the principal cities to be visited.

CONTENTION OF U. S. IN TEAPOT DOME SUIT

Government to Argue Tomorrow That Lease Was Made Without Sufficient Authority.

By the Associated Press.

CHEYENNE, Wyo., March 21.—The contention of the Government that the Teapot Dome naval oil reserve lease was executed to Harry F. Sinclair's Mammoth Oil Co. without sufficient authority rests wholly upon legal argument, which will be presented before Federal Judge T. Blake Kennedy beginning Monday, Owen J. Roberts, of Government counsel, said today.

The Government will argue, according to Roberts, that the lease provisions, under which the reserve was transferred from the navy to the Interior Department by executive order of President Harding and the ensuing contract for the Teapot Dome development, were illegal in that they provided for the acquiring of an expenditure of money by the Navy Department without an appropriation from Congress.

Roberts said that the entire scheme, under which the navy was to dispose of the crude oil in exchange for oil storage tanks, which was one of the terms of the contract, was illegal because provision for the purchase of tanks should be made in the naval appropriation bills. The contract which former Secretary of the Interior Albert B. Fall made with the Mammoth Oil Co. contained a clause under which crude oil royalties, accruing to the navy from Teapot Dome, would be taken by Sinclair in exchange for tanks. This, Roberts contends, was a violation of the provisions under which Congress has the sole power to appropriate money for the navy.

Potter to Decide Whether to Prose-

Atlee Pomerene of Government counsel is scheduled to open the argument Monday. He is expected to use about two hours in stating his side of the Government's side to the court. Defense counsel—Martin W. Littleton, George P. Hoover and J. W. Lacey—then will take their contentions before the court. They are expected to require a day or more to make their presentations. Roberts will make the closing argument for the Government and the case then will be completely in the hands of Judge Kennedy.

PAULINA'S GIFT TO GROW

$1000 Deposited for Longworth Baby to Total $2296 in 1946.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 21.—An interesting personal news item sent out of Chicago the other day told that Mrs. Marshall Field had deposited $1000 in a bank for a trust fund to be paid to Paulina Longworth at her marriage.

Paulina is barely six weeks old now, but reference to interest tables shows that the the prevailing time deposit rate of 4 per cent, compounded semiannually, her dowry from this source would be $2296.62 if she married on her twenty-first birthday, Feb. 14, 1946.

At 25 years it would be $2691.15, and if marriage were deferred to her thirtieth birthday the $1000 would have become $3280.44.

PILE SUFFERERS—ATTENTION!

My success in the treatment of rectal trouble is due to my great experience. I have treated and cured hundreds upon hundreds who have gone home cured and written back to me just such letters as I publish herewith, written by the Jeffrey Brothers of Bush, Ill. Read the letter, then give your own case due consideration. It will be very much better to save yourself the time, money and suffering. Therefore do not wait any longer but come and get cured. You will profit greatly by it.

Bush, Ill., March 12, 1925

My dear Mr. Coe:-

I just returned home, after having spent two and a half weeks under your care and treatment, for a very, very bad case of Protruding, Bleeding Piles, and double fistula of 10 years standing.

Dr. Coe, words cannot express my gratitude to you for what you did for me. I had lost much time during the last two years, and for years before, my work was a drudgery to me. Now I am well and happy and my family of wife and seven children are as happy as I am.

My brother, Robert Jeffrey, was cured by you in June, 1923. He had a bad case of Protruding Piles—was unable to work but very little for over a year. He is sound and well today, and doing fine in his business, and working all the time.

Dr. Coe, you have cured a number of my fellow-workers, and lodge members, and all hold you in the highest esteem, for the wonderful cures you effected in their cases.

We all most heartily and gladly recommend you and your wonderful treatment to anyone who is afflicted with rectal troubles of any kind.

Your Grateful Friends,

Ronald Jeffrey

BEAUTY DWELLS IN

NYMFAUN CREAMS

Nymfaun Cleansing Cream is almost magical in its ability to search out and remove skin impurities—it brings to the skin a soft, youthful smoothness. Nymfaun Cleansing Cream comes in a stunning jet-black jar encased in a Paris-designed box at $1.00.

Nymfaun Finishing Cream has three uses: First, as a powder base, it makes your powder go on smoothly and stay on unusually long. Secondly, it protects the skin against wind and dust. Thirdly, Nymfaun Finishing Cream has a slight astringent value that gently tones up the skin, counteracting excess oil "nose shine," etc.

Nymfaun Finishing Cream comes in a sparkling jar of cerise orange, as decorative as a jewel, $1.00 the jar.

Gland Caps
AN ASSISTANT TO NATURE A BUILDER OF HEALTH

Gland Caps is a glandular compound containing the active principles of the glands of healthy young animals. In combination with these are other health-building substances. Gland Caps is an effective method of reawakening the glands through the blood itself. Nature acts slowly but surely. For this reason physicians recommending this form of treatment advise a continued course. In some cases Gland Caps infuses new life and vigor into one with the first doses, but effective results can come only with extended treatment. Since its introduction to the general public Gland Caps has received enthusiastic praise from all users.

Warning to Folks who are Constipated!

Doctors will tell you constipation is responsible for 75% of all disease. Break the habit before it wrecks your health. McKenzie's Antiseptic Mineral Oil is the new way to relief. Here's what one mother says of this splendid corrective:

"I found my two young children were not healthy as they should be. They were continually constipated and run-down and listless. Your oil was recommended and I tried it. It did wonders in a short time and I now have two healthy tots and I certainly recommend it."

Try McKenzie's Antiseptic Mineral Oil today. Money back if it doesn't break the constipation habit in 5 days.

JOHN STEVENS TO RECEIVE HIGHEST ENGINEERING AWARD

He Won Recognition as Builder of Railroads in Panama Canal Zone and China.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The John Fritz gold medal, called the highest honor bestowed by the American engineering profession in this country, will be awarded to John Frank Stevens, Monday night at the Engineering Society's building, "for great achievements as a civil engineer, particularly in planning and organizing construction of the Panama Canal, as a builder of railroads and as a director of the Chinese Eastern Railway." The award was determined by 16 representatives of the American Societies of Civil, Mining and Metallurgical, Mechanical and Electrical Engineers.

The name of Stevens, who was born 72 years ago at West Gardiner, Me., is associated especially with the Panama Canal, of which he was chief engineer from 1905 to 1907. From 1907 to 1909 he was vice president of the New York, New Haven & Hartford Nailroad, and from 1909 to 1911 was president of the Spokane, Portland & Seattle Railway, the Oregon Trunk Railway and the Pacific & Eastern Railway.

As head of the American Railway Mission to Russia in 1917-1918, Stevens directed a corps of railway experts in Manchuria.

He is credited with the discovery of the Marais Pass, said to be the best railroad pass across the Rocky Mountains and the building of the Cascade tunnel, 13,873 feet long.

Of his work in the Far East, engineers say that through Stevens and his fellow experts, "the back door to Russia," was kept open, enabling the Czech army to reenter the war on the western front.

MORE WARRANTS FOR CINCINNATI DRY AGENTS

CINCINNATI, O., March 21.—Cincinnati law enforcement officers today were predicting more arrests of persons named in four sealed indictments returned by the Federal grand jury that charged 48 Cincinnati policemen and detectives and 23 village dry agents with conspiracy to violate the national prohibition and anti-narcotic acts.

The grand jury reported seven sealed indictments late Thursday to United States District Judge Benson W. Hough. What four of the indictments contain remains hidden. It is understood that they will not be opened until next week.

United States District Attorney H. E. Mau said that grand jury would be recalled next week for further investigation adding: "The investigation has only begun, and the Government has sufficient evidence to indict additional members of the police department."

United States deputy marshals were in possession today of warrants for 11 more village dry agents, who were named in the three indictments whose "seals" were broken. Twelve dry agents have been arraigned, and half of them released on bonds of $10,000 each.

DR. WALDO BRIGGS' LICENSE REVOKED AFTER 41 YEARS

Found Guilty of Conspiring for the Sale of Fraudulent Medical Credentials.

The license to practice medicine and surgery, issued 41 years ago to Dr. Waldo Briggs, president and dean of th St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, was revoked by the Missouri State Board of Health yesterday, following a hearing on charges of bad moral character against Dr. Briggs last week.

The revocation is for the period of time until Dr. Briggs shall close permanently the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Jefferson avenue and Gamble street, or shall re-

DR. WALDO BRIGGS' LICENSE REVOKED AFTER 41 YEARS

Found Guilty of Conspiring for the Sale of Fraudulent Medical Credentials.

The license to practice medicine and surgery, issued 41 years ago to Dr. Waldo Briggs, president and dean of th St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons, was revoked by the Missouri State Board of Health yesterday, following a hearing on charges of bad moral character against Dr. Briggs last week.

The revocation is for the period of time until Dr. Briggs shall close permanently the College of Physicians and Surgeons, Jefferson avenue and Gamble street, or shall reorganize the school on a class A basis. The institution has been rated as a class C school and its graduates are not eligible to become licensed practitioners in Missouri.

Charges Against Him.

Dr. Briggs appeared before the Board of Health last Monday in answer to a citation to show cause why his license as a medical practitioner in Missouri should not be revoked. He was charged in a complaint filed by Dr. Joseph R. Sintzel, former secretary of the College of Physicians and Surgeons, with having conspired with Robert Adcox, convicted operator of an alleged "diploma mill," for the sale of educational credentials and medical diplomas.

Evidence introduced in support of the complaint included checks approximating $4800 issued by Adcox payable to Dr. Briggs and indorsed by him. The checks were obtained in a raid by Circuit Attorney Sidener on the home of Adcox. Dr. Briggs, testifying in his own behalf, declared the money represented tuition fees and donations to his school by students through Adcox. He entered a strenuous denial to the charges and placed blame for irregularities in his institution on the former secretary, Sintzel.

Defense Argument.

The hearing terminated Friday morning with argument by counsel. Andrew C. Maroney, representing Dr. Briggs, compared the elderly dean to the late President Harding in the Teapot Dome and Department of Justice scandals. Maroney excoriated the complainant, Sintzel, declaring that Dr. Briggs was the victim of one he trusted. Morton Jourdan, speaking in behalf of the prosecution, said the checks introduced in evidence showed the close connection between Adcox and Dr. Briggs and expressed the personal opinion that Dr. Briggs was guilty as charged.

The revocation decision was reached in an executive session of the State Board of Health at Hotel Jefferson Friday night and made public yesterday. Members who attended and voted unanimously to revoke the license of Dr. Briggs were: Drs. Emmett North, of St. Louis, president; James Stewart, St. Louis, secretary; T. H. Wilcoxen, Bowling Green; and J. R. McVay, Kansas City. Dr. T. A. Son of Bonne Terre attended the hearing but returned home before the executive session.

Text of Decision.

The text of the board's decision follows:

"The defendant, Dr. Waldo Briggs, having been heretofore charged by written complaint filed with the State Board of Health of Missouri as an individual of bad moral character in this, that for a long time he has participated in the sale of medical credentials, falsifying records, assisting in the preparation and sale of false and fraudulent credentials and medical diplomas purporting to evidence qualifications to practice medicine and surgery; that in his activities in connection with the sale of such degrees and medical diplomas he has been in business and associating with one Robert Adcox, known as the "clearing house" of the Medical Diploma Mill Ring, and that he has accepted large sums of money from the said Dr. Robert Adcox in exchange for literary diplomas and degrees, and the cause having been called for hearing on the sixteenth day of March, 1925, at the office of the City Health Commissioner in the Municipal Courts Building in the city of St. Louis, and, after hearing all the evidence and the argument of counsel on both sides and after a careful consideration thereof, the State Board of Health of Missouri finds the defendant guilty as charged in said complaint.

'It is therefore the order of the State Board of Health of Missouri that the license to practice medicine and surgery in the State of Missouri heretofore issued to said Dr. Waldo Briggs on the twenty-sixth day of September, 1884, by the State Board of Health of Missouri, be and is hereby revoked for the period of time until the said Dr. Waldo Briggs shall close permanently the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons of St. Louis, Mo., or cause to be reorganized said medical college and equipped as a reputable medical college within the meaning of the medical practice act of the State of Missouri as such condition shall be determined by the State Board of Health of Missouri as required by said Board by said act, at which time this order of revocation shall upon satisfactory proof that said college meets the requirements of a reputable medical college as aforesaid, be set aside and said license reissued."

Piles Can Be Cured Without Surgery

An instructive book has been published by Dr. A. S. McCleary, the noted rectal specialist of Kansas City. This book tells how sufferers from Piles can be quickly and easily cured without the use of knife, scissors, "hot" iron, electricity or any other cutting or burning method, without confinement to bed and no hospital bills to pay. The method has been a success for 26 years and in more than 9000 cases. The book is sent postpaid free to persons afflicted with Piles or other rectal troubles who clip this item and mail it with name and address to Dr. McCleary, 566 Parkview Sanitarium, Kansas City, Mo.

POLICEMAN CLUBS TO DEATH MAN ROBBING TORNADO VICTIM

West Frankfort Police Chief Vouches for Story, Without Giving Any Names.

By the Associated Press.

WEST FRANKFORT, Ill., March 21.—One case of pilfering from the dead is known of by the police. This was a man caught taking rings from a woman's hand shortly after the tornado. The would-be thief was struck on the head with a plank by a police officer and killed. Names were not revealed, but Chief Norman vouched for the authenticity of the incident.

A Concrete Example of CONROY Values

LAST week we sold a Grand Piano to a large church in Belleville.

Considering the fact that instruments from Conroys are found in the principal Clubs, Schools, Churches, Theaters, etc., there is nothing unusual about this, except—

That the nearest bid for an identical piano from another music store was 20% higher.

Hence the phrase "Conroys Alone Give Conroy Values" was fairly apparent.

Now the reason for Conroy supremacy, predominance, or whatever word seems the happiest—

Is the fact that Conroys is probably the strongest piano store, financially in America.

And, without going into economic details, here are a few facts worth knowing.

Conroys do not owe a cent to anyone.

Conroys have no outstanding obligations upon which interest charges or dividends must be paid.

Conroys are not owned or controlled by any one or more factories. The pianos we select therefore are usually above the average in quality.

Conroys, in fact, have always bought for spot cash and we do not know of a single piano manufacturer who is not "tickled pink" to get our business.

Now without throwing any more bouquets we believe you have a fairly good idea why an instrument from Conroys is a very worthwhile value.

And we hope you will keep us in mind the next time you or your friends purchase a piano or phonograph.

LIQUIDATION PAUSES AS WEEK ENDS

Evidence of Such Sales Feature of Recent Reaction in Stocks—Money Rates Eased by Tax Date.

Low, 1925	117.03	100.47

By Leased Wire from the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted financial review, says:

"While short selling undoubtedly has played a part in the drastic reactions of the past week or so, the outstanding feature has been the clear evidence of heavy liquidation. A great deal of long stock and of long grain has been sold. Recently attracted speculatory for the rise have been badly hurt. Margins have been wiped out and the persistence of the decline has uncovered fresh weakness. When a situation of this kind arises it is difficult to tell just how far the reaction will go. It is difficult to tell just who is hurt and how badly. The action of the market itself must be relied on in the main to demonstrate the actual position. In this connection it is noteworthy that the close of the week witnessed the first good rally since the break began. Some rally was becoming inevitable; the reaction had run not only swiftly, but with remarkable persistence.

Caution Still Prevails.

"Looking at the reassuring side of the picture, it is fairly clear that there is nothing radicaly wrong with business. Caution still prevails; business men still are indisposed to commit themselves for more than moderate periods ahead. There are, it is true, certain signs that intense production is getting the better of consumption. Steel output during the first quarter of the year will average 89 per cent capacity. As far as one may judge from the available data, more iron and steel is being produced than is going into consumption. And the prices of these commodities have softened. Evidently a corrective adjustment is in the making. Either consumption must arise in unexpected fashion or else less steel must be produced for a time. There is nothing to suggest, however, that the corrective recession need be more than a relatively mild one or that it need run for more than a short period. Business seems on a sound basis. Taking the year as a whole, a large volume and moderate profits still seem probable.

"Turning to the money side of the picture, recognition must be given to the comparatively easy market existing at present. The call rate on the Stock Exchange has fallen back to 3 per cent. Whether so low a rate will hold may be doubted. It probably reflects the special circumstances that center around the tax date. Pending the completion of income tax payments, the reserve banks give the treasury temporary credits with which to meet the maturities that come due on the tax date. The result is a brief period of abnormal ease. When the tax transactions are completed, however, the extra credit is withdrawn. With these considerations in mind, one may expect a firmer money market next week. Nevertheless, liquidation of the scale of the past two weeks ultimately attracts investment buying and creates an easier money market. At some point an equilibrium is reached. In any event the current tendencies in securities and industry do not suggest much in the way of a firmer money market.

Money Comparatively Easy.

"After all, the main factors affecting the future of the market probably will be found within the market itself. The principal questions are those concerned with the extent of the speculative position and the strength of its protection. As these are not measurable with any useful degree of precision, the market itself probably must be relied on for clues. We do know, however, that business is reasonably good and, averaged over a fair-sized period, is likely to remain so. We also know that the money market is comparatively easy and is hardly likely to become dear. Many sound investment stocks are selling on what seems a reasonable basis. Investors, in other words, have little cause for alarm. As for the speculative gentry, they should by now have seen the desirability of shortening sail.

"Expectations of a further advance in security prices in today's short session of the market were doomed to disappointment when renewed heavy selling about midway in the session cut short an early rally. It became evident that shorts were not surrendering their position without a struggle when Pan-American shares were heavily offered and dropped abruptly after reaching a new high for the year. This pressure caught many by surprise and tended to unsettle the list. There was support in some of the industrials, however, and the closing trend was irregular. Interborough shares attracted attention with a break of more than 8 points on heavy liquidation.

Foreign Exchanges Quiet.

"Another dull session marked trading in foreign exchanges. Fluctuations were narrow and little interest was shown in the market. Norwegian crowns pushed forward to a new high for the year, while the Spanish peseta was at a new high for the week. Improvement in the trade outlook was again stressed by observers in the financial district. The impression prevailed that the market's technical position had been sufficiently strengthened by the elimination of weak holders to pave the way for a steady recovery in values.

"Commodities were steadier, and trading in wheat and cotton was in smaller volume. Grain prices were firmer on further covering of short contracts, but in cotton an easier tone prevailed as a result of weakness in Liverpool. Support was given here, however, because no rain had yet appeared in Texas to help crop prospects.

Decrease in Reserves.

"The weekly Clearing House statement disclosed a decrease in aggregate reserves of more than $37,000,000 and resulted in a deficit of $21,819,000. Loans and discounts amounted to $5,246,000,000, a decrease of $76,691,000.

Metal Review

NEW YORK, March 21.—Trading in the steel market has continued active during the week but production appears to be running ahead of new business and buyers seem less eager. In some places the demand is still quite active but the trade in general has quieted down and the tendency of values seems to be toward a slightly lower level. On this account, the demand for second quarter delivery shows hesitation.

The demand for pig iron has been fair in some localities, although generally speaking sales have been small and the undertone only about steady.

Copper has shown a tendency to steady around the 14-cent level. This price appeared to bring in a little more demand from both exporters and buyers for domestic consumption and the latter are supposed to have considerable copper yet to buy for their second quarter requirements. The markets abroad remain more or less unsettled as the result of further resale offerings, however, and while some of the producers were asking slight advances, electrolytic remained available at the inside price.

Tin ruled easier because of weakness in London but later improved on substantial buying by consumers and covering by speculative shorts.

Lead held comparatively steady. Demand for prompt shipment was fair but buyers are cautious as consumption is reported lagging in most lines.

Zinc, although firmer, was quiet. Its strength was due to moderate stocks and the firmness of ore.

Antimony showed further weakness as to the increased arrivals.

WIDE RANGE TO PRICES ON CURB DURING WEEK

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—While a number of industrial issues were in supply at moderate concessions on the Curb Exchange today there was evidence of an aggressive buying in other sections. Public utilities stocks maintained a strong tone, being influenced to some extent by an advance of 10 points in Carolina Power.

National Power also made a further substantial gain, moving up 8½ points to 230. Brooklyn Borough Gas was established at a new high for the movement with sales at 77 and 80.

Most activity in the petroleum group was confined to the lower priced group. Standard Oils were inclined to yield at the opening which movement was continued with declines of about a point recorded in many issues.

The curb market fluctuated over a wide range during the week, being unsettled in the first three days. In the last half of the week, however, there was a return of confidence which included even the radio issues that had been under continued pressure for two months.

Some of the high priced utility issues traveled over a wide range. National Power first declined 10 points to 212 and then recovered this loss. Electric Bond & Share after selling down to 57¾ moved up five points. Middle West Utilities dropped 7½ points to 95 and then rallied.

Centrifugal Pipe was a weak feature in the industrial list, falling 7 points to the new low record of 10, but recovered about half. This loss on a rally at the end of the week. Hazeltine had the widest range of the radio issues, first falling to 15, a new low, and then rallying to above 20. There was a continued advance in Brooklyn Borough Gas, which sold at the new high record of 80.

Oil stocks also traveled over a wide range. Cities Service fell from 194 to 178 and Prairie Pipe Line yielded from 121 to 109, but recovered most of its loss when the market turned. Vacuum Oil, after falling from 90⅝ to 84¾, also had a substantial rally and South Penn, which dropped from 176 to 165, moved up again to 173.

TTON SELLS LOWER IN WEEK-END TRADE

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton market opened steady today at a decline of 5 points on March, but generally 1 to 5 points higher on overnight buying orders, encouraged by yesterday's talk of a better spot demand and bullish weekly statistics. May sold up to 25.78c and October to 25.50c in the first few minutes, making net advances of about 3 to 7 points on the more active positions, new crops being probably influenced by prospects for continued dry weather in the Southwest over Sunday.

The bulge, however, met realizing liquidation prompted by the poor showing of Liverpool, and less favorable advices from Fall River, but the market was quiet at the end of the first hour, with prices off a few points from the best prices.

Sales of cotton cloth in Fall River for the week were estimated at only 45,000 pieces.

The trading was very quiet later in the morning, but after sagging off to 25.65c for May and 25.35c for October, the market held fairly steady, closing steady at a net decline of 4 to 17 points.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton spot, quiet; middling, 25.80c.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton was unchanged in St. Louis. Quotations: Good ordinary, 21.75c; low middling, 23.75c; middling, 25.75c; good middling, 27c; middling fair, 28c.

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 21.—Spot cotton closed steady, 10 points down. Sales on the spot, 1293; to arrive, nine; low middling, 24.25c; middling, 25.65c; good middling, 26.25c; receipts, 3321; stock, 278,882.

February Cotton Spinning Activity.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The cotton spinning industry operated at full single shift basis capacity during February, the Census Bureau report today showed. Activity was greater than in January, although the number of active spindle hours was smaller, due to a fewer number of working days.

Active spindle hours for February totaled 7,868,113,831 or an average of 208, per spindle in place, compared with 8,493,240,466 or an average of 224 for January this year and 7,304,102,954 or an average of 194 for February a year ago.

Spinning spindles in place Feb. 28, numbered 37,875,960 of which 33,277,189 were active at some time during February, compared with 37,866,066 and 33,180,758 for January this year and 37,742,143 and 32,683,786 for February a year ago.

The average number of spindles operated during February was 37,865,700, or at 100 per cent capacity on a single shift basis, compared with 36,503,376, or at 98.4 per cent capacity in January this year and 33,879,600, or at 89.8 per cent capacity in February a year ago.

Foreign Exchange

(By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"The most interesting feature of the operations during the week was the action of French exchange, which was subjected to heavy offerings at times from speculative sources based on statements in regard to the currency situation of the nation and to reference to political possibilities. The buying, though, indicated the creation of new confidence in the French situation. So far the settlement of the German reparations question has been without influence on the speculative mood, but it was evident during the week that appreciation of the results of this settlement is now becoming the chief factor in the French exchange market. After a show of strength at the beginning of the week, when checks on Paris sold as high as 5.21, there was a decline to 5.14, but yesterday the market moved back to close at its previous high of the week.

"Sterling was well maintained, but transactions consisted almost wholly of those with a commercial purpose and the range was unusually narrow. An advance to $4.79½ in the first few days was followed by a reaction to $4.77⅛ for demand, after which a firm tone developed. Both Norway and Denmark made new high records for the year, Norway selling yesterday at 15.47 and Denmark at 18.15 earlier in the week. Italian and Belgian both followed French exchange to a moderate extent. Greek exchange after selling at 1.49, moved up to 1.56. Japanese exchange was in demand from many sources, and did not require Government aid in an advance that carried yen checks up to 42 cents, a new high for the year. Some central Europe exchanges were weak, Rumanian making a new low for the year at .48 of a cent for the leu and Jugo-Slavia dropped to 1.58½, a decline of 2 points.

"Another dull session market trading in foreign exchanges. Fluctuations were narrow and little interest was shown in the market. Norwegian crowns pushed forward to a new high for the year, while the Spanish peseta was at a new high for the week. Improvement in the trade outlook was again stressed by observers in the financial district. The impression prevailed that the market's technical position had been sufficiently strengthened by the elimination of weak holders to pave the way for a steady recovery in values.

New York Sugar.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The raw sugar market was unchanged today with spots quoted at 4.74c duty paid. The only sale reported was 20,000 bags of Cuban to a local refiner for April shipment. Raw sugar futures were steady on covering and a little outside buying, prompted by the steadiness of the spot market. Final prices were unchanged to 2 points net higher. March closed 3.00c; May, 3.04c; July, 3.19c; Sept., 3.34c. Refined sugar was quiet again, with list prices unchanged at 6.00c to 6.20c for fine granulated, but most refiners were still accepting orders below their list levels. Refined futures were nominal.

TTON SELLS LOWER IN WEEK-END TRADE

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton market closed steady today at a decline of 5 points on March, but generally 1 to 5 points higher on overnight buying orders, encouraged by yesterday's talk of a better spot demand and bullish weekly statistics. May sold up to 25.78c and October to 25.50c in the first few minutes, making net advances of about 3 to 7 points on the more active positions, new crops being probably influenced by prospects for continued dry weather in the Southwest over Sunday.

The bulge, however, met realizing liquidation prompted by the poor showing of Liverpool, and less favorable advices from Fall River, but the market was quiet at the end of the first hour, with prices off a few points from the best prices.

Sales of cotton cloth in Fall River for the week were estimated at only 45,000 pieces.

The trading was very quiet later in the morning, but after sagging off to 25.65c for May and 25.35c for October, the market held fairly steady, closing steady at a net decline of 4 to 17 points.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton spot, quiet; middling, 25.80c.

St. Louis Spot Cotton.

Spot cotton was unchanged in St. Louis. Quotations: Good ordinary, 21.75c; low middling, 23.75c; middling, 25.75c; good middling, 27c; middling fair, 28c.

New Orleans Spot Cotton.

NEW ORLEANS, La., March 21.—Spot cotton closed steady, 10 points down. Sales on the spot, 1293; to arrive, nine; low middling, 24.25c; middling, 25.65c; good middling, 26.25c; receipts, 3321; stock, 378,882.

February Cotton Spinning Activity.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The cotton spinning industry operated at full single shift basis capacity during February, the Census Bureau report today showed. Activity was greater than in January, although the number of active spindle hours was smaller, due to a fewer number of working days.

Active spindle hours for February totaled 7,868,113,831 or an average of 208 per spindle in place, compared with 8,483,240,466 or an average of 224 for January this year and 7,304,102,954 or an average of 194 for February a year ago.

Spinning spindles in place Feb. 28, numbered 37,875,960 of which 33,277,189 were active at some time during February, compared with 37,866,066 and 33,180,758 for January this year and 37,742,143 and 33,663,786 for February a year ago.

The average number of spindles operated during February was 37,865,700, or at 100 per cent capacity on a single shift basis, compared with 36,503,376, or at 98.4 per cent capacity in January this year and 33,879,600, or at 89.8 per cent capacity in February a year ago.

Foreign Exchange

(By Leased Wire From the New York Bureau of the Post-Dispatch.)

NEW YORK, March 21.—The Evening Post in its weekly copyrighted foreign exchange review says:

"The most interesting feature of the operations during the week was the action of French exchange, which was subjected to heavy offerings at times from speculative sources based on statements in regard to the currency situation of the nation and to reference to political possibilities. The buying, though, indicated the creation of new confidence in the French situation. So far the settlement of the German reparations question has been without influence on the speculative mood, but it was evident during the week that appreciation of the results of this settlement is now becoming the chief factor in the French exchange market. After a show of strength at the beginning of the week, when checks on Paris sold as high as 5.21, there was a decline to 5.14, but yesterday the market moved back to close at its previous high of the week.

"Sterling was well maintained, but transactions consisted almost wholly of those with a commercial purpose and the range was unusually narrow. An advance to $4.79½ in the first few days was followed by a reaction to $4.77½ for demand, after which a firm tone developed. Both Norway and Denmark made new high records for the year, Norway selling yesterday at 15.47 and Denmark at 18.15 earlier in the week. Italian and Belgian both followed French exchange to a moderate extent. Greek exchange after selling at 1.49, moved up to 1.56. Japanese exchange was in demand from many sources, and did not require Government aid in an advance that carried yen checks up to 42 cents, a new high for the year. Some central Europe exchanges were weak, Rumanian making a new low for the year at .48 of a cent for the leu and Jugo-Slavia dropped to 1.58½, a decline of 2 points.

"Another dull session market trading in foreign exchanges. Fluctuations were narrow and little interest was shown in the market. Norwegian crowns pushed forward to a new high for the year, while the Spanish peseta was at a new high for the week. Improvement in the trade outlook was again stressed by observers in the financial district. The impression prevailed that the market's technical position had been sufficiently strengthened by the elimination of weak holders to pave the way for a steady recovery in values.

Wall Street News and Comment

—SPECIAL DAILY—

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The price movement in today's short session on the Stock Exchange pursued an uneven course with no important changes in either direction. The list opened higher, largely on further short covering, and moderate advances occurred in many cases, but subsequently the market encountered the usual week-end profit-taking sales which canceled the early gains. While stocks were moving upward, the coppers, the oils, a number of the rails, and numerous specialties made the best showing.

The big feature was the collapse in Interborough Rapid Transit. This followed a report that the city administration would not render any financial help in carrying out the order of the Transit Commission requiring the expenditure of a very large sum for the lengthening of subway platforms. The stock had closed Friday at 24¼. Today it broke to 16¼.

Steel common sold above 122 at the outset but subsequently yielded a point. There was selling again in Bethlehem Steel. American Can, after having sold above 177, fell away 3 points. Pan-American B, with the short covering over, dropped over 2 points. But the market generally in the last half hour was steady, with occasional points of strength. Kennecott Copper was above 50, as compared with Thursday's low of 47⅞.

The market closed rather weak, Baldwin Locomotive down nearly 5 points. Steel common was down over a point and with selling going on in American Woolen.

The Bond Market.

The rally that was the feature of Friday's market kept up today. It was especially marked in the St. Paul group, the secured 6s selling at par. There never was any reason for this one St. Paul bond weakening, inasmuch as it is secured by deposit of first mortgage bonds, but the order of the court directing interest to be paid brought about a substantial recovery. The St. Paul 4s of 1925 were also bid up but in this case it was simply further short covering. Missouri, Kansas & Texas adjustments selling at 85 today were up nearly 2 points from Friday's low.

Among the tractions Hudson and Manhattan income 5s were in demand. Convertible oil issues went up with their respective stocks, Pan-American Petroleum 6s being the leader.

The high-grade rails were firm but not especially active. One issue in especial demand was the Virginian Railway 5s. Atchison general 4s were down only a small fraction from their high of 90 made Friday.

In the foreign group Jugo-Slav 8s recovered fractionally. French bonds were supported at recent levels but did not advance. The two new foreign offerings this week, the German Electric Power 6½s and the Finland 7s went unexpectedly well but this had no appreciable effect upon the market for seasoned foreign obligations.

New York Coffee.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The market for coffee futures opened today at an advance of 10 to 19 points on a continuation of yesterday's buying promoted by steadiness in Brazil, reports that Sao Paulo had secured another loan in this country and talk of a slightly better cost and freight demand. May sold up to 19.60c and closed at that figure, the general market closing at net advances of 10 to 20 points. Sales were estimated at 50,000. Closing quotations: March 20.79c; May, 19.60c; July, 18.50c; September, 17.60c; October, 17.45c; December, 16.95c.

Spot coffee quiet; Rio 7s, 21¼c; Santos 4s, 26c to 26¼c. Cost and freight offers about unchanged. Dollar buying rate London unchanged. Dollar buying rate unchanged. Rio market 150 to 275 reis higher. Santos, 235 to 425 reis higher. Brazilian port receipts, 31,000; Jundiahy receipts, 24,000.

Dry Goods Market Review.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cotton goods were quiet, with prices on sheeting and print cloths fairly steady. Activity in novelty wash goods steadied the market. Yarns were quiet and easier. Burlaps were quiet. Woolen and worsted mills were less active, owing to slow development of all business. Silk printed fabrics were active.

LARGER U. S. PURCHASES OF BILLS IN LONDON MARKET

(Special Wireless to the New York Evening Post.)

LONDON, March 21.—Arthur W. Kiddy, editor of the Bankers' Magazine and financial editor of the London Morning Post, in financial review today says:

"Recent experience suggests that if we are returning to the gold standard a decision should be made quickly, and, moreover, that it should be in the nature of actual action rather than an announcement of prospective action. This view is partly based on the fact that since the bank rate was raised your purchase of bills and other forms of short-dated investments here has grown greatly, thus in some respects constituting an additional menace to our position if a free gold market is resumed. Moreover, this effect, joined with your active selling of certain long-dated dollar securities here, means that we are borrowing short and lending long, which might prove awkward when the gold standard is resumed.

"J. M. Keynes and Reginald McKenna both are agreed that actual resumption of gold coins in internal circulation is undesirable. Keynes' plea for a managed currency is mainly based apparently upon the idea that it is more important to develop internal than external trade, and Keynes also lays more stress on stable prices than stable exchanges. The Times and other critics, however, maintain that while such a system might suit a self-supporting country like the United States, it cannot meet the requirements of a non-self-supporting country like England.

"There is still moderate hopefulness of improved trade later. Such hopes are partly based on the idea that an international pact would result in further strengthening international confidence. The banks manifestly are prepared for greater demand on their resources, hence the recent heavy sales in investments, while the action of the Midland Bank in increasing its capital likely will be followed by others.

"The question of a trade revival is supremely important to Churchill, for optimistic estimates of new revenue constitute almost the only chance of remitting even six pence of the income tax, especially if, as half promised two years ago, the debt sinking fund has been further raised by £5,000,000. This addition likely has been made partly because of the desire of the Government to pursue sound finance, and also because maintenance of the sinking funds is the best guarantee of firmness in British Government bonds, which is desirable for conversion prospects."

In Financial Field

NEW YORK, March 21.

The quarterly dividend of 75c a share paid by the Transue & Williams Steel Forging Corporation from July, 1923, to January, 1925, has been reduced to 50c, payable April 15 to stock of record March 31.

An initial quarterly dividend of 2 per cent and an extra dividend of 1 per cent have been declared by the Mountain & Gulf Oil Co., which is controlled by New Bradford Oil Co. Both are payable April 1 to holders of record April 1.

Net profits of A. G. Spaulding & Brothers declined in 1924 to $1,081,682 after depreciation, interest and Federal taxes, compared with $1,411,658 in 1923. This is equal to $13.33 a share on the common stock after preferred dividends, against $19.38 a share the year before.

Earnings of the Independent Oil & Gas Co. for the first quarter this year are estimated at $991,000 after expenses but before depreciation and depletion. This would compare with actual earnings of $794,372 in the preceding quarter.

Centrifugal Pipe Corporation reports net loss of $332,927 for 1924 after expenses, Federal taxes and provisions for amortization of patents, contrasted to net profit of $70,143 in 1923, which was equal to 49 cents a share on the common stock. There was a deficit of $439,412 for the year after dividends.

Alaska Juneau Gold Mining recovered in 1924 from its loss of $197,908 reported in 1923. Net income was $90,280. Gross receipts increased to $2,055,781 from $1,518,033 in 1923. Profit and loss deficit at the end of the year was reduced to $984,522 from $1,074,803 the previous year.

Boston Wool Market.

BOSTON, March 21.—The raw wool market closed the week's quiet but with dealers registering more confidence than for several days regarding the price situation. With the closing of the London sales, they professed to see the domestic market stabilized at present levels.

COMPARATIVE RECEIPTS.

	Last Week.	Prev. Week.	Year Ago.
Cattle and calves	18,116	19,976	17,099
Hogs	60,055	54,490	80,360
Sheep	6,336	6,349	3,069
Horses and mules	1,321	1,994	1,006
Total	85,828	82,809	101,534

The trend was lower in livestock markets at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week. Receipts were moderate, total arrivals aggregating 85,828 head, against 82,809 the previous and 101,534 the corresponding week in 1924. Cattle and calves alone were 18,116 head, quality of which was generally common to medium, with a fair sprinkling of well-finished consignments. Aside from some of the plain kinds which were not materially changed, beef steers averaged 25c lower and a few good, weighty droves reflected as much as a 50c drop. The bulk of steers carrying a beef covering cashed at $8.25 to $10 per cwt. and the top was $11.25. Light steers and heifers were steady in best and generally 25c lower in others. Tops scored up to $10.50. Beef cows broke 25c to 50c, bulk making $4.75 to $6.25 and tops reaching $8. Canner and cutter cows were weak to 25c lower, cutters selling largely at $3.25 to $3.75 and canners making $2.25 to $3. Bulls average barely steady with a week ago. Weighty beef animals sold in a spread of $5 to $6, followed by bolognas at $4 to $4.90 and canners at $3 to $4. Stocker and feeder steers, in light supply and fair demand, again advanced 25c. Prices varied largely from $6 for a plain kind to $8 and $8.25 for best. Veal calves scored $11 to $12 the larger part of the week, although an advance Friday placed the top at $12.50 and bulk of best at $12.25. Southern canner yearlings were strong at $3.50 to $4.50 for most.

Hog Trend Irregular.

The hog market fluctuated sharply the past week, a higher trend during the initial sessions giving way to severe losses during the latter part of the six-day period. This was due to some extent to the increased receipts at Western markets during the past week. Total number of offerings yarded during the six-day period aggregated 590,160 head, compared with a run of 575,470 for the previous week. Locally the trade received 60,055 head last week, a slight increase over the previous week's run of 55,980, but considerably lighter than the run of 80,360, received during the same week last year. The week opened with moderate runs and plenty of shipping orders, with prices advancing. By Wednesday the top had reached $14.60 for heavy hogs, the highest price paid at this market for hogs since November of 1920. Wednesday's late market saw a reaction and prices started downward, continuing on a lower trend throughout the remainder of the week. Closing sales on hogs show a decline of 5c to 10c from the previous week's close, best butcher hogs from 190 pounds and over selling in a spread of $14 to $14.10, the latter figure representing the top of the market. The lighter grades show sharper losses in some cases, sales ranging from 10c to 25c lower on the 160 to 180 pound averages. These weights sold on the close at prices ranging from $13.65 to $13.90 largely, with some sales of the choicest weight occasionally higher. The demand was never very active on pigs during the week, prices holding around steady, however, up till the later sessions. Losses are mostly 25c, although extremes show as much as 50c decline. The strong weight offerings from 130 to 150 pounds range from 25c to 50c off, at $12.75 to $13.50. Medium weight pigs, from 110 to 130 pounds, show a decline of 25c, at $11.75 to $12.75, while the lighter kinds show the same loss at $10 to $11.75 mostly, some of the plain Southwest kinds, clearing at lower figures. Packer sows sold upward to $13 during the week, but closing quotations give a top of $12.75 for this class. Market is 10c to 25c higher than the previous week. Stags are strong to 50c up, at $10.50 to $11.50. Closing quotations for the week are as follows: Best butcher hogs, $13.90 to $14.10; light hogs and shippers, 160 to 180 pounds, $13.65 to $13.90. Pigs 130 to 150 pounds, $12.75 to $13.50; medium weights 110 to 130 pounds, $11.75 to $12.75, and lighter kinds, $10 to $11.75. Packer sows, $12.50 to $12.75; stags, $10.50 to $11.50.

Lower Sheep Market.

Under increased receipts of sheep and lambs throughout the West during the past week, prices took a sharply lower trend, buyers proceeding to bear down throughout the six-day period. A generous quota of the offerings were on through and direct billing, especially during the latter part of the week, leaving about an average number on sale, considering the time of year. For 11 of the principal Western markets the total for the week in this department aggregated 222,300 head, compared with a run of 213,600 for the previous week. The week opened with a top of $17 for some good quality wool lambs, this figure dropping to $16.75 by Tuesday. There were also some heavy clipped lambs during the early part of the week that brought $13.25. By the fourth day (Thursday) buyers were bidding $15.50 on some good quality fed lambs and salesmen were forced to let their offerings go at these prices. Lambs closed on this basis, comparative prices showing declines of $1 to $1.50 from the previous week. The aged classes are generally steady, mutton ewes, however, showing a weak to 25c lower tendency. Sales of this class ranged upward to $10 on the best light kinds, with plainer grades and extreme heavies downward as low as $8. Choppers and bucks $5 to $6 and canners at $3 to $4.50. Good to choice lambs quotable at $15 to $16.25, medium to good $14 to $15 and plain to medium and culls $11 to $14. Good to choice mutton ewes $9.50 to $10.25, medium to good $9 to $9.50 and other grades $8 to $9. Good to choice Angora goats $3.50 to $4, fat Angora kids $6 to $7.50. Fat hair goats $3 to $3.50 and fat hair kids $5 to $6.50. Thin and common goats $1 to $2.

Horses and Mules.

Aside from some of the common mules which were again on a reduced basis the horse and mule market ruled steady to strong at the St. Louis National Stockyards last week. Receipts were not heavy, total arrivals aggregating 1321 head, against 2082 the previous week and 1006 the corresponding week a year ago. Included in the week's run were 100 horses and about 700 mules on commission.

The market was fairly active in big horses, southerners, eastern chunks and farm mares. There are also orders on the market for big horses for West Virginia and for mine ponies 40 to 44 inches high, thick made heavy boned. Good work mules, big mules and desirable cotton mules sold to right good advantage, the weakness, where shown, applying mainly to the little, outclassed and green offerings.

SINKING SPELL FOLLOWS EARLY UPTURN IN WHEAT

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 21.—The wheat market today reversed its action of yesterday. Prices started higher and further gains were made in later trading but the last hour saw a sinking spell that carried the market below Friday's close. For the week May wheat showed little change but new crop months are lower. Corn and oats followed wheat. Provisions also trailed the action of grain.

Conditions surrounding the wheat market are mixed. After severe break of Tuesday there was a change of heart among local traders. A decline of 21c in two weeks was more than even the most radical of bears had expected. This changed the technical position of the market and it was an oversold one instead of an overbought one. With the increase in buying power shorts were forced to do some running and offerings up until the latter part of today's session weer rather light. The situation again veers to the bear side. Our prices have advanced more rapidly than our competitors and the export trade is shifting to Canada and Argentina. The technical position of the market is now a little overbought.

The crop situation bears watching. The equinoxal period has just passed with little precipitation of any kind and in the big wheat growing sections of the Southwest the ground is thirsting for moisture. Closing prices were ½c higher to ⅝c lower. Short covering at the last caused some recovery from the low point. Compared with a week ago May wheat is off ⅝c and new crop months 6¼ to 8c. May closed $1.68½ to $1.68⅝; July $1.44⅞ to $1.45; Sept. $1.34¼.

Corn simply followed wheat today as well as throughout the week. Closing prices ⅝c to 1¼c lower and 5⅝c to 5½c lower than last Saturday. May $1.16⅝ to $1.16½; July $1.20 to $1.19⅞; Sept., $1.19⅝ to $1.19½. Cash corn basis was one to 4c higher.

Oats followed wheat but developed a stubborn tone on every reaction. Trade is beginning to feel that 40c oats are too cheap. Closing prices unchanged to ⅝c higher and compared with a week ago 1⅛c to 1⅝c lower. May 45⅝c to 45½c, July 47⅛c, Sept. 48⅝c.

Lard today was 2½c to 10c lower; ribs unchanged to 2½c lower and bellies unchanged. Compared with a week ago lard is 7½c to 12½c lower, ribs unchanged to 5c lower and belies 27½c to 45c higher.

MAY WHEAT FIRM ON LOCAL MARKET

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21.—Following a sharp decline early in the week, which carried prices considerably below last week's close, the grain market rallied and at the close of the week ending March 21 had regained most of this loss, according to the weekly grain market review of the United States Department of Agriculture. Continued heavy shipments of wheat from the Southern Hemisphere and large stocks afloat and in other commercial channels were the factors probably most responsible for the weakness in the future markets. The rapid consumption of the world's surplus, however, together with the uncertainty as to the developments of the crop strengthened the market and caused the upward trend in prices. Generally favorable weather was reported in the winter wheat belt in the United States, although more moisture is urgently needed in the Southwestern portion of the belt. Rainfall during the week was very helpful in North Central Kansas, Southern Nebraska and Iowa. Reports of the farmers' intention to plant wheat in 1925 as reported to the United States Department of Agriculture on March 1 showed an increase of about 14 per cent in the acreage intended to be planted to spring wheat, but a good part of this increase is in the Pacific Northwest, where a large percentage of the winter wheat has been abandoned.

The cash wheat market became more active after the decline and because of the light offerings of good milling grades. The bulk of the sales of No. 1 dark Northern at Minneapolis were at the May price to about 30c over, with No. 1 Northern selling at about the same range. Durum wheat premiums showed a substantial gain. Good milling qualities were scarce, while milling demand remained steady. No. 1 amber at Minneapolis sold at the close on Friday at $1.61 to about $2 per bushel. Premiums for hard winter wheat also advanced sharply with mills active buyers of cash grain. The 12 per cent protein hard winter wheat at Kansas City was quoted at the close of the week at 8c to 9c over the May price, with 12¼ per cent at 11c to 12c over and 13 per cent at 14c to 15c over the May. Country marketing fell off sharply and elevator stocks were decreasing. Export bids for hard winter wheat at Gulf ports were around 11¼c over the Chicago May f. o. b. vissel for the last half of April shipment. These bids were below domestic prices, however, and little of this wheat was actually sold for export. Red winter wheat also advanced and premiums for good milling grades were again increased as compared with hard spring. Receipts at most of the markets were scarcely equal to the current market demand.

ST. LOUIS MERCHANTS' EXCHANGE, March 21.—May wheat closed more than 1 cent higher at the week-end session, but July was at recession, while corn futures were about unchanged to lower. The general market did not hold an early advance.

Gains of 1 to more cents were shown by wheat in the early trade, corn futures also being better. Liverpool wheat closed 3d up on May and 3⅝d better on July. Winnipeg wheat was higher early.

May wheat opened at $1.67½, July wheat $1.42, May corn $1.15¼, and July corn $1.19⅝.

The three Northwestern markets combined had 443 cars of wheat, compared with 1639 a week ago, and 665 last year, Minneapolis receiving 108 cars, Duluth 64, and Winnipeg 271.

Local wheat receipts, which were 123,500 bushels, compared with 76,700 a week ago and 49,400 last year, included 28 cars local and 67 through. Corn receipts, which were 42,000 bushels, compared with 56,000 a week ago and 99,400 last year, included 14 cars local and 16 through. Oats receipts, which were 90,000 bushels, compared with 142,000 a week ago and 62,000 last year, included 32 cars local and 13 through. Hay receipts were 7 cars local and 10 through.

Primary shipments of wheat were 528,000 bushels, compared with 737,000 a week ago and 541,000 last year; corn receipts were 423,000 bushels, compared with 802,000 a week ago and 681,000 last year; oats receipts were 388,000 bushels, compared with 530,000 a week ago and 337,000 last year. Wheat shipments were 618,000 bushels, compared with 744,000 a week ago and 408,000 last year, corn shipments were 376,000 bushels, compared with 470,000 a week ago and 569,000 last year; oats shipments were 728,000 bushels compared with 651,000 a week ago and 479,000 last year.

Clearance were: 739,000 bushels of wheat, 8000 bbls. of flour and 775,000 bushels of wheat and flour.

Suitabl milling grades of soft wheat were scarce on the local market Saturday and prices were nominally higher. Fair No. 3 red, which was the best wheat offered, sold at $1.80 to $1.80¼. Nothing but a few cars of low-grade grain appeared in the hard wheat section. The market was nominally higher. Protein wheats were offered to arrive basis of 9s, 12c and 14¼c over Kansas City: May, 12 per cent, 12¼ per cent and 13 per cent protein No. 2 hard, freight to be added. Cash corn was unchanged, with exception of 1c advance in light test No. 4 yellow. Local industries and shippers took the mixed and yellow, the white being cleaned up on outside orders. There was a good local and shipping demand for oats, prices being unchanged. Wheat feed was quiet and about unchanged. Hard bran was quoted $27 and hard gray shorts $31.50 to $32. The only sales reported were those of 150 tons spring flour middlings (to arrive, prompt shipment) at $31 local, 2 cars mixed feed to go out at $31 and 1 split car (direct sale by mill), bran at $27.50 and gray middlings at $33.50. White hominy feed sold last at $38.80 bulk. Oat feed was nominally $8. Alfalfa meal No. 2 in secondhand sacks was quoted to arrive at $21.50; No. 1, $26, and choice, $27.50.

APPROPRIATIONS UP IN THE STATE SENATE

Democratic Majority Trying to Trim Them to Come Within Anticipated Revenues.

By the Jefferson City Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

JEFFERSON City, March 21.—The Senate Appropriations Committee has started trimming down the appropriation bills passed by the House which carry proposed expenditures far in excess of the anticipated revenue for the next two years. Chairman Nick T. Cave today declared that when the committee finished the bills would be within the estimated revenues.

Senator Cave declared the slashing was being done without curtailing the appropriations for the State educational and eleemosynary institutions. He stated many of the State departments had greatly inflated their appropriation requests and had sought duplicate appropriations in different bills in widely scattered sections to obtain more money than actually needed.

Thus far the committee has clipped out of the House bill a total of $3,077,094 and has more cuts in prospect. Requests from various institutions for new buildings and land are grouped in a special bill totaling $3,258,788.

Governor's Power in Matter.

The Governor may veto this bill in whole or, in part, or he may hold up the items by agreement with the institutions, to be released if sufficient revenue comes in to meet those appropriations.

As has been related the Republican majority in the House voted down on party lines a great number of amendments to the bills offered by the Democartic minority, which sought to reduce some of the appropriations and eliminate duplications. The majority went further and added one more item in the face of warnings of over-appropriations in order to pass responsibility for any appropriation reductions to the Democratic majority in the Senate. Through this move it was also hoped to force the Senate to support proposed tax increases.

Appropriation sent over to the Senate by the House total $101,834,000, of which amount $30,819,149 is again general revenue, the operating fund of the State. The remainder is against fees earned by the departments special funds and levies, and road and bond funds.

Estimate of Revenues.

The tax commission has estimated the general revenue for the next two years at $20,397,000, of which one-third will be set aside by law for apportionment to the public schools, leaving a balance of $13,580,000. That balance, with funds in the treasury at the beginning of the year, will make approximately $15,001,000 available for general revenue appropriations.

The general revenue appropriations made by the House less the one-third of general revenue to be set aside for public schools, total $24,002,483. The Senate Committee was given the job of bringing this down within range of the approximately $15,000,000 that will be available.

Senator Painter, Democratic leader and president pro tem of the Senate, said the task would be accomplished by the time the bills get through the Senate. He declared it was not the intention to pass large over appropriations on to the Governor.

Position of Democrats.

The Senator stated the Democratic majority in the Senate had not altered its caucus agreement to oppose all tax increase measures. "I don't think there will be any necessity for changing that position when we get through with the appropriations bills," Painter said. "The cutting will be done without harming the institutions or crippling the State Department."

REEDY'S WIDOW HYSTERICAL WHEN QUESTIONED IN SUIT

Lawyer's Claim to County Roadhouse Taken Under Advisement After Tearful Session.

A suit by Willis B. Clark, attorney, for possession of the Peek Inn, a St. Louis County roadhouse, in which Mrs. Margaret Reedy and her sister, Mrs. Claire Bordenave, are named as defendants, was taken under advisement by Circuit Judge McElhinney at Clayton yesterday after a tearful session in which court was recessed when Mrs. Reedy became hysterical on the stand.

Mrs. Reedy is the widow of the late William Marion Reedy, publisher of "Reedy's Mirror." He died in July, 1920.

According to Clark's allegations, Mrs. Reedy retained him as counsel in August, 1922, to defend her in three cases involving sale and possession of liquor at a fee said to have been $893. When she refused to pay this, he alleges, he filed suit and obtained a judgment in the courts, and when she still failed to pay, obtained an order of execution on the roadhouse. It was put up for sale and Clark purchased it for $300.

Mrs. Reedy, however, refused to turn over the property, declaring the sale was illegal inasmuch as she had previously deeded it to her sister. The inn, she said, was worth $40,000.

Clark then brought the present action seeking to have the deed declared invalid and the property turned over to him.

4 More Bodies Taken From Mine.

By the Associated Press.

FAIRMONT, W. Va., March 21.—Removal of four more bodies from the Bethlehem Mines Corporation's mines at Barrackville today brought the total number of dead taken from the property up to 11. All were found in the left headway of the property, which was the scene of an explosion last Tuesday night, entombing 33 miners.

FRANCO-GERMAN AGREEMENT ON POTASH INDUSTRY REPORTED

Understanding Said to Have Been Reached Both As to the Markets and Price Levels.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Official information has reached Washington indicating that French and German potash interests have entered into an agreement as to both markets and price levels. It was learned that, in effect, the former exclusively German business has become a joint French-German enterprise through this commercial alliance.

The official reports are understood to draw a clear picture of the arrangement between the French and German syndicates, now sharing possession of practically all of the world's potash beds, although it is doubtful that the Washington Government has as yet come into possession of the text or even a paraphrase of the understanding.

There is no question that officials abroad who have looked into the matter are convinced that the pact has been signed and that the two syndicates are preparing to share the proceeds of maintained price levels and nonconflicting markets.

The potash trade has been under survey by the Department of Commerce for many months as one of several studies undertaken under the $500,000 special fund voted Secretary Hoover by Congress to examine the status of various industries which produce essential raw commodities and where discrimination against American users either in price or marketing arrangements might exist.

FUNERAL TOMORROW OF DEAF MERCHANT SHOT BY ROBBER

Frederick W. Heuerman Sr. Was Fatally Wounded by Man Who Sought to Hold Him Up in Store.

Frederick W. Heuerman Sr., 62-year-old dry goods merchant, who was shot by a robber Thursday in his store at 3501 South Jefferson avenue, died at Lutheran Hospital early yesterday from his wounds.

Heuerman, who was partly deaf, apparently did not comprehend the sudden command of "hands up" which a robber gave while he was showing the youth a box of socks. The storekeeper was slow in raising his hands and the youth, who had drawn a revolver, sent three shots into his body. As the man fled Heuerman called the Lutheran Hospital and then fell unconscious.

Funeral services will be held at an undertaker's chapel at 2623 Cherokee street at 1:30 p. m. tomorrow, with interment in St. Matthew's Cemetery.

A Sure Way to End Dandruff

There is one sure way that has never failed to remove dandruff at once, and that is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon from any drug store (this is all you will need), apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

By morning most, if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and two or three more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

MURLER DEFENDANT TESTIFIES

Frank Collier Says He Doesn't Remember Shooting Son-In-Law.

By the Associated Press.

WICHITA FALLS, Tex., March 21.—Resuming testimony in his own behalf, Frank Collier, former mayor of Wichita Falls, told the jury today he did not know his pistol was loaded when he shot and killed Elzie (Buster) Robertson, the night of Feb. 14, did not remember leaving his automobile at a street corner where Robertson was killed and did not know how many shots were fired. He had never fired a pistol before, he declared.

Collier testified that only a few minutes before the shooting his wife had told him that their daughter, Frances Mary, 17, and Robertson had been intimate before the couple eloped and married in Walters, Okla., last June. Robertson had agreed to annulment of the marriage, the witness testified.

State Department Leads Nation In Bureaucratic Rulings Which Usage Quickly Turns Into Laws

Great Power Centers in Minor Officials in Washington Who Interpret Vaguely-Drawn Acts of Congress.

By Charles G. Ross.

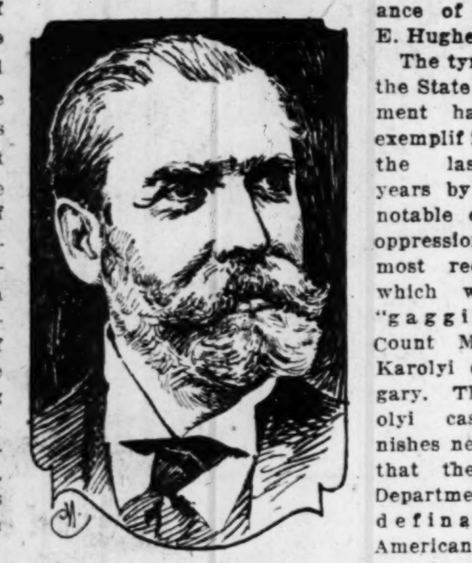
Chief Washington Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 21.

THE reign of law in the United States has become a rain of laws. Not only are there more laws than were dreamed of in the philosophy of the fathers, but there are more kinds of laws. They are cascaded upon us from all directions.

Congress and the State Legislatures pour them out in a never-ending torrent. Laws of this origin, however hard they may bear upon the normal life of the citizen, at least have the merit as a rule of not taking him unawares. Their coming is usually signaled by the newspapers; they can be prepared for, and sometimes warded off. They are written on the statute books for what they are—laws.

But the laws that appear on the statute books are only a portion of the rules by which we are governed. In addition, there is the large body of "judge-made law" expressed in opinions of the courts, opinions sometimes at variance with the seeming intent of the statute-makers. And further there is a large and increasing body of bureau-made law, comprising the fiats laid down by the departments, boards, bureaus and commissions of government.



CHARLES E. HUGHES.

Senator Couzens of Michigan has said, with special reference to the workings of the Internal Revenue Bureau, that the potency of a law itself, in comparison with that of the administrative regulations growing out of it, is as 1 to 10. This is undoubtedly true in many cases.

After the passage of each new restrictive act—a Volstead or an immigration law, for example—broad powers are delegated to some existing department or to a specially created enforcement bureau. The law is couched in general terms. Soon there begins to issue from the enforcement office a stream of regulations, prohibitions, orders, rulings and what not, to cover particular cases under the law.

Power of the Enforcer.

Some of these decrees deal with contingencies that Congress never dreamed of when it passed the act; thus the administrative official, in the exercise of his wide discretionary powers, becomes, for all practical purposes, a maker of the law. His fiats are not called law, but so long as they stand they have all the force of the statutes that are written in the books. They come, in time, to form a thick crust about the law.

It is possible, almost any day, for a minor bureaucrat to write an order working unnecessary hardship on some luckless individual, or even thousands of individuals. It is possible for this order, approved as a matter of routine by a department head, to pass without public knowledge into the l body of bureau-made law, there to become solidified by time into a well-nigh unbreakable precedent.

Not merely is it possible for things to happen, but they do happen. They are an inevitable concomitant of a bureaucratic system of government.

With the growth of the boards and bureaus at Washington, in number and in size, as the result of the growing centralization of government, there has been a proportionate increase in opportunities for and the practice of official tyranny. This is without reflection upon officials in general. Most of the servants at Washington have neither the desire nor the to abuse their power. But here is the field opened up by bureau-made law that a comparatively few men, or one man if placed, can roll up a score of acts contrary to accepted American ideals of justice and fair play.

This is what was done by the State Department under the guidance of Charles E. Hughes.

The tyranny of the State Department has been exemplified in the last few years by several notable cases of oppression, the most recent of which was the "gagging" of Count Michel Karolyi of Hungary. The Karolyi case furnishes new proof that the State Department, in definance of American tradition, has set up a political qualification for entrance into this country. It gives additional color to the charge that the department, under Hughes, was converted into the "American Local of the International Union of Tory governments."

The Karolyi affair, which was not yet been fully settled, can be put into a few words. Karolyi, who was the first President of Hungary, is persona non grata to the present Imperialist regime of that country, which fears that if he got the chance, he would restore a democratic form of government. When he applied for a visa on his passport to come to this country early this year, to visit his sick wife, he was informed that the visa would not be granted unless he would agree to refrain from political activity while in the United States.

According to a letter from Secretary Hughes to the Senate Foreign Relations Committee, which sought information on the "gagging," Karolyi accepted the proposed arrangement and gave his pledge accordingly. On his arrival in New York he found himself attacked by political enemies. The terms on which he had entered the country forbade a reply. Soon after the affair came to public notice, the State Department relaxed its gag order to the extent of giving Karolyi permission to use his own discretion as to what might constitute "political activity."

Senator Borah, an ardent free-speech champion, saw in the Karolyi case a complete reversal of the American traditional policy of extending asylum to political, religious and other refugees. He and Senator Johnson inspired the letter to Hughes asking about the "gagging." Hughes replied with a letter which they construed as a frank admission that "gag" tactics had been employed.

"Information in the possession of the State Department, which it would be incompatible with the public interest to disclose," wrote the Secretary, "made it advisable that this precaution should be taken."

That is the stock reply of the State Department in matters of this kind. The same reply was made to the Post-Dispatch when it sought to learn why Anna Lerner, the wife of an American citizen was kept in exile in Russia.

Hughes said that the department's action in the Karolyi case was based on a war-time law,

"GARY" SARGENT AT ARM'S LENGTH

New Attorney-General Weighed 300 Pounds When He Graduated From College at 27; Lives in Old House With 9 Fireplaces; Is a Mighty Lawyer

By LOUIS M. LYONS,

A Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

LUDLOW, Vt., March 21.

NOW has the frontier come home to New England. The appearance of "Gary" Sargent in the Cabinet of the President of the United States robs the West of its glamour. It seems almost a fabulous figure that has stalked out of these Vermont hills to a key post in the Coolidge administration. So much lore and legend cling to his career that it is next to impossible to distinguish fable from fact that no fabrication could improve.

It is as though a good genie of the North, striding from his lair to take over the administration of the laws, had left a trail of affectionately cherished but incredible tales that delight the hearts of children.

To set the new Attorney-General down simply as a favorite son, or as a picturesque character, is only to hint at his story. He seems to have been a sort of great-hearted Uncle Horace to the young folks and a spoiled child of half the old ladies in several townships.

His appetite, his bulk, his dress, his manners and his ways are a part of the unwritten history of Vermont. His habits and build taken together with his knack of getting on with his fellow men probably rival the picture of any character in recent American history.

He collects pipes. He collect clocks. He is an antiquarian. He is a tinker. He has the biggest office in the State of Vermont, and externally the plainest. He long had a hobby of honing razors and has often asked to be allowed to take home dull razors for even casual acquaintances to put them in shape. He reads French and Italian newspapers when he hasn't anything else to do. He still drives a pair of Morgan horses in a loose-jointed Democrat wagon, though he has three automobiles.

He Is a Camp Cook

He loves to farm and to camp out. When he goes camping, he does the cooking. Intimates who have been invited on fishing trips with him at his camp have vivid recollections of waking the first morning in camp to hear a giant's naked feet paddling around the kitchen, and then to see Sargent's great frame in a flapping nightshirt as he stood over the breakfast.

In Rutland, his nearest home city, and in Montpelier, the State capital, he is a familiar figure in buff-colored broad brim, and coonskin coat, with tails flapping out from what is described as a harness strap with which he girds his middle, letting the strap ends fall into one of the capacious side pockets. He carries a rudimentary medicine kit in his lawyer's bag and has been known to apply unsolicited first aid to sufferers from colds and sore throats upon the slightest acquaintance.

Folks who have traveled with him about the circuit of the county courts of Vermont have speculated whether the new Attorney-General would take his shoes off in Cabinet meetings. He is said to wear size 14 shoes which he has to have made to order. One day, the tale is told, the local shoe clerk hailed him going by with "oh, General, one of your shoes came up by today's freight. The other'll probably be along tomorrow."

"General" is the title of respect given to him since he was Attorney-General of Vermont by those neighbors and acquaintances who formerly used what Mrs. Sargent calls "his Irish nickname, Gary." His "Irish nickname" is short for Garibaldi. Nobody in Ludlow thinks of him as John G. Sargent. One young lady, asked the way to the house of such a personage, insisted there was none. "There's Gary Sargent and he lives right down the road a piece."

The fact is his front name would have been of little practical use as a handle for Mr. Sargent in his earlier days, before his brothers moved West. For his father had an amazing affection for the name John. It was his name and had been his father's before him. He gave it to all of his four sons. The first was John Garibaldi, the second John Rudbari, the third John Wesley. A fourth John died in infancy. Of two sisters, one was named plain Minnie, the other was May Jane Ina.

And it is with "Gary" Sargent as though the whole state were his native village. For the fame of his person and of his legal talent has long filled it. He is a man who has lived a full life within his own bailiwick, and by that circumstance has developed his career in the soil most favorable to his enormously versatile personality. It is a personality so overspreading as almost to obscure from his familiars the thought processes that will now of necessity be of first importance to the country. One can talk all day with his neighbors and never get a glimmer of a notion that this genial giant is one of the most conservative of mortals. There is nothing in the tales of his foibles and hobbies to suggest the biggest corporation lawyer in Vermont.

In few communities would it delight the hearts of the lowly to learn that the attorney for such an array of big business as the Standard Oil Company, the Boston and Maine Railroad, the Vermont Hydro-Electric Power Corporation, the American Express Co., and the Travelers Insurance Co., had been placed in command of the law enforcement machinery of the nation.

All Vermont Is Tickled

But it was like a Christmas message when the radio wafted the news of "Gary" Sargent's appointment down into the nooks and clustered crannies of the Green Mountains. All evening long his home telephone rang and an embarrassed housewife gave hesitant confirmation to the news that plainly tickled her as much as it did the rest. By breakfast the wide desk in his cozy den was littered with congratulatory telegrams. In the barber shops and on the corners, the village folks were ejaculating their delight.

"Well, I haven't heard nothin's in a long time that's tickled me so," was a typical comment from a farmer from the outskirts of town.

"They may think he's a cheese box," put in another, "but they'll find down there Gary Sargent's got something under that old broad brim."

"Suppose they'll have to laugh at him a little at first in Washington," chuckled a neighbor. "Guess Gary can stand it."

Up in Plymouth Notch, the radio announcement went to the right spot with Col. John Coolidge. The President's father was actually merry over the appointment.

"Why, I've known Gary Sargent as man and boy," he said. "Always known him. Knew his father. His grandfather and mine were close neighbors on the Ludlow road. The President has known him all his life. Used to see him as a little fellow, when Gary's father would drive down to the store with his ox cart to buy feed and groceries."

The Colonel chuckles and then laughs right out when he thinks of his early recollection of a small boy with a big appetite, who used to come over to the house where Col. Coolidge lived and help himself to a candle, light it, go to the cellar and fill his pockets with apples. His appetite for apples he has not outgrown. They wrap them in separate papers to keep them through to spring.

A peculiar man in some ways was the father of the new Attorney-General. It amuses Col. Coolidge yet to think of the old man's naming all his sons John, and the Colonel had a notion that even the girls were named John.

Five miles out of Ludlow two shabby old farmsteads flank the deeply rutted brown road. In these homes of an earlier day began the close relationship between the family of Calvin Coolidge and the family of John Garibaldi Sargent. The great-grandfather of the President and the grandfather of his new Attorney-General lived on opposite sides of the same streak of road in a time before mowing machines.

Not far from that road, on a farm not unlike either of those, "Gary" Sargent was born on an October day in 1860. His people later moved farther back into the hills, to an isolated farm nearly three miles back of Col. Coolidge's general store at Plymouth. It was so far back that the boy "Gary" didn't have a chance to go to district school until he was 10. By that time he was a great gawky boy, almost as competent as a hired man behind the plow or in the woods. Before he finished district school at 16 he could outdo his father's man hoeing or mowing, or eating fried cakes. He was a handy lad, and he inherited, together with a Yankee thrift and knack with his hands, an Irish bouyancy and keenness and from the mixture a blend of character that is suggested by the almost cynical geniality of his comfortable countenance.

His ancestry has been described by a local historian as half Irish on one side and all Irish on the other. His mother, Ann Eliza Hanley, was born on a Vermont farm of Protestant Irish immigrants. His father's mother, too, a Henmon, was of recent Irish strain. But the name Sargent has been native to Vermont almost since Ethan Allen's day.

His father was never well off, not even as comfortably off as the Coolidges in the Notch below Sargent hill. Often he had to ask a needed hand to wait for his money till some logs were sold. When "Gary" went away to school at the Vermont Literary Institute in Plymouth Union, he used to carry a barrel of crackers on a Monday morning, and a full pail of milk, and live largely on crackers and milk through the week until he was home again.

But there were long intervals between school terms when he had the rugged labor of the fields and the hearty meals of Ann Eliza Hanley's cooking to bolster his weedy growth. And who shall say that the qualities that have made him Vermont's most conspicuous lawyer were not shaped as much between school terms as within the bare walls that faced four ways to the four winds and contained such wisdom as the school ma'm for that winter happened to possess? Among the out-of-school acquirements that filled out the scholarship of young Sargent was the French he learned from a chance hand on the farm who had drifted down from French Canada. Sargent later earned part of his expenses at Tufts College teaching first year French to city lads who had not enjoyed the cultural advantage of association with a hired man.

Operated as a Barber

He taught a winter term in district school himself, when he was 19. There are mothers of grown daughters in South Reading and Five Corners who yet remember getting their lessons from the rustic giant from Plymouth. Then, older than most college graduates of his day, Sargent entered Black River Academy in Ludlow, 15 miles from his father's home, and for four years worked his way toward college entrance. He did everything that he could turn his hand to with profit. He cut students' hair, a trick he had from being the family barber on the farm. He came naturally by his zest for honing razors. And he used to work in the woods at what was counted a skilled form of artisanship then, shaving scythe snaths from ash poles. He boarded with an uncle, bringing the bulk of his frugal fare with him in potato sacks from the home farm.

This interval at the village academy rough hewed the farm lad for a mature entry into Tuft's College in Medford, Mass., where several school chums had gone before him. At Tuft's he did chores and taught French and plugged at his books, ridding himself of a burden of conditions that the handicap of his country schooling had imposed. He finished fourth in a class of 50. But he had time to be a huge good fellow among his classmates, to enjoy the rough and tumble of campus life enormously and to play center rush on the football team. He weighed 300 then and his 6-foot-4 made him a landmark. There is a story of a little opponent who had the ingenuity to dart between the legs of the co-

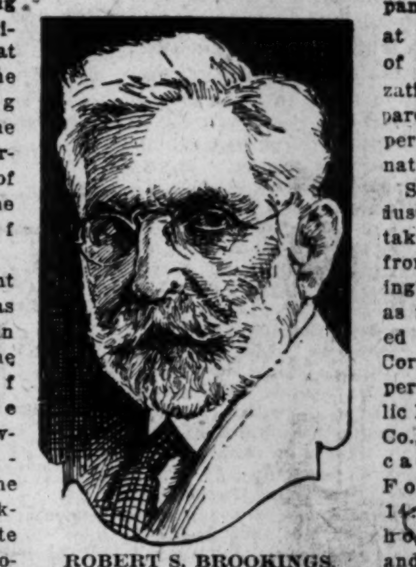
R. S. Brookings Sees Hope Of Solution of Age-Old Capital-Labor Problem

Share Holding by Workers of Big Industrial Institutions Shows Drift Toward Settlement, He Says in Book.

ROBERT S. BROOKINGS of St. Louis and Washington, whom one would call a "retired business man" if it were not for his present distinction in the field of education, but for whom the much-abused title of "educator" seems inept because of his previous distinction in business, has put some interesting conclusions into a little book entitled "Industrial Ownership—Its Economic and Social Significance," published by the Macmillan Co.

First as the manager of important St. Louis business enterprises and later as the founder and director of research activities at Washington, Mr. Brookings has had unusual opportunities to study industrial problems. For nearly 25 years he was a member of the firm of Samuel Cupples and Co. Retiring from active business in 1896, at the age of 46, he began giving most of his time and a considerable portion of his fortune to the promotion of education.



ROBERT S. BROOKINGS.

Within recent years he has built up, in Washington, the Institute of Economics, the Institute for Government Research and the Robert Brookings Graduate School of Economics and Government, formerly a department of Washington University of St. Louis, but now an independent institution. He is the head and moving spirit of all these activities

During the war, Mr. Brookings was the chairman of President Wilson's Price Fixing Committee, and in 1919 he was one of those appointed by the President to represent the public in a Labor Conference at Washington.

Such are the "credentials," as the author says in his introduction, that emboldened him to discuss what he conceives to be "the world's most important economic problem." He ventures the belief that professional economists agree in a general way with his conclusions, and expresses appreciation of helpful suggestions by Emeritus President Eliot of Harvard.

Old Problem Near Solution.

The outstanding conclusion to which the author's experience has led him is that "the Capital-Labor problem is in process of solution through the wide distribution of industrial ownership among relatively small stockholders." As indicating the extent to which corporate securities are being bought by people of moderate means, the author submits a table showing that 97,833 persons, representing 98 vocations, own 560,000 shares of the preferred stock of three subsidiaries of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. The average of these holdings, which are 76.3 per cent of the shares subscribed, is a fraction less than six shares for each shareholder.

"It is interesting to note," the author comments, "the little variation in the individual holdings in the more important (occupational) groups. Nearly 11,000 clerks hold about four shares each; over 11,000 telephone employes own a fraction less than three shares each; nearly 20,000 housewives own approximately six shares each; over 4300 executives hold a fraction less than 10 shares each; 1247 bankers and brokers own a fraction less than 18 shares each.

"The 340,000 stockholders of the American Telephone and Telegraph Co. present approximately the same picture."

With the aid of statistics, the author also develops the thesis that "capital and management in industry are now, and have been for years, receiving no greater compensation than capital and management have been receiving in nonlabor-employing activities (such as banking, etc.), and therefore the minimum necessary to retain them in industry."

Tables are presented to show the net earnings of a number of large industrial corporations for the five-year period 1919-1923. The average for 20 typical companies is placed at 7.75 per cent of their capitalization, as compared with 8.34 per cent for all national banks.

Some of the industrial earnings, taken at random from Mr. Brooking's lists, were as follows: United States Steel Corporation, 7.23 per cent; Republic Iron and Steel Co., 4.32; American Car and Foundry Co., 14.51; Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co., 13.96; International Harvester Co., 7.62; Swift and Company, 5.59; American Sugar Refining Co., 6.78; American Tobacco Co., 12.30; United States Rubber Co., 6.88; the Studebaker Corporation (the highest given), 18.17 per cent.

From the contention that capital and management, under modern conditions, are receiving no more than is necessary to retain them in industry, the author argues that "the problem now is a Labor-Public problem rather than a Capital-Labor problem."

In order that waste in industry may be checked and production increased, he maintains there must be both a modification of the restrictive provisions of the antitrust laws and a liberalization of trade-union policy.

"To accomplish the first purpose," he says, "requires as a preliminary an expert investigation of the problem in both its legal and its economic aspects. The program resulting from such an investigation would probably include provision for greater freedom of competitors to unite, to exchange information, and to co-operate in the public interest. It would certainly include provision for uniformity and publicity of corporation accounts.

"To accomplish the second purpose it is necessary to convince labor that capital is receiving only a fair return, and management only a fair compensation for service; to develop and maintain a recognition on the part of management of its responsibility to secure for labor the largest return consistent with fairness to the public and a just return to stockholders; to reduce the violence of the alternations of prosperity and depression through industrial co-operation and otherwise; and to provide by insurance as full protection as possible against unemployment. The accomplishment of these purposes requires not simply new machinery, but a constructive, co-operative policy, on the part of labor, the public and the management of industry.

"As these principles gain wider acceptance we may hope that co-operation will take the place of blind competition in industry, and co-operation between the industries and labor will take the place of the present wasteful system of bargaining. We may thus attain an economic democracy which will scale with our political democracy. This I believe to be the present trend of industry in this country."

In leading up to his conclusions,

THE POST-DISPATCH PLATFORM.

I know that my retirement will make no difference in its cardinal principles, that it will always fight for progress and reform, never tolerate injustice or corruption, always fight demagogues of all parties, never belong to any party, always oppose privileged classes and public plunderers, never lack sympathy with the poor, always remain devoted to the public welfare, never be satisfied with merely printing news, always be drastically independent; never be afraid to attack wrong, whether by predatory plutocracy or predatory poverty.

Miller and the Machine.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

WHAT a spectacle of civic righteousness the people of St. Louis now behold—the machine led by Victor Miller, marching to rescue the city from machine rule. And it will be done—or the machine will know the reason why. The machine is out to save the city from the machine! Vile once, the machine, but Mr. Miller's touch has made it pure. None can walk with him and be unclean. His shadow is the living form of virtue, and it has but to touch to make clean. The "boys" are for him from the first to the last precinct; and if the people fail to elect the "people's choice," don't blame the machine.

How long will the people be deceived by mock fights between politicians? How long will claptrap and self-praise be considered proof of high ability and great worth? Problems demanding constructive thought and effort face St. Louis Its future greatness depends upon the solution of these problems. The political ambitions of no man should be given consideration by its people. We want no Fourth of July to direct our course and guide our destiny. St. Louis is not a stage on which some man should strut to entertain us with speeches and vanities. Tumult is not worth. Speech is not accomplishment; pose is not poise. We do not need a keeper. We are not in need of a two-gun overlord. We have no desire to be cowed and talked into meek submission by some man who eats 'em alive, on a rostrum. We of this city require as Mayor a man who has proven that he is capable of constructive labor, calm of judgment, careful of speech; anxious to lead, not to dominate. Let us away with red fire and rockets, for we do not face four years of celebration, but four years of hard, serious, important labor.

Kill-Joy Sabbath Laws.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

REFERRING to the proposed law introduced by Dr. Richard Ray of Kansas City, prohibiting Sunday amusements, I am glad we have one day of recreation in the week. It is needful and restful for the laboring man. But I believe in it more of a holiday than a kill-joy day. It is a day to be enjoyed by all men as they can best enjoy it. But there are many, many good citizens whose religious convictions cause them to keep the seventh day instead of the first day of the week. As for me, I don't care which, so we have one day of rest. Not prohibitory rest, but voluntary.

The Master Himself said that the man was not made for the Sabbath, but the Sabbath was made for man. And I infer to use for his best enjoyment.

Importance of Meat Inspection.

To the Editor of the Post-Dispatch.

THE St. Louis Post-Dispatch performed a highly commendable act in calling the attention of the public to the fact that a considerable part of the live stock slaughtered for consumption in this city is being done in uninspected plants and under doubtful sanitary conditions. Your statement has elicited replies from both Dr. Starkloff and Supply Commissioner Oetting, to the effect that meats produced in this manner and under these conditions are just as wholesome as those which are produced in U. S. Government inspected houses. If the contention of these gentlemen is based upon fact, then our Government has pursued an absurd and fatuous course in expending millions of dollars and years of scientific research in its efforts to better the meat production and safeguard the public health. However we shall assume that the U. S. Department of Agriculture and the Bureau of Animal Industry know what they are about, and considering this assumption correct, it is to be regretted that their powers are confined to interstate shipments and deliveries and do not cover the entire field.

The U. S. Government protects its invalids and employes in such institutions as the Barracks and the Veterans' Hospital by purchasing only strictly Government inspected meats and provisions while, on the other hand, our tubercular patients at the Koch Hospital and our wards at the various other municipal eleemosynary institutions are fed with meats of which a great percentage is obtained from diseased live stock owing to the lack of official control.

The solution lies not in the building of a central abbattoir nor in the appointment of a corps of lay inspectors, a course which would only lead to the creation of more sinecures for political parasites, but in the passing of a State and municipal statute, withdrawing the merchants' and manufacturers' license from any establishment which cannot produce proof of Government inspection.

SANITAS.

UNCURBED PARTY POWER.

From the beginning of representative government minority representation within the Government has been regarded as an invaluable factor in good government and in protecting the people from governmental corruptions and abuses.

Without minority representation and thus with full control of all branches and offices of the Government, the party in power is enabled to do what it pleases. It is free to carry out its own partisan purposes without check or hindrance or exposure within the Government. Having complete monopoly of governmental power, its leaders may work out personal ambitions and objects, to the detriment of the public welfare, and the party organization may reap the spoils of corruption and abuses and devote its power to the furtherance of party interests at the expense of the people.

Minority representation supplies a wholesome opposition within the Government to the party in power. This opposition will give publicity to the inner workings of the Government and the purposes of the dominant party. It will expose corruptions in the Government. It will protest against abuses. It will antagonize vicious partisan measures. It will act as a check on partisan extravagance, waste, dishonesty.

What would happen in the Federal Government if every governmental officer and every member of Congress belonged to the same party? The influence of the dominant party would tend to suppress all criticism, all exposure of governmental abuses and to further all efforts to entrench the party through the distribution of spoils or favors. The people would be helpless, because they would be ignorant Public opinion would be uninformed. In the past few years when the Republican party happened to be in power in Washington, what would have been the state of the country and the condition of the people if there had been no Democrats nor Progressives in Congress? The case would be reversed if the Democrats had been in complete power.

As in the Federal Government, so in state governments and in municipal governments. Minority representation and opposition are necessary to check political power and to maintain good government in the interest of the people.

For ten years one party, it happens to be the Republican party, has been in complete possession of the government of St. Louis. It happens that during four years of this period a Republican State government has controlled the police and election commissioners. We have had Republican Judges on the bench and Republican law enforcement officers.

We do not pretend to say that the wave of crime which has reached a terrifying climax is due to Republican monopoly of offices. But the responsibility rests with the Republican party and their official representatives. We mention the Republican control of State law enforcement agencies as merely supplementary to the complete monopoly of the municipal government by Republican office holders.

Is this situation good for the government and the people of St. Louis? Is it good to have representatives of only one party in all offices? Is it good to have a Republican Mayor, with Republicans only in other elective offices, controlling all the administrative branches of the government, and only Republicans in the Board of Aldermen?

What check is there in our municipal government on the multiplying of offices, padding of payrolls, extravagance in expenditures, graft and corruption in contracts, incompetence in office, the passage of vicious measures? There is no opposition within the government to criticize, to expose, to protest.

We submit this extraordinary municipal situation to the thoughtful consideration of the citizens of St. Louis. We ask them whether it ought to be continued until party power runs riot in this crisis of the city's progress, or whether it ought to be checked by putting a salutary curb on the dominant party?

The voters of St. Louis have an opportunity to change the situation, we believe, to the very great benefit of the city. They can elect a Mayor in opposition to the party in power. He is a good man who happens to be a Democrat; the party label is of no consequence except as an assurance of a change. They can elect a group of Democratic Aldermen. They can elect both, and thus provide for a thorough revelation of the inner workings of the government and for reforms where reforms are needed.

This question of providing a wholesome check on uncurbed party power is one of the most important in the municipal election.

A JAZZ ADVERTISEMENT.

If American parents would take a tip from the inspired ad writer for a Grand Rapids furniture company, all their perplexing problems would be solved. No longer would they worry over the effect of the joy ride, the silver flask and the jazz orchestra on their children, because these things would "lose some of their insidious allure when parents have learned to appeal more artfully to the pride and imagination of youth." Now, the way to make this artful appeal is to buy your furniture at Blank Bros.

It's very simple. Just "select from time to time an attractive piece of furniture—bearing, perhaps, the coveted shop mark of ——— and you will be astonished, in a year or so, to observe how enchantingly the atmosphere of home has changed * * * how thoroughly your children will enjoy being home, surrounded by beautiful objects." A touch of Chippendale here, a dash of Sheraton there, a suggestion of Heppelwhite yonder, and blooey goes the age of jazz.

But even if you scorn the brilliant idea of Blank Bros.' ad writer, he knows his young folks and he is frankness itself in describing their habits. His ad is headed, "Competing With the Silver Flask—and the Jazz Orchestra." In this dry and moral country, such advertising matter is truly a sight to behold. Could anything be more truly expressive of the jazz age, which it offers to destroy?

THE WHEAT GAMBLER MUST GO.

Last January the top price of wheat was $2.04 1-4. On Tuesday of the past week the price had fallen to $1.50 1-4. In this descent there was a fall of 15 cents in one market day, something unprecedented in the experience of veteran traders.

In consequence there is anxiety in circles which heretofore have looked complacently upon the market's pyrotechnics, have smugly accounted for such fluctuations by the law of supply and demand and have opposed efforts to curb such so-called market operations.

When Senator Capper of Kansas, for example, undertook to curb manipulation of this character by imposing a prohibitive tax on speculative dealings in futures protests were made by exchanges.

In the light of the last two and a half months' experience, however, the Merchants' Exchange seemingly has reversed its attitude. The Exchange now has under consideration a plan to curb trading in futures.

The president of the St. Louis Exchange remarks that most of the speculation in wheat futures is done in Chicago. Capper made the same charge, only in lurid language. He described the Chicago wheat pit as the biggest gambling hell on earth, compared to which Monte Carlo was a piker's retreat. The difference in rhetoric need not concern us.

The wheat market has been manipulated up and down in defiance of the law of supply and demand, to the uneasiness and possible serious injury of business generally.

Such a situation may occur any time.

This whole system of speculation is wrong; morally wrong and commercially wrong.

It is obvious, further, with 20 years of market history as a background of proof, that this gambling in food stuffs, which our laws permit, victimizes the farmer and consumer alike.

The system must be smashed

JUDGE OLSON AND THE SHEPHERD CASE.

The indictment of William G. Shepherd for the murder of his millionaire ward, William Nelson McClintock, is largely the result of a blood feud prosecuted through legal channels. Since Judge Harry Olson's brother died under circumstances which seemed peculiar to him, Judge Olson has nursed a distrust of Shepherd. When the McClintock boy died of typhoid, this distrust flared into the conviction that Shepherd was the murderer. The complete story of this strange case is told in to-day's "True Life" section of the Post-Dispatch.

In other days Judge Olson was a prosecutor of renown. He brought these talents, together with his long legal experience, to bear in an effort to fasten guilt upon Shepherd. That has not yet been done, but at least the case is now assured of a thorough trial. Judge Olson has never had any official connection with the case, his job as Chief Justice of the Municipal Court being entirely unrelated to the case.

Love for his dead brother, and for the son of an old friend seems to have been his dominating motive. It is no exaggeration to say that the task he essayed was herculean. He was everywhere denounced as a man out of his mind. His charges were listened to with amusement. For a long time, official prosecutors remained scornful and inert as he urged them to act.

But Judge Olson was resourceful as well as persistent. His deadly earnestness and his skillful tactics finally resulted in the startling testimony of Dr. Faiman, and the indictment of Faiman and Shepherd on the charge of murder. Judge Olson, over odds which seemed insuperable, has won his fight. The law will now take its course, and the innocence or guilt of Shepherd will be determined.

"THE FIGHTING JEW."

Sam Dreben has passed to his further reward. Many men in many lands will receive with varied emotions the news that "the Fighting Jew" will fight no more. A rover all his days, and a confirmed gambler, willing to stake his last cent or his life, he spent a marvelous course of years to end them in peaceful Hollywood.

Born in Russia, he came to the United States as a young man and joined the army. He fought in the Philippines, and in the Boxer rebellion he was with the stoutest at the looting of the Forbidden City. Quitting the army he fought in revolutions in Nicaragua and Honduras, then in Mexico under the dreamer Madero. After that he joined Villa and stayed with him until, one day, he worked a machine gun in a dusty fight in the streets of Mexico City. Then he abandoned war, settled down in El Paso and was in a fair way to make his fortune, but when Pershing went into Mexico in pursuit of Villa, Dreben went along as a scout. He returned again to peaceful pursuits, but was among the first to volunteer when the United States entered the World War.

Well fed and well groomed and round as an Alderman, he looked more like a successful broker than a soldier when he joined up, but as a Sergeant in France he committed one more deed of superlative daring. Again in the front line of battle, he called for volunteers, was joined by 30 men, charged a machine-gun nest, killed 40 of the enemy, captured four machine guns and swaggered back to his own lines without the loss of a man. This won him a Distinguished Service Cross, the Croix de Guerre and the Italian medal for valor. The armistice signed, Dreben again abandoned the profession of arms and resumed the task of making his fortune.

Maj. Hines, now Major-General and Chief of Staff of the Army, once said that Dreben was the greatest Jewish soldier since Joshua.

PANETELA.

Yes, Luella,
Mr. Bryan
Has occasioned
Quite a smile:
Here he has Been evoluting
In a fashion
All the while.
Where he once
Was of the people,
Sharing
Whatsoever care,
Lo, hath Fortune
Smiled upon him,
And he is
A millionaire!

What amuses
Everybody,
If it can
Be put in words,
Is the parallel
Suggested
Here with fishes
And with birds.
Born as no more
Than a tadpole
In some puddle
Of the Platte,
Here he turns up
As a goldfish,
And in Florida
At that!

Maybe Darwin
Postulated
Things less
Credible than this,
But the chance
Is not so likely
As to prejudice
Our bliss.
Anyway,
His own upspringing
Out of life's
Unmoneyed lees
Matches anything
That science
Claims our own kind
Did from trees."

So we have it,
Little girlie:
Doubtless many Lusty wails
Filled the forest
When the foremost
Monkeys got rid
Of their tails.
No doubt
Each of those Forsaken
Filled the young Earth with His wow,
Just as all
The common people
Bawl vociferously
Now.

So it goes,
My sweet Luella:
What though something
More than kind,
Saving us
Is not exactly
What our saviors
Have in mind.
While they do seem
To desire us
Joys beyond
The lot of clods,
At the last
Our bent backs serve them
As a take-off
To the gods.

Criticism in Japan must be all that we have ever heard about it. More than 2200 poems were submitted this year for the imperial poetry party. The subject was "Mountain Against Sky." The winner said:

> I see Mount Horomuki at the end of a field where are fleecy, sheeplike, scattered clouds.

The winner of second prize said:

> Excepting Mount Hira, all peaks, including Great Hie and Small Hie, stand bold against the sky.

The Empress said:

> Mount Fuji alone is white with snow, although the tops of other mountains melt in the blue of the sky.

The Prince Regent said:

> I would that posture of the world is like Mount Takeyama, which stands bravely against the sky.

The Crown Princess said:

> I see the high peak of Mount Fuji against the sky, as I look back, after worshiping the rising sun on the New Year day.

The Dowager Princess said:

> I see clearly mountain after mountain, all clad with snow, ranging against the sky.

The judges, so we are left to infer, did not award the prizes to members of the royal family. Some judges!

From a news story:

> Lady Carnarvon testified that Mrs. Denistoun stayed in her house in June, 1921, and afterward.
> "She often used to talk to me about her husband," the witness said. "She always referred to him as 'Tiger.' She said he was an awfully sweet man, very kind, and a great gentleman, but as a husband an absolute washout."

Anyway, there was a wrecked home.

From the current report of the Board of Commissioners of Tower Grove Park:

> Injuries caused by careless driving and the vandalism of visitors are of serious moment. It may seem almost unbelievable that bird-houses cannot be maintained in the park, because boys wantonly destroy them. Worse still, perhaps, squirrels are pursued as game, whereas in most city parks they are welcomed as interesting pets. Wild life of every variety wages a losing fight for existence. Movable property is viciously misused. During the time when skating is possible on the small lake, new benches have been burned in bonfires, despite provision of wood for that purpose, and many newly planted trees and shrubs have been broken by the skaters.

That is what boys always were like, but it strikes us oddly now that we have Boy Scouts.

The MIRROR of PUBLIC OPINION

PUBLIC WANTS TUNEFUL OPERA

From the Chicago Herald-Examiner.

CIVIC opera in Chicago has completed its third season of the five seasons it has been guaranteed by its generous supporters. This year it has not closed with the financial success it deserved.

Why?

The reason may be that the producers maintain too firmly a doubtful point of view. Perhaps they offer music too much for the purpose of education and not enough for the delight of entertainment.

Civic opera, we presume from the name, was conceived to appeal to the citizens as a whole; not alone to a small number of persons who are cultivated musically.

Only one quality of music has the appeal necessary. That is tunefulness. Operas that are not tuneful may be superior music, but to everyday persons who enjoy tuneful opera that superior music is uninteresting and monotonous.

Tuneful music can also be good music. That we conclude from certain operas in the repertory of the Civic Opera Co. Those operas are the ones the public most gladly pay to hear. Those, perhaps, are offered too seldom.

We point to the recent presentation of "Martha." That is a tuneful opera. It was received, as usual, with utmost enthusiasm by the public.

On the other hand, we point to the presentation of "Mefistofele," which in spite of the magnificent performance of Chaliapin was, to many persons lacking technical musical education, who were familiar with Gounod's "Faust," a distinct disappointment, except as a spectacle.

It was disappointing chiefly because the opera is not tuneful. Or perhaps because its few good melodies have never got into the barrel-organ repertoire. The Boito opera was written first. But even so the "Faust" of Gounod has been more popular. • • •

Education is free; but people pay for entertainment. That is why universities have to be endowed, although horse racing and pugilism flourish without the need of subsidies.

Opera to be popular must first of all be entertaining. Those operas which are most entertaining—and therefore most popular—are those which are most tuneful.

EDUCATION IN KANSAS

From the Janesville Gazette.

Mr. White says it makes a lot of "blind, rough-necked, yelling rooters for a cheap cause." We are in fear that in this advancing age William Allen is becoming somewhat soured on the world. When he was a candidate for Governor of Kansas last fall a few cheers from a lot of "blind, rough-necked rooters" would have been joyous music to Bill. Among the bleacher and grand stand ornaments of inter-collegiate games there have been noted from time to time, middle-aged and old men who have defied laryngitis and astonished the natives with their vocalism potency at center, for a handy gain, and the tale concludes that Sargent was incapacitated for pursuit by his own hilarity over the method of attack.

He was 27 at graduation, and he meant to be a teacher. He went home and got married that summer to a lovely girl named Mary Gordon. While he was waiting for school terms to commence, William W. Stickney, one of the rising lawyers of the State, suggested that Sargent study law in his office. So the bridegroom-graduate moved into his father-in-law's house and Mr. Stickney gave him desk room. Three years later he was admitted to the Vermont bar and to partnership with his employer. They were three lean years of hard study and hard labor at odds and ends of employment outside, but settling years, too, and years of village hospitality, forming friendships and habits of work and play that have stuck by him through a generation.

As the law business expanded the senior partner was called more and more frequently to the State capital, to the city corporations, and to a level of legal affairs above the grade of the country law office. That left the miscellaneous cases to Sargent. He hoed his row in the lower courts, defending local miscreants, battling over trifling sums, making and breaking wills, learning the role and the give-and-take of the courtroom. His picturesque person and his fellowship stood him in good stead. Juries found no malice in him. Folks like to have "Gary" handle their cases. But with the expansion of the business there were bigger calls on his talent. Mr. Stickney became Governor. He made his junior partner one of his secretaries, and that let him into the innards of politics in Vermont. He has never been outside since, though he has often been an influence that was felt only at the center of the political situation.

He won a reputation as State's Attorney for Windsor County a quarter century ago by his success in catching and convicting a pair of notorious murderers of a local sheriff. Col. Coolidge, as a deputy, served most of the writs he issued. Ten years later he had the same job on a statewide scale when he was elected Attorney-General of Vermont in 1908 and again in 1910. He was a pioneer in the new post, and it was his work to co-ordinate the tie up in the work of the State Attorneys. His work carried him to the far corners of Vermont and the fame of his bulk, his appetite and his canniness with juries spread throughout the State. He used to drive his span of black Morgans to the courts within a day's ride of Ludlow, and into districts but infrequently accessible by the rather incidental railroad service.

A Mighty Trencherman.

He had to put up at farmhouses and small inns, and at all of them he is vividly remembered. He would drive in at wayside farms perhaps late in evening, after a long day, order supper and kick off his shoes while he waited. Then, after a meal to stagger even a Vermont farm wife he would lie down for a cat-nap full length on the sitting room floor. A few minutes would have him snoring and when his snores woke him he was up and off to reach the county seat for a case the next day.

Or if he arrived by train, he would curl up in the smoker, remove his big shoes and spread over two seats before lighting up and looking around for fellowship. It was his habit to chat with any sociable fellow-travelers, and he was a friend of the conductors. Often he worked on the trains, but a book or a magazine was as likely to have his attention.

Home from these legal jaunts, he put on old clothes and worked around the garden. Or if he could snatch a day or two clear, he would hitch up his Morgans and drive the family out to the old farm, a dozen miles from Ludlow, where he loved to rusticate in a camp he had largely constructed himself. Here his intimate friends were often entertained. It was the base for fishing trips. He loves to fish, and he is an expert marksman.

All his life he has been a comfortable man who knows how to drop the world's business for a day's boyish play. Perhaps that accounts for his tremendous capacity for work. Often he works in his [illegible] den until 2 in the morning. But between stacks of work he has snacks of ease that he hugely enjoys. His work has taken him to Boston, New York and Washington. He has represented his State in its long standing boundary dispute with New Hampshire. He has headed the State Commission on revising the statutes. He has had such offices and honors as he has cared to accept, and the cream of the law business of his State.

But he has kept his office always in his home village, and there, too, is his only home. The homely habits of the village have guided his career. To go into his office is like finding a diamond mine in an old barn loft. You can search the village and find no trace of Stickney, Sargent and Skeels. When it is pointed out to you, you see a plain brick store block, with a milliner and a druggist in evidence on the ground floor and a lodge [illegible] over the central door. No [illegible] of a law practice.

On the second floor a yellow [illegible]board strip across a plain door [illegible]es the firm name in black. But that is not Sargent's lair. [illegible] the hall to a pine door without even a letter plate, that you [illegible] have taken for the entry to [illegible]eroom, you enter the office [illegible] Garibaldi Sargent.

He has literally hired a hall. It used to be the lodge hall. It is 36 feet by 27, striding it off. Great carpets cover the floor; law books line the walls. A desk of cabinet size is toward one side, with pipes and tobacco and writing materials littered upon it. Near the center of the room is a wood stove that would hold a quarter of a cord of maple, unsawed. It is fed with four-foot sticks. Down one side of the room, half the length of a subway station, stretches a bench-like table on which open law books overlap at the statutes to which they were last opened. An office for a Titan. The other partners have offices of normal size, and in cubby holes beyond are desks of the clerks and law students who seek advancement in the law with the distinguished firm of Stickney, Sargent and Skeels, even as "Gary" Sargent did 35 years ago.

The Sargent Home.

Perhaps it is in his home that you complete the picture of Sargent. It is a plain brick house, just across the bridge from the village. It sets a distance back from the road, and the faded bricks look just a trifle shabby for an Attorney-General. They have weathered Vermont for nearly a century, and have sheltered the Sargent family 35 years. Mrs. Sargent's father, who made a comfortable fortunate for a villager of 40 years ago, by peddling fine dress goods through several counties, left it to his daughter and son-in-law, permitting them to start their married life in greater comfort than would otherwise have been possible. You see the red barn as quickly as you see the house and the orchard and hen house beyond. Inside, the first impression is of substantial comfort with no sign of wealth. The second impression is of the ticking of many clocks. After that impressions blend into suffusion of warmth, coziness, tasteful old-fashioned furniture, and the smell of pine logs in several great open-fires.

A tall, dark, friendly woman makes you welcome and takes your wraps. Mrs. Sargent fits into the lurking hospitality of that home too perfectly not to have been the creator of every detail of its arrangement. A gracious, gentle hostess she is, one it is hard to picture transplanted from the home atmosphere she has fashioned here to the great transiency of Washington.

There is a plate of rosy, big apples on the table. Such apples in March any guest would set down as artificial, until by invitation he is munching one and exclaiming that is McIntosh, by all the rules of Pomology outseasoned two months ago. But keeping apples is only one of the secrets of the homes making at the Sargents. They are boiling sap this week. Son-in-law Frank Pearson is superintending the sapping. Those pine logs whose pungence attracted you from the hall are cut on the woodslope that stretches up back of the house. The 75 acres of farm stretches away from the window, a big panel pane with a seat full of begonias and ferns.

A cluster of pipes is over the fireplace. There are nine fireplaces in the brick house. Five of them were going the evening of Mr. Sargent's appointment. Clocks, a great many old-fashioned clocks, each with a history, stand on tables, mantels and in the corners. There are nine in one room, any one of which would gladden the heart of an antiquarian. Mr. Sargent not only collects these clocks, but he repairs them and makes whole new wooden works for those that have gone past timekeeping days. A bench in his workshop, in the ell off the living room, is cluttered with clock works and pipes and tinkers' tools.

A story of an old neighbor who loves him like a spoiled nephew accounts for one of the clocks. It had long attracid his collector's eye in the humble cottage of a neighbor who worked for his father. He insisted, on every call he made there, that his old friends must leave him that clock in their will. Finally, one day the dear old lady who had humored him since his doughnut-begging days said, to him, "You might as well have the clock. You'll never be satisfied without it. Just as soon as we get another clock to tell time, you can have it." The next week a handsome modern clock came by express from Rutland and Mr. Sargent got his antique.

The eye roams from clocks and fireplaces to the book-filled mantels and the loosely arranged book shelves in the corners and through the door in the shop. A full set of Kipling fills one mantel. Beveridge's life of John Marshall is impressive in its solid volumes. There is an Encyclopedia Britannica back against the wall and Reminiscences of Chauncey Depew alongside the various Coolidge books that have recently been published. The Waverly novels are there, Wells' history, books by Jack London' and Winston Churchill and all of W. W. Jacobs. There are Bacon's Essays and Whately's Annotations. Sterne and Thackeray and Tom Jones flavor his workshop shelves, and there are several books on fungi and bird life and a considerable sprinkling of best sellers, present and past. A great framed enlargement of a snapshot of Mr. Sargent rests on the piano. It is his wife's favorite picture of him, taken at his camp and showing him with long, curved pipe, flannel shirt, knee breeches and exposed galluses. His thick brown hair is gray only at the edges. His girth is lessened since that picture was taken. He was ill two years ago with a diabetic attack that took nearly 100 pounds of his giant heft, but his family insist he is in first-rate health again now and that the heavy burden of his new office should not wear more heavily on him than the grist of work he has habitually turned out.

The family consists of his wife and daughter, Mrs. Gladys Gordon Pearsons, her boyish husband and their 7-year-old daughter, Mary Gordon, pal of her grandfather, and as great a horse lover as he is. She has three Shetland ponies and the villagers see her go at full canter through the main street most any afternoon with a little girl neighbor riding at her side.

Then there is Peggy, the Irish setter, who has been a family companion for 14 years. Dapsey, a yellow tiger cat, and other lesser cats, including a short-tailed, half-breed of bobcat. They raise much of their food on the farm and use their extensive garden to extend hospitality to friends. A Boston hotel waiter who once served them during a visit has received a basket of chickens yearly ever since. It is such old-fashioned courtesies that make the Sargent home and family one of the best liked in old Windsor County.

His brief case is one of the best known lost parcels in the Green Mountain region. He is always leaving it on trains or in offices, but he never worries about it. It always comes back to him. Conductors know him on all the trains. All the transient hostelries around the State have put him up. His genial fellowship fills the little village of Ludlow near to bursting with good will and downright gladness at his appointment, as though a close relative had been honored. STATE DEPARTMENT LEADS NATION IN BUREAUCRACY which Congress had not repealed, giving the President the power to fix regulations for the admission of aliens to this country. He explained that the President had designated the Secretary of State as the official to make and enforce these regulations.

Karolyi, in other words, was silenced by bureau-made law, and according to information given the Senate committee, the gagging was done at the behest of Count Szechenyi, the Hungarian Minister at Washington, husband of the former Gladys Vanderbilt.

Borah and Johnson contended that in enacting the law referred to by Hughes, Congress never imagined that it would be invoked to deny free-speech and sanctuary to refugees.

If Karolyi was "gagged" to satisfy the desire of a foreign government, as the Senate Committee was led to believe, then the case in that respect is exactly comparable to the case of Carlo Tresca. In dealing with Tresca, the American Government plainly used its powers to suppress an adversary of an existing foreign regime, and used them at the direct request of a foreign ambassador. This is something new and revolutionary in American statecraft. Tresca, like Karolyi, offended a Tory government.

The Tresca Case.

Tresca was the editor of Il Martello, a radical Italian paper published in New York. His attacks on Mussolini were distasteful to the then Italian Ambassador, who complained to the State Department. Tresca was arrested. Apparently there was no way to hold him to account for his political opinions, but he was convicted and sent to jail nevertheless. He was convicted for publishing a three-line advertisement for a birth-control book.

It was brought out a the trial that the advertisement was received and put in the paper while Tresca was out of town, but that did not save him. Though the sentence for such an offense is commonly 30 to 60 days, Tresca was put away for a year and a day in the Atlanta prison. The business manager who actually accepted the advertisement got off more lightly

Taking into consideration the disproportionate character of the punishment, President Coolidge last month, at the instance of Italian labor societies and the American Civil Liberties Union, lopped eight months off Tresca's sentence, so that his term will expire in May.

The case of Anna Lerner, with which readers of the Post-Dispatch are doubtless familiar, furnishes a perfect illustration of a number of points—the secrecy which the State Department throws around its workings; the narrowness of the bureaucratic mind; the proneness of high officials to stand by a subordinate when the prestige of the department is supposed to be involved; the way in which a good law, through bureaucratic interpretation, can be perverted to a bad end.

When Anna Lerner, 20 years old, tried to come home from Russia in the summer of 1923, after working as a stenographer in the Kuzbas Industrial Colony, the American Consul at Riga, on instructions from Washington, declined to give her a visa on her passport. It was not the Consul's fault; the orders came from J. Preston Doughten, a State Department attache, head of the Visa Bureau of the State Department.

Doughten was unmoved by the fact that Anna had spent virtually all her life in America, and while in Russia had become the wife of an American citizen and World War soldier. It made no difference to Doughten that Anna was ill in a strange country, that her husband was eager to have her join him in America and was fully able to support her; that a technical hair had to be split to infinitesimal fineness in order to keep her out. Doughten split the hair.

Anna's plight was traceable to the Cable Law, enacted in her absence, which provided that marriage should not change a woman's citizenship. Her father, a Russian, had died in this country without becoming naturalized; she was therefore technically an alien, and the passage of the Cable law left her an alien after her marriage. If she had married a few weeks earlier, under the former citizenship laws, she would have been an American citizen and would have been entitled to come home at her pleasure. Seizing on the Cable Law, Doughten forbade her to enter the United States. He said vaguely that she was a "dangerous" alien.

The Post-Dispatch brought the case to the personal attention of Secretary Hughes. For what he termed "sufficient" reasons, he upheld Doughten. Inquiries by Senator Norris developed the fact that all the State Department had against Anna was a letter she was supposed to have written while in America, a letter which the department described as betraying communistic tendencies. Norris went after the department roughshod. He declared that it's methods, if persisted in, would eventually "establish a rule of despotic control, break down our jurisprudence and destroy the very cornerstone of our Government."

Finally, the passage of an amendment to the immigration act, freeing the wives of American citizens from the quota restrictions, opened the door for Anna to come home. She arrived a few weeks ago after a banishment lasting 18 months. The Capitol still stands and the flag still flies over the White House. A Post-Dispatch reporter who interviewed her at Baltimore found that the "dangerous anarchist" of the State Department's dreams was a mild-mannered, mild-opinioned girl weighing 90 pounds.

The Case of Magon.

Then there was the case of Ricardo Flores Magon, the Mexican, who died in jail after repeated requests for clemency had been denied. If Magon had a Mussolini or a monarchist Hungarian party to appeal for him, the event might have been different. He had only the Mexican Government, which at that time, being of socialistic tendencies, was in bad odor with Mr. Hughes.

Magon was a "philosophical anarchist" who fell afoul of the war laws by publishing a "manifesto" in a little Spanish newspaper at Los Angeles. The statement was a bombastic attack on existing forms of Government. There wasn't a word in it about the war of the United States against Germany, but the article was held to be obstructive of recruiting and Magon was sent to prison for the maximum term permitted, 20 years. The Mexican Congress voted Magon an allowance while he was in jail. When death ended his term his body was taken to Mexico City and interred with state honors.

Whenever the representatives of the Mexican Government inquired at the State Department about Magon, they were told that his case was wholly in he hands of the Department of Justice. Nevertheless, the Department of State could have procured his release. This was proved a few months later, when President Coolidge, soon after taking office, released Librado Rivera, who signed the offending manifesto with Magon and was sentenced to jail with him. In explaining the release of Rivera, the Department of Justice said that the President acted in response to a request from the Mexican Government submitted through the State Department. This was after Mr. Hughes had decided to recognize Mexico.

Illumination is thrown on the working of Mr. Hughes' mind by his refusal to recognize Russia; by his policy of selling arms only to an established Government—a policy which sets up the United States, the child of a revolution, as the guarantor of the status quo in other countries; and by his recent opposition to the Borah bill for the restoration of sequestrated alien property. It seemed to be Mr. Hughes' idea, with regard to the Borah bill, that we oughtn't to do anything which would offend or reflect upon France and England, which likewise are hanging on to the property seized from German nationals.

The manners of the State Department, in other words, are irreproachable in the charmed circle of the great powers; it saves bullying moods for Anna Lerners among persons and Governments.

BROOKINGS SEES HOPE OF SOLUTION OF OLD CAPITAL-LABOR PROBLEM

the author contrasts the "personal management" of industry by owners, during the time he was most active in business, with the present separation of management from ownership. This development of the last 40 years, described as promising to be "one of the most far-reaching and significant changes in the organization of business that has occurred within the period of modern industrial history," has been brought about by the wide distribution of securities in the hands of the public.

Offspring of Trust Movement.

This separation of management from ownership, the author sets out, was a by-product of the formation of trusts, and turned out to be the most important enduring result of the trust movement.

"The trust movement," he says, "in the sense of a general trend toward monopoly, is dead. There is no indication of the disappearance of competition, either as a protection for the public against exploitation or as a stimulus to efficiency. But the related movement for the diffusion of the ownership of capital is proceeding at an accelerating rate. It has been stimulated by the great increase in recent years in the number of incomes large enough to afford a margin of saving, by the Liberty bond campaign, by 'blue sky' laws, and perhaps by the superior value of tax-exempt bonds to large holders. It has been promoted by the deliberate policy of many large corporations, as is illustrated by the great increase in the number of stocks of low par value and the splitting of $100 shares into no-par stocks of lower book value.

"Innumerable cases could be cited of leading corporations in almost every line which have sought a public distribution of their securities within the last five years. The newest phases of the movement are the drives for customer ownership conducted by public utilities and the encouragement of employe ownership, adopted as a policy for industrial and commercial concerns.

"It requires no stretch of the imagination to discern the possibility that through increased production per capita and through the distribution of this increase in an increased wage, ownership will eventually be diffused among the largest part of the population. Thus we may become as near to the realization of the aspiration of Socialists as is consistent with the maintenance of the industry and thrift which private ownership has fostered and which has made civilization possible."

The separation of management from ownership, in the author's view, has had two important results: First, it has made it possible to distinguish the return of ownership from the return to management, and therefore to set up standards of a fair return to each; second, it is changing the ideas of managers about their own responsibility.

"Management is coming to occupy the position of trustee, and to maintain its position it must serve the public with the greatest efficiency consistent with a fair return to labor, and with the return to capital necessary in order to keep it in industry. This change is not yet complete. It is a trend rather than an accomplished fact, but it is a very promising trend."

In its relations with labor, it is the duty of management to pay "the largest wage that is consistent with the public interest, including in the term "public" the numerous other industrial groups which must pay the resultant cost.

"Labor can no longer be treated as a commodity. Management must first provide the minimum necessary return to capital and to labor, but in addition labor is entitled 'to derive a gain from the surplus earned in the business above these necessary costs.'

"A sound system of economic morality," the argument proceeds, "demands, therefore, that instead of our paying labor merely a market wage, the minimum necessary to secure its services, capital should receive the market wage necessary to secure its services, and the balance should go to labor and the consuming public."

BROOKINGS SEES HOPE OF SOLUTION OF OLD CAPITAL-LABOR PROBLEM

The first practical question, the author says, is that of finding a fund to be distributed as additional wages, in order that the standards of living among the bulk of the working population may be raised.

No Redistribution of Income.

No material improvement, he argues, could be made in labor's position by a "redistribution of existing income—the panacea of the agitator." The conclusion is emphasized that "our chief hope of making further progress is in the increase of per capita production."

"There are vast possibilities of improvement," the author says, "in the utilization of technical knowledge and the equipment we now have. Industry is shackled by devices which are intended to prevent the abuse of corporate power, but which serve also to prevent the most beneficial exercise of that power.

"It is at this point that wide ownership by the public and the consequent broadening of the responsibilities of management comes in, as new sources of industrial progress. For, if by separating management from capital, new standards of fair return for each can be set up, and if managements, by choice or by necessity, limit themselves to securing fair returns for themselves and for the stockholders, any increase in production must accrue either directly to their employes in the form of wages, or indirectly to the public as consumers."

To enable the new form of manageemnt to secure better productive efficiency, the author urges a revision of the anti-trust laws so as to permit more extensive co-operation. The aim, he says, must be to penalize the abuse of power instead of the possession of power. In any regulation, the objective should be "the protection of the consuming public against extortion, rather than the protection of weak competiors from elimination."

"The popular slogan of less Government in business and more business in Government," he says, "might in time take the form of wiser Government in business, to the end that the people be better served."

Accompanying a revision of the antitrust laws, there should be "a liberalization of trade union policy." The case for this is argued, in part, as follows:

"Just as the antitrust laws originated in a conflict of interest between the management and the consumer, so militant trade unionism originated in a conflict of interest between the management and the workman. Just in proportion, therefore, as we develop a standard under which managers are the genuine representatives of the interests of their employes as well as of the stockholders, the function of the trade union ceases to be one of warfare and comes to be one of co-operation.

"Herein lies the possibility of an increase of industrial production as great as that promised by legalizing co-operation between managements. It is well known that labor possesses vast untapped resources of productive power which cannot be made use of so long as management and labor stand in the attitude of mere bargainers, each striving to get the better of the other.

"Labor's opposition to the introduction of labor-saving devices retards the improvement of technique. So do many of their regulations concerning the classification of jobs, the shifting of men from one task to another, the method of payment, and other working conditions. All regulations which aim to curtail productiveness (beyond the necessary safeguards against excessive strain and too long hours) serve merely a bargaining purpose. They may help those who are strongly entrenched, but they do so at the expense of others; and usually their cost to the many is out of proportion to their value to the few."

To bring labor into an attitude of complete co-operation with management, it is necessary first of all, the author says, to free labor from the fear of unemployment. He suggests that the unemployment problem might be solved by some form of group insurance. The thought is stressed that management could promote wholesome relations with labor by giving full publicity to prices, profits, salaries, wage scales, etc.

"So long as managers withhold from their employes the details of their financial operations," the author maintains, "so long will it be difficult to shake labor's conviction that capital is getting more than its fair share of the product of industry. Capital has much to gain and little to lose by showing its hand to labor."

BROKEN ARM CAUSES DEATH

Gustave Stefanske, 52 years old, of 3019 North Market street, died Thursday at Mullanphy Hospital from an infection which resulted from a compound fracture of the right arm, suffered when he was jolted from a wagon he was driving at Glasgow avenue and Madison street, March 16.

Doctors amputated the arm in an effort to save his life last Wednesday. He died the following day.

LD BE ADMINISTRATOR OF S. ANNA BRADLEY'S ESTATE

drew H. Watson, in Petition, Says His Name Was Erased From Her Will.

A petition was filed in the Pro- ate Court Friday by Andrew Watson, head of a law reporting company, asking to be appointed administrator of the estate of Mrs. Anna L. Bradley, who died March 10, leaving real estate valued $75,000. The name of William H. Corcoran, an attorney, appears in the will as executor, but Watson asserts it was Mrs. Bradley's intention that he should handle her property and she appointed him executor when the will was drawn seven years ago, but his name was subsequently wrongfully erased.

Corcoran told a reporter that he had handled Mrs. Bradley's affairs for 20 years. He denied Watson's name had been erased from the will. Mrs. Bradley was known as the "landlady bountiful" because during the time she had control of her property she did not raise rents on her tenants. Corcoran was appointed guardian for her about two years ago, since which time he has had charge of the rents.

Masked Intruder Escaped.

By the Associated Press.

CANTON, Ill., March 21.—Mrs. Edna Smith, a widow, reported that last night a man broke into her house. She turned on the lights and called for help, and neighbors came as the man escaped. He wore a white mask, was shabbily dressed and weighed between 130 and 140 pounds, she said. There have been several similar visitations here and in one case a murder occurred.

KILLS HIMSELF WITH RAZOR

Insurance Agent Told Sister He "Had no More Friends."

John Hollmann, 63 years old, an insurance agent, died on the way to city hospital yesterday afternoon after he had slashed his throat with a razor in the bathroom of his home, 4544A Clarence avenue.

Shortly before he was found in the bathroom he remarked to his sister, Miss Wenana Hollmann, with whom he lived, that he was tired of living, as he "had no more friends." He said he was going to shave and went into the bathroom. He was found a short time later on the floor, with his throat slashed and the razor beside him. His sister told police she knew of no other reason for her brother's action.

Pope Receives Mrs. Smith.

ROME, March 21.—The Pope today granted an audience to Mrs. Alfred E. Smith, wife of the Governor of New York, and other members of her party, who are spending a week in Rome, including Miss Emily Smith, daughter of the Governor.

Upholstered Furniture From Our Factory Needs No Introduction

There's a reason why Prufrock-Litton's Upholstered Furniture is found in so many St. Louis homes. We guarantee every piece that leaves our factory! Then, too, the designs are different, and, because we manufacture and sell direct to you, the price is as low as is consistent with quality.

For over fifty years the name "Prufrock" has been identified with high-grade Upholstered Furniture and the discriminating know its genuine worth. And the same quality, complete stocks and economical pricings prevail on our Dining Room and Sleeping Room Furniture!

Editorial

Protect Yours!

Using our earnings where they will do the most good is an art, but not all of us are artists.

It matters not how much or how little we may have there are many ways it can be used to good advantage if we but do a little THINKING ere we use it.

Many are the dollars wasted which could have brought untold benefits had reason been resorted to.

Analyze investments, of whatever nature, from every angle before you put your earnings into them and you will have solved one of the most perplexing problems of everyday life.

Good investments are plentiful BUT don't forget to enjoy yourself.

Convict Escapes From Train.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, March 21.—While 11 guards sat in a sleeping car with 38 prisoners, en route early today from Detroit to the Federal penitentiary at Leavenworth, Harry Wise, alias Myers, slipped from his shackles and jumped to freedom. When the train was brought to a stop, no trace of the prisoner could be found. Wise, an alleged narcotic addict, had been sentenced to 18 months in prison. He is 32 years old.

Just how many open model cars, a year or two old, will be prematurely turned into the used car market this year, due to the popularity of closed models, especially of the coach and five-passenger types, is a subject engrossing automobile manufacturers.

Some estimate it will run into the hundreds of thousands. Others believe the eight-in-line motor, now being produced by 12 or 14 companies, also will cause premature discarding of year or two year old four and six cylinder cars, and that at least a half million cars, which otherwise would continue to give satisfaction to their owners, will be traded in this year.

12,754 CARS OF 73,633 INSPECTED IN NEW YORK HAVE DEFECTIVE BRAKES

The Bureau of Safety in New York City has just closed its first year's inspection of brakes on motor vehicles. In the last 12 months 73,633 motor vehicles on the city streets have been inspected. Of this number 10,517 had one defective brake, and the drivers were required to report back with the defective brake fixed for reinspection. In 2239 cases both brakes were defective, and the drivers were fined, the penalty usually being $25.

The brake inspection squad consists of 10 uniformed policemen. They stop drivers of cars, particularly of the heavy type, make running tests, and, if brakes are found faulty, see that they are put in good condition.

PLANS FOR TOURIST CAMP TO BE DISCUSSED THURSDAY

A meeting to hear a report on sites for the proposed tourist camp in St. Louis has been called for 7:30 p. m. next Thursday, March 26, at Central High School. A report is scheduled to be made by the Plans and Sites Committee. Frank W. Bradley, chairman of the Associated Clubs' Tourist Camp Committee, will preside.

CONFERENCE ON AUTO THEFTS TO BE CALLED SOON

Many Insurance Men to Attend — Bureau to Curb Thieves in St. Louis Is Proposed.

A conference on ways and means of curbing and preventing automobile thefts is to be called within the next two weeks by Roy F. Britton, president of the Automobile Club of Missouri. To it will be invited representatives of all insurance companies doing business in this territory, the police, the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association and the Automobile Club of Missouri. Already more than 50 representatives of insurance companies have promised to attend.

"The stolen car," said Britton, "not only involves a loss to the owner or the insurance company, but also becomes a menace in the hands of the thief or his accomplices. St. Louis has a good record in recovery of stolen cars, but a bureau, supported by all interests affected by automobile thefts, would enable more effective work. The conference will be on broad lines, covering prevention of thefts, recovery of stolen machines and punishment of thieves."

While the number of thefts of automobiles in St. Louis has increased in the last few years, the number not recovered by the end of each year has decreased. In 1918, 2241 cars were stolen in this city and 1396 were recovered, leaving 845 missing at the end of the year. The number of thefts was least in 1920, when only 788 cars were stolen, while 641 were recovered, leaving only 147 missing when 1920 ended. Last year, 3353 cars were stolen, according to the records of the Automobile Club of Missouri. Of these, 2785 were recovered, while 568 were checked off as total losses.

Plans for State Road Work In Southern Illinois in 1925

Construction Program for All Main Highways—Grading and Fills May Delay Some Work Until 1926 — Little Hope of Action This Year On Sneed Highway Through Herrin to Mt. Vernon.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 21.—Difficulties with heavy grading and failure of fills to become solid enough to support pavement will delay completion of a number of hard-surfaced roads in the southern part of Illinois. It is feared that much of the work cannot be finished before 1926.

Soft fills are especially troublesome. On cross-State Highway No. 15, from Belleville through Ashley, Mt. Vernon and Fairfield to Mt. Carmel, there is a 2½-mile stretch over the Okaw River bottoms near Okawville that must remain unpaved indefinitely. Laying concrete, the engineers say, would only result in the pavement sinking out of sight. So the State will have to maintain the present cindering on that stretch so that it may be in good shape for summer travel.

Condition of No. 12 and No. 15.

No. 15 has been an all-weather road for some months, although a graveled stretch between Fairfield and Albion occasionally has been troublesome after heavy rain. About two miles of pavement remains to be laid on this stretch this spring. Its completion will give a strip of concrete from Belleville to Mount Carmel, except for the cinders near Okawville.

Several gaps on No. 12, from East St. Louis through Lebanon, Trenton, Breeze, Carlyle, Sandoval and Flora to Lawrenceville and the Indiana line, have not been paved. Until the engineers deem it safe to lay concrete on these stretches, motorists will have to be content with cinders or gravel. Except for these fills, No. 12 is paved clear through to Lawrenceville. Bids were received Monday for completing about six and one-half miles of No. 12 from Lawrenceville to the State line, and indications are that that part of the route will be paved before the end of the summer.

Progress on No. 13.

As has been told in this section, much work is planned for this year on No. 13, from Belleville to Carbondale via New Athens, Sparta and Pinckneyville. Contracts have been awarded for paving most of the stretch between Belleville and New Athens. There already is paving between Lenzberg and Marissa. Pavement from Marissa to Sparta has been put under contract. A dispute over rights of way is delaying preliminary surveying of No. 13 from Sparta to Murphysboro. A contract has been awarded for paving from Murphysboro to Carbondale.

The remainder of No. 13, from Carbondale to Shawneetown on the eastern border of the State, is scheduled for completion this summer. Most of the work on this long stretch has been finished and what little remains to be done is under contract. It still is a question whether the narrow pavement on both sides of Harrisburg on No. 13 will be widened, reconstructed or left as it is this year.

By September, the engineers expect, No. 16, which runs across

WOULD ABOLISH BOULEVARD STOP IN BRENTWOOD

Automobile Club Representatives Will Appear Before Town Board Tuesday Night.

Next Tuesday night, representatives of the Automobile Club of Missouri will appear before the Board of Trustees of Brentwood, St. Louis County, to advocate abolishing the boulevard stop in that town at North and South road and Manchester road. Since this boulevard stop sign was erected nearly two years ago, many motorists have been arrested and fined or taxed costs.

"The marshal at that point told me arrests were averaging about 30 a week," said Gus Vahlkamp, attorney for the club. "As far as I could learn, strangers who happen along in the daytime, when traffic is not heavy, are grabbed and assessed $4 each if they do not observe every detail of rules as to boulevard stops. But Brentwood people going or coming when traffic is heaviest in the morning or evening are not molested."

"Our objection to this boulevard stop," said Manager Matt Morse of the club, "is that there is no necessity for it on such a rural highway. It does not promote safety, but does provide revenue for all connected with making the arrests. At one time $3 costs and $5 fine were assessed; now the motorist must pay $3 costs and $1 fine, a total of $4. That means, according to the Marshal's own statement as to arrests, at least $120 a week to be divided.

"There is more traffic where North and South road crosses Clayton road, but there is no boulevard stop sign at this point—merely a warning sign. Virtually everyone heeds the warning and slows down for that crossing. There are no more accidents there

This new English Coach is as different from other closed cars, as a closed car is from an open one.
That statement, we know, will not go unchallenged.
That is why we make it.
Because here is the most advanced improvement in enclosed car designing.
It dares to be original, finer and different.
Just what people want who are tired of the drab sameness of closed cars.
It is the one car that stands out distinctly in any company.
It is the one car you must be sure to see.
Why buy just "another automobile." If you are going to get a new car get a NEW one.
This English Coach will give you an altogether new pride of ownership; together with new luxuries and new comforts.
Of course it has four-wheel brakes, balloon tires, and is fully equipt at factory. Nothing omitted.

HANNIBAL-'ST. JOE' HIGHWAY WORK TO BE PUSHED IN 1925

Bridge Building Progresses Rapidly — Grading or Paving Contracts Are Let or Advertised.

By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

MACON, Mo., March 21.—A large amount of construction work is this year scheduled on Missouri State Highway No. 8—the Pike's Peak-Ocean-to-Ocean route across Northern Missouri from Hannibal through Macon, Brookfield, Chillicothe and St. Joseph to Colorado and the Pacific Coast.

Throughout the winter road-dragging crews have maintained the highway in fairly good shape for travel.

Contracts for over seven miles of grading and bridging east of Macon have been let to the Gray Construction Co. of Mt. Vernon, Ill., and to J. K. McClarrin of Alexandria, Mo., for a little over $35,000. The contractors expect to begin work about April 1.

Bridge Work Pushed.

Work on the bridge across the Chariton River has been moved steadily along through the winter and is now 85 per cent completed.

The bridge across Salt River will be completed next week, with solid concrete floor.

The largest bridge in division 2 is a 650-foot span at Grand River, Chillicothe. It is 75 per cent completed.

Steam shovels are being pushed this week through the large hill east of New Cambria, in Macon County. An elevating grader outfit is at work near Callao.

A section of grading and bridges will be let from Brookfield to the Livingston County line in April. When this contract was let all the grading and bridge work between Clarence and Chillicothe will be under contract.

In bids to be received March 28 at Jefferson City for road work there will be included three sections of road in Randolph County. These will cover the road from Moberly to the Macon-Randolph County line. The proposal calls for grading a 30-foot roadway, building bridges and culverts and nine or 18 foot concrete pavement.

Other Work Planned.

It is said unofficially that a contract will be let this year for paving No. 8 with concrete from Macon to Brookfield.

Materials and equipment are being assembled at Monroe City for work on No. 8 between that place and Shelbina. Construction is to be pushed on that 20-mile strip, which is a part of the Chicago-Kansas City through highway. A carload of mules was unloaded at Ely last week for use in the roadwork, and the excavator and dump wagons are already on the job. Forty-seven more cars of materials are expected soon, when work will begin in earnest. The construction camp will be about five miles from Monroe City. The C. H. Atkinson Paving Co. of Watertown, Ia., has the contract for the grading. The concrete slab will be laid by the Stamford Construction Co. of Atchison, Kan.

The engineers at division headquarters here are getting ready for a big summer's work. All the bridges will be completed this year, the highways graded and some hard-surfacing done. While construction is going on the department will make every effort to keep roads in shape for travel.

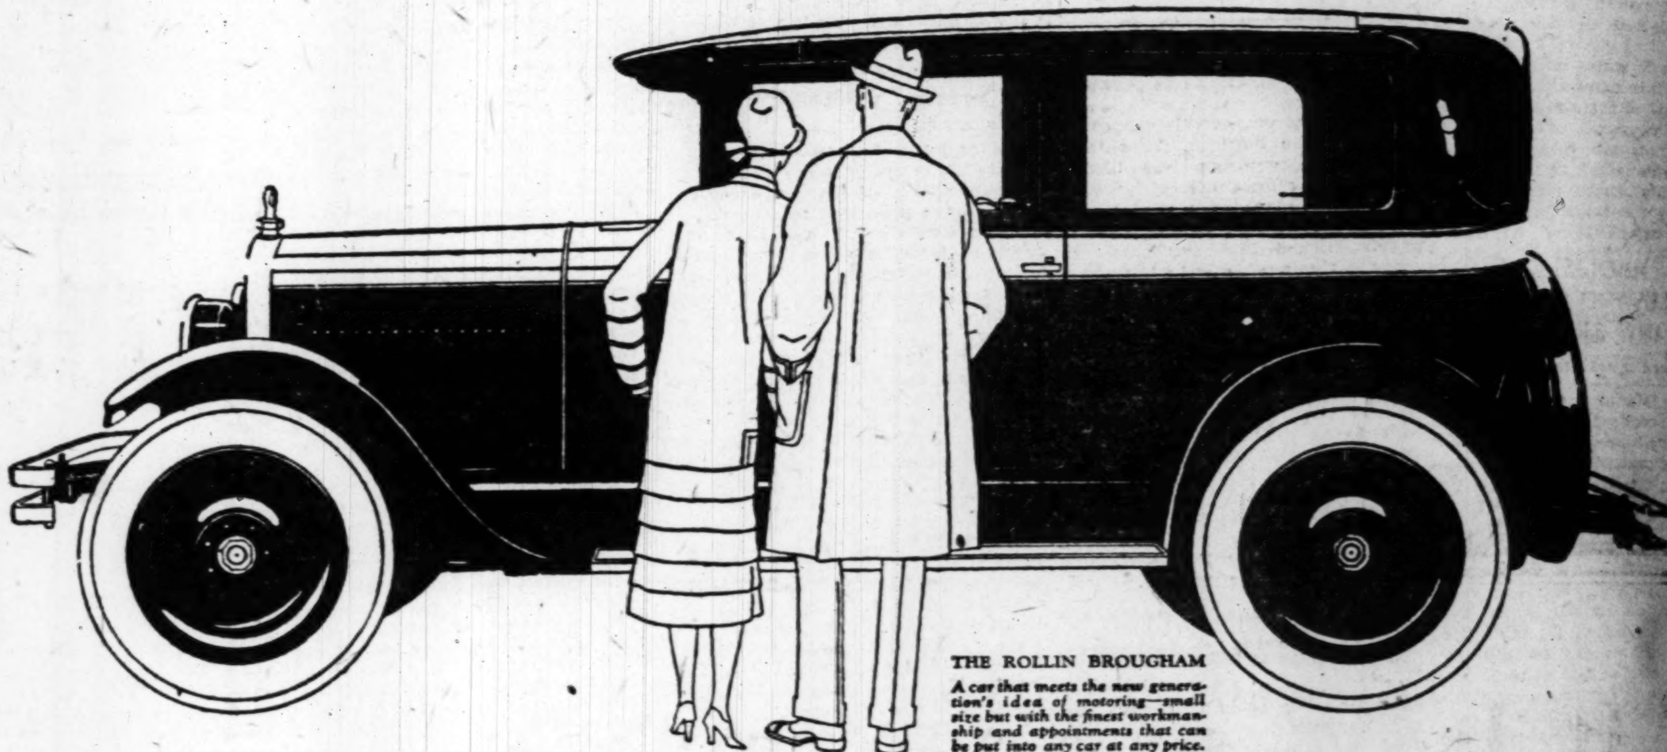
PRODUCT OF GENERAL MOTORS



THE ROLLIN BROUGHAM
A car that meets the new generation's idea of motoring—small size but with the finest workmanship and appointments that can be put into any car at any price.

A certain class of people have been asking for this car for the last ten years

MORE and more every year have asked it. "Give us a fine small car," they said. "We want a car with style, with all the quality of the good big cars, but we don't want a family chariot."

This is the class of people for whom the Rollin car is made. People who have pride in what they own. Women who dress smartly, who have tasteful homes, who like niceties of environment. Men who prefer good tailors, hand-sewn shoes, pedigreed dogs.

Young people mostly and people who stay young.

Perhaps this is a new generation of motor-car buyers. A generation that will not be content with the older motor-car fashions and standards.

At any rate, they have welcomed the Rollin with open arms. For some it is a second car for the city and suburban driving, which is ninety-nine one-hundredths of their motoring, while the "big car" stands in the garage. But for the great majority of owners, the Rollin answers every purpose.

It is swift and luxurious and untiring on even the longest trips. It handles easily in traffic, darting around the larger vehicles like a swallow through a flock of crows. It is easy to park, easy to turn, and its marvelous four-wheel brakes stop it instantly at the press of a pedal.

Is this a new car? The bodies, yes. The chassis, no. The motor is the powerful small motor of European type which Rollin H. White designed and which created a sensation among automobile engineers more than a year ago. Many thousands of Rollin cars were sold and have been tested through an entire season of motoring in all parts of the United States. This motor is built like a watch. No finer piece of mechanism can be found in any car at any price.

It has been proved economical—twenty-five to thirty miles to the gallon of gasoline. It is light in weight but extremely powerful and incredibly smooth in operation. It is good for a hundred thousand miles. Now this superb chassis has been fitted with bodies of the custom type which are richly finished and beautiful in every line. Upholstery and fittings are the kind you associate with cars costing five thousand dollars and upward. Cushions are deep and luxurious.

The minute you turn the handle and step inside, you know that this car is built to last. Get a Rollin and you have a car of which you can be proud for many years to come. The finish on all bodies is Duco, in smart color combinations. Balloon tires, of course!

Come and see the Rollin. Drive it yourself. Examine it from every angle, in your most critical mood. It was the most talked-about car at the New York and Chicago Shows. It attracts attention in any company because it is the car that people of taste have been looking for. The Rollin Motors Company, Cleveland, Ohio.

ecial to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 21.— early $80,000,000 was collected om the motorist in gasoline taxes 1924 and was used or is available very largely for road mainnance and construction, accordg to the Bureau of Public Roads the United States Department of griculture. Thirty-five of the 48 ates, and the District of Columa, imposed a gasoline tax, the te ranging from 1 to 3 cents the llon in all states, except Arkans, which levied a 4-cent tax.

The total collected during the ar was $79,734,490, and of this 8,711,326 was made available for d construction and maintenance der supervision of the State ighway Departments. A large are of the remainder was turned er to county and local road nds. In a few states a portion as turned over to general funds, hool funds and for miscellaneous rposes.

Although 33 states impose a gasline tax, this affects only about lf of the country's motor veicles, since several of the states hich do not impose a tax have rge registrations. The amount id annually by the average mo- rist where the tax is collected is 10.30 the vehicle.

"Towns in Illinois which enacted dinances that caused motorists necessary trouble soon found emselves shunned by motorists, d it was a matter of months, after the obnoxious laws were rescinded before the stream of profitable traffic returned to them."

The Brentwood trustees have proposed that the Automobile Club of Missouri furnish about 40 posts at Dead Man's Curve on the North and South road, saying that they would supply the cable and labor for erecting a guard. The club's officers are not disposed to consider this proposal as long as Brentwood officers continue to arrest motorists because of the North and South and Manchester roads boulevard stop.

PLANS FOR STATE ROAD WORK IN 1925 IN SOUTHERN ILLINOIS

State from Staunton (just northeast of Edwardsville on No. 4) through Mount Olive, Litchfield, Hillsboro, Irving, Witt, Nokomis, Pana, Tower Hill, Shelbyville, Windsor, Mattoon, Charleston and Kansas to Paris, will be completely paved, except from Staunton to Mount Olive. Much of the pavement has been laid on this route and the rest is under contract. Disputes over rights of way have held up work between Staunton and Mount Olive, but it is hoped that they will soon come to an end.

Sneed Highway Prospect Poor.

There is little of encouragement for Williamson County motorists who have been agitating for early paving of the so-called Sneed highway from No. 13 north through Herrin, Christopher, Valier, Sesser and Waltonville to a junction with No. 15, or of State highway No. 148, which follows virtually the same route to Mount Vernon on No. 15 and is among the roads to be paved under the $100,000,000 bond issue.

The latest information here is that this Williamson County road will have to wait until the summer of 1926 before the first work will be done on it. Thus far, only the general route has been planned. No surveying is scheduled until needed rights of way have been obtained, which may mean that the highway will not be completed before 1927.

It is said here that No. 148 probably will be routed between Herrin and Christopher so as to go through Ziegler.

The people of Herrin are especially desirous of having this route paved, because Herrin is the only city of 10,000 or more population in Southern Illinois which is not already on the State hard road system.

A road now traverses the route proposed to be paved by the State as No. 148, but in a number of sections it is only a seasonable highway. Zeigler is off this road in the same way that Herrin is off State Route No. 37, the paved road from Mount Vernon south through Jefferson, Franklin and Williamson Counties to Marion on No. 13.

Routing the Herrin-Christopher-Waltonville highway through Ziegler, it is pointed out, would necessitate crossing the Big Muddy River twice, whereas the straight route northward would entail one crossing. Ziegler, however, is regarded here as likely to be on this route.

Plans for No. 14 to Carmi.

Route No. 14, which begins at No. 2 (the north and south highway from Cairo through the center of the State to Rockford and the Wisconsin border) and runs eastward through Perry, Franklin, Hamilton and White Counties to Carmi on Route No. 1, probably will be completed this summer as far eastward as McLeansboro, in Hamilton County. Contracts have been awarded for paving the unfinished part of this route between Benton and McLeansboro. Contracts have just been let for grading No. 14 from McLeansboro to the Hamilton-White County line, but completion of this stretch this year is doubtful. Heavy grading will be necessary between the Hamilton-White County line and Carmi and, as no bids have been asked for, highway officials hardly expect to be able to start laying concrete on this section before 1926.

What Will Be Done on No. 1.

Completion of Route No. 1 southward from Carmi to Metropolis, which is at the extreme southern end of the State, will be delayed considerably because of grading difficulties. This route is now concrete from Chicago to Carmi. Contracts were awarded recently for paving No. 1 from Carmi clear through to within about 1½ miles of Harrisburg, but the remainder of this stretch to Harrisburg must be graded before bids can be asked for. It is believed here that no concrete will be poured this year on that mile and a half strip.

Bids were received Monday for completing 6½ miles of No. 1 south form Harrisburg this summer. Surveyors are busy on the next four miles, but because of uncertainty as to the amount of grading necessary, paving of this four-mile strip probably will be held over into 1926. The rest of the stretch to Vienna will be completed as soon as possible, for it is under contract. The 14-mile stretch south from Vienna is being graded, but prospects for paving it this year are not good. The rest of No. 1 is built into Metropolis.

Road to Pope and Hardin Counties.

For a while it looked as if paving on Route No. 34, which starts at Harrisburg, where Nos. 1 and 13 intersect, and runs down into Pope and Hardin counties, would be delayed until 1926 because of heavy grading and fills. But late information is that all the grading on No. 34 is completed or under contract from Harrisburg to Elizabethtown, in Hardin County, and that while no plans have been made for paving, yet an effort will be made to finish this road this summer.

Completion of this highway to Elizabethtown and to Golconda, in Pope County, will open to motorists for the first time a picturesque part of the State.

The routing of Highway No. 33, which begins at Robinson, in Crawford County, on No. 1 and runs westward through Oblong, Willow Hill, Newton, Wheeler and Dieterich, has been changed so that its western terminus on Route No. 11 is Effingham.

Contracts have been let for concreting No. 33 from Robinson west to Oblong, and this section should be completed this year. A contract has been awarded for grading from Oblong to Newton. Prospects for paving on this section this year are poor. Pavement has been laid from Newton almost to Wheeler. Bids were asked for Monday on a mile and a half of heavy grading eastward from Effingham. No work has been done by the State on the rest of the stretch between Wheeler and Effingham, but hope is expressed that it can be completed before the end of the year.

Off to a Good Start

The manner in which the public have responded to the C T C invitation, proves beyond doubt, that a real tire backed by a real factory and real men, will always be welcome among the tire-buying public.

The invitation still holds good and is extended to you. To prove for yourself the superiority of the C T C tire, just drive up to any of our dealers, and have him put a C T C Tire on your car with this understanding and guarantee. If the C T C fails to outrun any other tire on your car then you are to receive a new tire ABSOLUTELY FREE. This does not mean adjusting the tire on a mileage basis, it means that you will receive a new tire FREE.

If the C T C does not outwear any other tire on your car just return the C T C with the blue ticket and receive a new tire. That's our guarantee and we back it up.

The Man who had Brains and Everything

Here is a man.

He has brains and everything.

He is about to purchase an automobile.

If he can sell his old one.

Once upon a time he owned a high priced single cylinder car.

It went chug-chug—

But the world was rosy.

He might get a nickel for it today if he had kept it.

Then he bought a high priced two cylinder automobile.

It went chug-chug—chug-chug—and made the neighbors stare, before it gave him peritonitis.

Isn't that what it does to you?

He couldn't get more than a few dollars in exchange for that car today.

Then he bought a four cylinder high priced automobile.

That seemed to him to be the top of the world.

If he had that car today he would have to find a stupid junk dealer to liquidate that inventory.

Then he bought a high priced six cylinder automobile,

"Well," said he to his wife, "I guess this is the peak of everything."

He got somewhere socially.

You can't blame him—don't speak harshly of him—he is a red blooded American.

Then one day the line eights and the straight eights appeared.

Smoother—quieter—speedier—snappier—peppier—more powerful—a joy—a treat—a thrill to drive.

So that started the downward course of the high priced sixes.

Here is a man who has brains and everything.

He is about to buy an automobile.

If he can sell his old one.

What do you think he is going to buy?

He is probably going to function mentally.

He will buy a Line Eight—if only for one reason.

He knows how much more it will be worth than a high priced six one year from today.

The Great Jordan Line Eight sells for $1000 to $2000 below any car in its class. Remember it's an Eight. Of course, it costs more than most sixes. It's an Eight.

DETROIT AUTO PLANTS PUSHING PRODUCTION

Factories Expected to Be Going Full Blast About the First of April.

Production is beginning to make up for its backwardness in January and early February. Plants in the Detroit area are getting into their best strides. This they expect to reach about the first of April. Chevrolet, still hampered by insufficient closed body deliveries and also by large numbers of workers not yet skilled on its new models, is falling behind orders, though present output is 1800 a day, with efforts being made to advance it to 2500 by April 15. Dodge is at capacity, 1000 a day, as is Hudson. Maxwell-Chrysler is moving up output at a strong rate. Nash is behind in orders. Overland is running close to 900 daily with output of the Knight 6 models becoming merchantable in volume. Chevrolet, Nash and Hudson are operating at the fastest clip in their histories. Ford is advancing schedules to 8000 daily, with present demand double that in January. Sales reports from every section of the country indicate that the public is turning strongly to the automobile market with the approach of spring.

February Car Sales Figures.

Sales of General Motors cars by dealers to consumers in February totaled 38,970 cars and trucks, compared with 50,007 in February, 1924, and 25,593 in January, 1925. Sales of cars and trucks to dealers by manufacturing divisions of General Motors in February totaled 49,269, compared with 78,668 in February, 1924, and 30,642 in January, 1925.

SNUBBER SERVICE STATION.

THREE mechanics' pits for working underneath automobiles, each opening down into a roomy, airy workshop, are a feature of the Gabriel snubber sales and service station recently opened by the G. H. Brown Co. as a Gabriel distributing center at 3-20 Lindell boulevards. Working in these pits under the most comfortable conditions, and with stockrooms and service equipment close at hand, cars can be fitted with snubbers in the least possible time. The service station is 30x60 feet and a broad concrete roadway leads from Lindell boulevard alongside the building to the service pits and to a 150x50 foot storage yard, which makes it unnecessary for cars to be left waiting in the street. There also is a storage building at the rear of the lot. This Gabriel service station is one of 2600 in this country. Officers of the G. H. Brown Co. include: G. H. Brown, president, and Paul W. Huston, treasurer.

NEW CAR FIRM HAS OPENING.

Nearly 1000 persons were present at the height of festivities Thursday night at the formal opening of the new building at 4000 Page boulevard of the Steiner-Fahrenkrog Automobile Co., which will retail Reo cars, busses and speed wagons. There was a stream of visitors all day, the total attendance being several thousand. The large showroom, which fronts on Page boulevard, and is done in white with white floor, was decorated with greenery and flowers from most of the automobile dealers of the city. There were refreshments, music and dancing, and an elaborate display of Reo models. The building is 100x150 feet, so provides room for a finely equipped service department, while the location is away from traffic congestion. Harry Steiner is president of the company; H. F. Fahrenkrog, vice president of the Board of Education, is secretary-treasurer, and Fred Steiner is vice president.

REPORTS TIRE OUTLOOK GOOD

"Business conditions look good in the automotive industry," reports J. H. Kemmerer, sales representative of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co. for this section, who has just returned from a week's sales conference at Akron, where the Goodyear factories are located. Reports by factory representatives from every section of the United States indicate that while no great boom is expected, there should be very satisfactory business during the year. The big thing today seems to be balloon tires. In every section of the country the demand for balloons is increasing at an amazing rate. The automobile manufacturers have come over to balloons practically 100 per cent, with these tires as standard or optional equipment on all makes of cars. In addition, the public is coming to find out that it can get the advantages of balloon-tire equipment on present cars through the interchangeable balloons which fit present rims or by putting on small-diameter wheels built especially for balloon tires. Whatever skepticism balloon tires had to face at the outset has disappeared since the tires have been out long enough by now for the public to be convinced that in addition to their easy riding qualities, they are giving more satisfactory mileage, have better traction and nonskid qualities and have proved definitely superior to the old high-pressure tires.

PEDESTRIANS FAVORED BY COURT DECISION ON TRAFFIC OFFICER'S SIGNAL

PEDESTRIANS crossing thoroughfares in compliance with the "Go" sign of a traffic officer continue to have the right of way until they have crossed the thoroughfares, even though the officer switches his signal and directs automobile traffic on that thoroughfare to proceed. At least, such is a recent decision of the Supreme Court of Pennsylvania, written by Justice John W. Kephart. The court holds that carelessness at street intersections is as culpable on the part of motorcar drivers as though they were using their cars at night without lights.

Illinois Dealers Elect.

The annual meeting of the Illinois Automotive Trade Association was held at Urbana, Monday and Tuesday. This is the State organization of automobile dealers. About 200 from all over the State attended the convention. Officers elected were: H. A. Ammerman, Urbana, president; W. E. Butler, Chicago, vice president; W. W. Ingram, Peoria, treasurer, and C. W. Coons, secretary-manager. Robert E. Lee, manager of the St. Louis Automobile Dealers' Association, addressed the convention and Monday night was for the fifth time toastmaster of the association's annual banquet at the Urbana-Lincoln Hotel.

New Used Car Sales Firm.

Charles A. White, formerly with the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co., has organized the White Motor Car Co., 3944-46 Olive street, for the sale of used cars. He is president and manager of the firm.

Tire Firm in New Location.

Chorlins Brothers, operating as the State Tire Co., distributer of Kenyon cord tires, announce their removal from 2206 Locust boulevard to the northeast corner of Washington boulevard and Twenty-third street. The new store gives them better facilities for sales and service.

Sends Dealers to Detroit Plant.

The Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co. sent a number of its Hudson and Essex dealers to the factory at Detroit in two special cars Wednesday. The trip was scheduled so the dealers could get better acquainted with Hudson and Essex factory methods and hear a series of lectures on salesmanship and advertising. The dealers returned to St. Louis by train. Those making the trip included: E. A. Higgins, wholesale manager; J. C. Stonemetz, E. J. Murphy and F. D. Hansen, territory reprentatives; W. E. Boggs, R. Mortensen and Floyd Baum of the Hudson-Frampton Motor Car Co.; Joseph Steinger and Robert Holcomb of Steinger & Tuthill, St. Louis; Z. A. Barker, Maplewood, Mo.; L. P. Hambuechen, Clayton, Mo.; Jack Taylor, Columbia, Mo.; R. Merseal, L. V. Alle and W. D. Akers, Farmington, Mo.; Charles M. Strawn and George Smith, Jacksonville, Ill.; George E. Gregory, New Berlin, Ill.; W. H. Vandeventer, Mexico, Mo.; George P. Eichelsbach, Kirkwood, Mo.; Walter Thorman and L. H. Schrader, Washington, Mo.; W. J. Meadows, Poplar Bluff, Mo.; E. J. Meckfessel, Belleville, Ill.; Ralph Eddleman, Duquoin, Ill.; M. W. Borlin, Carrollton, Ill.; A. H. Bartle, Pinckneyville, Ill.; Charles Maulding, Mount Vernon, Ill., and Robert Brewster, Herrin, Ill.

Tire Firms Consolidate.

O. E. Woelfert, with a tire store at 3304 Lindell boulevard, has consolidated his business with that of the Roberts & Haill Tire Co., distributors of Century tires, which becomes the Roberts-Haill-Woelfert Tire Co. The merged firms will use the Roberts-Haill company building at Twentieth street and Lucas avenue.

Radio Fans Give Car to Pastor.

The Rev. R. R. Brown of Omaha, Neb., radio pastor of station WOAW, is appreciated by his Sunday morning listeners is evidenced by the hundreds of gifts he has received regularly from members of his radio congregation. Gifts have included eggs by the dozen, honey, hams, candy, cakes, pictures, brooms and numerous other articles. Now as a climax a concerted token of appreciation from 50,000 of his listeners has been presented to the Rev. Mr. Brown in the form of a new Nash Advance Six sedan.

Opens Used Car Business.

O. Kessler and associates have formed the Kessler Motor Car Co., Inc., at 1805 Russell avenue, where they are engaged in the used car business.

Jack Schmitter, formerly sales manager of the South Side Buick Auto Co. and one of the well-known auto salesmen in St. Louis, has joined the sales force of the Kuhs-Buick Co., 2837 North Grand boulevard.

J. H. Cole is now with the wholesale staff of the De Luxe Automobile Co., and will handle Oldsmobile sales in Southeast Missouri.

E. H. Busse, an Auto Row veteran, has taken charge of the wholesale department of the Benjamin Motor Co., which distributes Stutz, Cole and Velie cars.

A. R. Hale, formerly with the Ward Motor Car Co., has joined the sales force of the Mound City Automobile Co., Auburn distributer. F. W. Wolffe, for 14 years in the automobile business here, also has joined the Mound City Co.

C. P. Madsen has returned to the Champion Body Co., after a two-months vacation.

What's New in Cars

110 H. P. From Baby Engine.

THE possibilities in small automobile engines, such as the 91 cubic inch motors required by the rules for the 1926 Indianapolis 500-mile race, are illustrated by the performance of a supercharged Talbot-Darracq car just completed in England. The engine in this car has only four cylinders, each with 2½-inch bore and 4⅛-inch stroke, but it develops 110 horsepower and the car is figured as a 116-miles-an-hour machine. Bearings for crankshaft and connecting rods are roller, although this type of bearing has not been successful in American-built racing cars. The car weighs 1230 pounds, the weight of the supercharger being 33 pounds.

New Models More Powerful.

An increase in power from 100 to 110 horsepower is the chief feature of changes in the Locomobile. The new models have Locomobile four-wheel brakes, with four drums—two on the front axle and four on the rear axle—an individual drum being supplied for each brake. The radiator design has been improved, but without altering its characteristic Locomobile features.

Stock Car Shows 140-Horsepower.

A sedan model of the latest German-built Mercedes car brought to this country has shown a road speed of 100 miles an hour. It is powered with a six-cylinder engine, with 3¾ bore and 6-inch stroke, fitted with a supercharger, and develops 100-horsepower normally and 140 when the supercharger is in full play. The supercharger goes into action automatically at 70 miles an hour and increases the power about 40 per cent. This car has a 148-inch wheelbase.

Japanese to Build Small Car.

A three-passenger car, the Otomo, to sell for around $800 in Japan, is planned by a large Japanese iron works. The factory's chief engineer, who is visiting American plants, says that the car can be made to sell for $200 less than the cheapest American car now sells for in Japan, and that the tax on it will be $32, as compared with $150 on the cheapest American-made machine.

New Mercedes and Benz Cars.

A merger of interests of the Mercedes and Benz companies in Germany is to result in three new cars, each equipped with supercharger. Two high-grade Mercedes sixes, one with engine of 366 and the other of 239 cubic inches capacity, are in production. The third car, of the same general design but with a 122 cubic inch engine, will be made at the Benz plant. The supercharger is at the front of the engine, the blower being driven at three time engine speed by gears through a multiple disc clutch.

Adds Stake Truck Body.

The Ford Motor Co. has added a stake body to its one-ton truck equipment and distribution has begun through the dealer organization. Introduction of the stake body follows that of the all-steel cab and body brought out some time ago. The new body not only meets many commercial requirements, but also is designed to fill the needs of the farmer or truck gardener in handling his products.

New Type of Top for Roadster.

A rigid, adjustable automobile top which will transform a roadster into a closed job and can be lowered quickly for fair weather is described in the Automobile Trade Journal. This top is of light metal construction, shaped to conform to the rear deck, over which it is snugly nested when lowered. The top is edged with a rubber strip all around so that in raised or lowered position it is insulated from the body. This prevents rattling or rumbling and makes a water and dust-proof junction between top and body. The top is carried on a double set of supporting arms which swing from one position to the other. The lower ends of the opposite arms are connected by rotatable tie rods held in bearings. A gear fastened to one of the tie rods meshes with a worm turned by a hand crank. Several turns of the crank serve to raise or lower the top. Little effort is required because of the mechanical advantage of the worm and gear. The top remains horizontal during the movement and is clamped in either "up" or "down" position.

LAST LONGER AND SERVE BETTER

Besides setting a new standard of comfort in motoring, Cooper Balloons are giving mileage that is equal and in many cases better than that given by standard high-pressure tires.

This is due principally to the tire's flexibility, which allows it to absorb road shocks instead of resisting them, combined with a correctly designed, tough, nonskid tread.

John Smith and His Car

by FREDERICK RUSSELL

One Job a Day.

WHILE waiting for a member of his household to make a few purchases at the grocery store, Smith and I drifted to our favorite topic of comparing notes on our motoring experiences. A loose spring clip on Smith's car furnished the proper lead.

"These are the little things that pave the way for the most serious trouble you can have," I began. "Unless this clip is tightened so that it will hold the leaves on the spring firmly there is going to be trouble when the car gets a twisting motion on a rough road. Besides, if it does nothing worse it will keep on rattling. And that is certainly annoying—and unnecessary."

"I know it," Smith replied, "when I get time I'll fix 't."

"Why not fix it now?" I suggested.

As though he accepted the challenge, Smith procured a wrench from his tool kit and began trying to tighten the nut. Suddenly he stopped and looked up at me inquiringly. The nut was turned up as far as it would go, yet the clip was still loose.

"See this," I said, pointing to a tube on the top of the spring through which the bolt runs. Smith nodded. "Well, isn't it evident to you that this tube is too wide and that when you try to tighten the bolt you are simply trying to compress this tube?"

Smith saw the trouble at once, asked me for a file—because he hadn't realized before what a necessary tool a file is—and, after removing the bolt entirely, began filing off the end of the tube. Thus when he fitted the tube and bolt to the spring again the nut was free to turn up further — just enough to tighten the clip against the spring leaves.

"You can put that down as your job for today," I said, when we had started again. "A lot of car owners think they are keeping their machines in perfect condition if they keep the body, the wheels and the trimmings clean and polished and if they have the carbon cleaned out and the car systematically greased. A lot of them don't realize that even this is necessary, but of course you learned the importance of taking this step shortly after you bought the car. I called the plan the 'installment idea' because you give the car a little attention every day. But those who have learned how to take care of their cars by this simple method very often forget that many other less conspicuous parts of the cars are in regular need of attention. These are the sort of things the regular repair men never touch when they are doing some big repair job on your car. These are the sort of things which creep up on you gradually and make your car a candidate for the junk pile.

"But there is a way to solve the problem. Simply enlarge upon the 'installment' idea. Make up your mind to do one job a day on the car, but not when you are taking the car out of the garage or putting it back. You need that time for greasing, cleaning and polishing. Some time during the day you will find a few moments when you haven't anything to do. That's the time to get out your tool kit and tighten that loose fender bolt, fill up that cut in the spare tire with rubber putty, clean out the strainer in the vacuum tank, adjust the fan felt a little tighter, clean the distributor and breaker points, wedge a little felt under the end of the floor boards so that they can't rattle, see whether the headlight bulb is really burned out or the wires disconnected, clean the commutator of the neglected horn motor and adjust the shaft to make it louder"——

"That's enough," Smith interrupted. "My car needs all that attention and a lot more. I'm willing to give this plan a try anyway."

"All the automobile repair work in the country could be done in the total time which drivers spend lounging in their cars while waiting for this, that and the other fellow," I added.

"But you forget," Smith argued, "when a man is driving a car he doesn't want to get his hands all dirty, especially when he hasn't any means of cleaning them without going out of his way for soap and water. Just look at my hands."

"If that's the real reason why you have been putting off the daily attention to your car," I retorted, "then let me give you a little tip. Kerosene is the best thing to clean dirt and grease off hands. Carry a little bottle of it with you in the car, and when the job is over apply a little of it to your hands with a clean rag and watch it work. Remember, true interest in the car's well-being will find a way."

Next Week: "DOWNHILL."

GRASS SEED CHOKES CAR RADIATOR ON AFRICAN TRIP

Road conditions, worse in some respects than the early motorists in this country ever knew, were encountered by Mr. and Mrs. L. Blake Jolly in a 2000-mile trip in a Chevrolet car from the Broken Hill region in South Africa to Lake Tanganyika.

Food for two weeks had to be carried, beside cooking and sleeping equipment, while gasoline and extra food had to be sent on ahead by 40 carriers. In addition. four persons rode in the car over "tracks cut through the brush, full of pits and holes."

The first day out, the only road was a native footpath, at times hardly visible and every few miles came marshy ground with a bog in the middle which becomes a veritable river in the rainy season. Often a native had to be sent ahead to reconnoiter.

One day grass from six to seven bushes, was encountered, to say nothing of ant hills and holes which shook the car to its limit. The sun was so hot that the spare gasoline had to be covered. The following day the car became stuck in a bog and a dozen natives had to push it out. Then 12-foot elephant grass filled the radiator with seed, so that it was necessary to stop every few miles and dislodge the seers to prevent the water from boiling. Later the same day the party were endangered by a bush fire—flames from horizon to horizon—and avoided it only by finding a large tract where the grass had been burned.

The next day the only things exciting were when a jackal, a wild cat, a python and a group of baboons crossed the path.

They often encountered great tracts of burnt down timber. The natives burn miles of trees to fertilize the ground.

A raft made of old gasoline cans ferried the car across a river the next day. Two days later the wheels of the car went through a bridge up to the axle and it took two hours to unpack the car and get across. About six miles farther on the car broke through a second bridge.

The party camped under Mount Sunza, the highest mountain in Northern Rhodesia, after strenuous work on the bridges. In the small settlement where they unpacked for the night there were 40 airedales that were used to hunt lions.

Two days later they struck a belt of teetse-fly, and it was all they could do to keep the flies off the dog—the bite of the teetse-fly being fatal to a dog.

The following day the party had to cut down trees and build a 200-foot stretch of corduroy road.

For 25 miles the next day the car was seldom out of low gear, as the journey was continually uphill in sand.

NEW GAME FOR GARAGE.

The newest name for garage is autoria. A woman motorist coined it. Garage, to her way of thinking, suggests a mess of oil, cotter pins and whatnot.

Hudson is not called "the World's Greatest Buy" for today alone. That is acknowledgment of ten years' constant refinement of a great car around the famous patented Super-Six principle.

The reasons for that position affect all motor car buying. They cannot be ignored.

A supreme and exclusive motor principle, added power, smoothness, performance, without added weight, cylinders or cost.
The largest production of 6-cylinder closed cars in the world—and the value advantages of that position.
Actual proof of greatest value—which is SALES.
And now the greatest price advantage with the finest quality Hudson ever offered.

It is only as you find the real comparisons for Hudson qualities among the costliest cars that the enormous difference in price is so astonishing.

All now know that higher price can buy no smoother performance than Hudson's. It cannot buy more brilliant results in pick-up, power or speed. It cannot buy greater reliability or endurance.

And with all this capacity and flexibility Hudson keeps the economy, simplicity and easy maintenance of the "Six."

At today's prices need you own a lesser car? Can a costlier car satisfy you more?

$498 For those who desire, special arrangements have been made whereby a Hudson Coach may be purchased for a First Payment of $498. The remaining payments conveniently arranged $498

POOR COOLING SOLUTION.

Use of calcium chloride in the cooling system to prevent freezing is undesirable, not merely because of its corrosive action, but because it forms short circuits when it gets on the ignition wires or the spark plugs. Should the radiator boil over and some of the solution reach the engine, trouble is likely to follow. This salt does its evil work when cold, for then it absorbs moisture and forms a short. By the time you start to look for the trouble, it melts and defies detection.

The price—history making in itself—assumes tremendous significance when three important facts are completely realized:

Traditional Reo reliability and balanced goodness are preserved intact.

The chassis is exactly identical with that used in all other Reo models, with no attempt to manufacture down to a price.

The body represents a genuine sedan, with steel paneling over a rugged hardwood framework, dimensioned to provide more spaciousness for five passengers than any other car of similar wheelbase.

Considering the reputation—mechanical correctness—dependability—body quality—and the price,

It is true that "Never Before in Automobile History Has $1595 Bought So Much Motor Car."

TESTS SHOW BIG GASOLINE SAVING

Stromberg Carburetor, in Local Experiment, Gives 72 Per Cent More Mileage.

Increases in mileage per gallon of gasoline of 53 to 72 per cent were shown by automobiles equipped with Stromberg carburetors, in tests conducted Wednesday at Fairground Park under direction of Charles Kloske, manager of the Equipment Service Co., 2651 Locust boulevard, which distributes Stromberg motor car equipment in this district. The tests were observed by newspaper men, and were carried out with fairness and attention to details. In fact, whenever there was even the least question, the Stromberg equipment was deliberately placed at a disadvantage. All tests were carried out on the one drive in the park, and each car was driven over the same course, in the same direction and at the same steady speed of 22 to 23 miles an hour.

The gasoline tank of a 1923 Ford sedan, which has been in constant service in city driving, was disconnected from the carburetor, and a measured quart of gasoline was connected with the carburetor. The car was then driven at 22 to 23 miles an hour until, as the speedometer registered 4.3 miles, the car stopped, the gasoline completely exhausted. This gave a mileage of 17.2 miles to the gallon.

A Stromberg carburetor for Fords, which has a special hot spot, was installed in the same Ford sedan. The carburetor was drained and sucked dry by running the engine with all gasoline lines shut off. Then the can containing a measured quart of gasoline, was connected with the carburetor. The car was then driven 22 to 23 miles an hour until it stopped. The speedometer registered 7.4 miles, which gave a mileage of 29.6 miles to the gallon. Thus the Stromberg carburetor gave a 72 per cent increase in miles per gallon.

On Overland four coupe which had been driven more than 21,000 miles and needed considerable repair work, was then driven at the same 22 to 23 miles an hour with a quart of gasoline feeding into its regular carburetor. It came to a stop with the speedometer registering 4.5 miles, so the gasoline consumption was at the rate of 18 miles to the gallon.

With the Stromberg carburetor in place of its regular equipment, the same Overland coupe ran 6.9 miles, the speedometer having just started to turn to 7.0 miles, when it came to a stop. The car was driven at the same steady speed as in the other experiments. The gasoline consumption was at the rate of 27.6 miles to the gallon. Thus the Stromberg carburetor, which has no special hot spot in the Overland type, gave a 53 per cent increase in gasoline mileage for the Overland car.

Both Overland and Ford cars idled more smoothly, started more easily, ran more smoothly and with less vibration, and accelerated more flashily, with the Stromberg carburetor equipment than with the regular equipment.

DE WITT COUNTY OFFICIALS TRY TO SETTLE ROAD DISPUTE

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

BLOOMINGTON, Ill., March 21.—In the hope that warring interests will come to an agreement and enable completion of the De Witt County section of State Highway No. 2, the De Witt Board of Supervisors adopted resolutions this week, urging that location of the route be left to the State Highway Engineers and that the necessary right of way be promptly furnished.

The Supervisors held that persons using their influence to hinder construction of this important thoroughfare were injuring the interest of the people of the entire communities affected and the State at large. They urged all obstructionists to cease their opposition and join in the general movement to put the road through for the benefit of the majority.

The differences of opinion concerning the routing through Clinton and north to Wapella have resulted in a 10-mile gap which the State Highway Department is anxious to close this spring. It would have been paved last year with other sections through McLean and De Witt counties but for the controversy that developed.

STATE ROADS IN MOBERLY REGION WELL MAINTAINED

Better maintenance of highways since the State Highway Commission has put patrol gangs at work is believed to be largely responsible for the great increase in automobile registrations through the Moberly office of the Automobile Club of Missouri. L. M. McCabe, division manager at Moberly, reported Monday that thus far this year 3950 licenses had been issued as compared with 2350 in the same period last year.

While dirt side roads are almost impassable in the Moberly region, McCabe said, the State maintained roads, both gravel and dirt, are being kept in better condition than ever before.

New Ford Plant Almost Ready.

It is expected that automobiles will be rolling out of the new $10,000,000 plant of the Ford Motor Co. near Minneapolis and St. Paul by April 1. Within 18 months, it is planned, the plant is to employ about 7500 men. The assembly division has a maximum capacity of 700 cars a day, with 2000 men working, while two or three times as many men can be employed in the manufacturing division.

Measuring by Light Waves.

The Packard Motor Car Co. is the first automobile manufacturer to adopt the system of measuring by light waves, which enables measurements as fine as a millionth of an inch. The measuring is done by counting infinitesimally delicate waves of light or shadows under highly polished glass discs when violet rays are projected through the discs onto the article to be checked.

RIDE ON BALLOONS!

No Matter the Make or Model of Your Car It Will Pay You to Equip Now

Recent records on Full-Size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords:

The 1,000 mile non-stop economy run at Culver City, California, averaging over 70 miles per hour.

New Mt. Wilson Record — 24 minutes, 47.04 seconds.

Pike's Peak Record — 18 minutes, 15 seconds.

Toledo to Montreal—760 miles in 19 hours and 59 minutes.

All without tire change—again emphasizes stamina and advantages of Full-Size Balloon Gum-Dipped Cords.

You'll find that Gum-Dipped Balloons save you money. They deliver longer mileage—protect your car from road vibration—reduce depreciation—increase resale or trade-in value.

Practically all car makers equip their new models with Balloon tires.

Firestone Gum-Dipping made Balloon tires possible. This special process insulates each fibre of every cord with rubber giving great strength and flexing endurance to the cords. This makes light, strong side walls of extreme flexibility which avoid punctures by yielding to sharp objects that often drive through the stiff bulky tires of higher air pressure.

Firestone Balloons grip the road even at high speed—holding the car steady and sure on the dangerous curves.

See the nearest Firestone Dealer. Let him show you how easy it is to equip your car—and how inexpensive.

Don't put it off any longer. Begin now to enjoy the comfort, safety and economy of these wonderful tires.

HOW HIGHWAYS OF BRITAIN COMPARE WITH THOSE IN U. S.

Asphalt or Tar Macadam Roads in Great Majority —Foundations Better Than in This Country.

So insistent are the assertions of British motoring journals that roads in England are the finest in the world, that the following comparison of them with highways in this country, by A. B. Fletcher, consulting highway engineer in the Federal Bureau of Public Roads, are of interest. In an article in the bureau's magazine, Public Roads, Fletcher, who spent several months last year in England and Scotland, says:

"Ehe English roadside almost invariably is a thing of beauty, and an American has to go to Scotland before he feels at home. For some reason, sparse population and lack of money, perhaps, the Scotch roadsides are nearly or quite as barren and unkempt as most of ours are. The English roads generally have a wide grass border, and there are trees and shrubs everywhere. Sometimes the line of sight is restricted by the roadside growths, but it is plain to understand why even then the shrubs are spared.

Mostly Bituminous Roads.

"The drainage water from the roads disappears quickly from the carriageway and flows off in unseen ditches near the right-of-way lines. The turf at the pavement edge is carefully trimmed and kept so just as in a park. Laborers trimming the edge with spades with a tightly stretched cord for a guide were seen working as painstakingly as if they were trimming a garden border.

Fletcher says the great majority of pavement on a 1500-mile tour was of the bituminous type, chiefly asphalt, tar macadam or its equivalents. In the open country areas practically no cement or concrete surfaces were found. This seemed to be due to the feeling among the road officials that they cannot afford to scrap the great mileage of bituminous roads which they have constructed even if it can be proved that the concrete type is more desirable from the viewpoint of maintenance costs.

Very Thick Foundations.

"They seem to be thoroughly wedded to the bituminous types," says Fletcher. The reason for their preference is clear when one sees the carefully planned grades, long established, with sodded shoulders, drainage ditches and entering driveways, and when one realizes the great expense which they have incurred in putting in the heavy road foundations. Notwithstanding the large cost of maintaining the bituminous road surfaces, the Englishman is slow to adopt a road type with which he is not familiar, and he is entirely willing that his American cousin shall make what he calls the experiments. He wants proof of the reputed low cost of maintenance of concrete roads, and in his doubting conservatism he will not admit that the relatively few years of life of the American concrete roads have given them any history worth talking much about.

"Their methods of spreading the bituminous material are much like ours, except that they work more slowly than we do, perhaps more carefully and skillfully, but I am forced to the conclusion that the apparent superiority of the British bituminous roads is due very largely to their thick, heavy foundations, and in some measure to the use of curbs to confine the pavements at the sides.

All New Roads Curbed.

"I was much interested in looking for wavy conditions or corrugations in the surface of the bituminous roads. The county surveyors will tell one that they have waves in their pavements, and they seem to know what one is talking about when one speaks of corrugations, but their waves are not like our waves, for I found practically no evidence of the corrugations which are so prevalent in our bituminous pavements.

"Almost without exception, the English road is built with what they call 'hard core' as a foundation. The stones are sometimes as large as eight inches in longest dimensions and often as large as the thickness of the layer will permit. The hard core layer is usually from eight to 12 inches in thickness. Strong, hard slag seems to be a popular material, but when that is too costly and brickbats or stones from walls or buildings are available, they are put into the road.

"The county surveyors are beginning to wonder if these hard core foundations, strong, as from our viewpoint they seem to be, are going to be heavy enough for the future motor traffic. When we conside rhow few of our rural roads have any foundation at all under the five or six inches of bituminized stones; do we need to look much further for the cause of the corrugations? Or to explain the apparent superiority of the British roads?

"The English seem also to be completely convinced of the need of substantial curbs to prevent the lateral movement of the pavement. All of the new work which the Ministry of Transport has to do is provided with curbs, and the county surveyors are installing curbs in connection with their widening work."

Maintenance Expense Large.

The maintenance of these bituminous roads is high, a recent report covering four roads aggregating 321 miles leading out of London giving the annual mileage upkeep at from $3360 to $4700 the mile. Regarding the riding quality of the English roads, he thinks we have much to learn.

"so rough as are most of our rural roads, but it should also be said that I saw hardly any so smooth as the best of the roads in the United States built by the state highway departments with the Federal-aid stimulant.

"Our road problem is so much bigger than Great Britain's that the reason for the better average improvement of the English road is apparent. In all England, Wales and Scotland there are but 177,000 miles of road, as against our estimated mileage of 2,941,000 outside of cities and towns. England, Wales and Scotland have an average of about 242 persons to the mile of road, while in this country there are not more than 35 people to the mile."

Road Work for Jobless.

In order to give work to the great army of unemployed there has been a great deal of arterial road construction in the Greater London area. The amount under construction or projected aggregates 165 miles, the cost of which will be approximately $60,000,000.

"All of this work is being done on a larg scale," Fletcher says. "Rights of way 100 to 120 feet in width are being secured and with much delay and difficulty. When houses are in the way and must be demolished, the public authorities must provide other houses elsewhere to shelter the tenants, so great is the housing shortage.

The carriage-ways of the most important arterial roads are to be 50 feet wide and curbed. Sidewalks and planting strips are provided for, and iron fences are installed along the right-of-way lines. On the Great West Road all pipes, sewers, water and gas and all electric wires are to be placed in conduits under the sidewalks and planting strips. One section of this road under traffic in 1924 was said to have cost at the rate of $864,000 per mile."

Regarding road signs, Fletcher said: "I think that on the whole we mark our roads, at least so far as direction signs are concerned, better than it is done in England."

In speed of road construction, road equipment of all kinds, concerns motor-vehicle regulation, highway financing, and research and experimental work generally Fletcher holds, there is not much to learn from England.

HOW TO MAKE STARTING OF AN AUTOMOBILE ON COLD MORNING EASIER

HERE are some simple rules to make starting a cold car easier:

Hold out the clutch to relieve the battery of the job of turning over the main driving and counter-shaft transmission gears, in addition to the engine and clutch.

Hold the foot firmly on the starter button to allow the maximum amperage to flow to the starter motor.

Crank a few seconds before switching on the ignition, to save all the electricity for the first strain of starting the stiff engine.

Push in the choker instantly upon starting, pulling it out again the instant the engine threatens to stall.

Cubans Like Brilliant Car Trim.

The Cuban taste for brilliant red and green and yellow upholstery in cars, and the nerve-racking habits of Havana taxi drivers, particularly impressed E. A. Hatfield, president of the Mississippi Valley Motor Co., on the recent St. Louis Chamber of Commerce "good will" trip to the Caribbean. In Havana he found few except open cars and only small cars downtown because of the narrow streets. American cars were in the great majority, European cars being few and far between. Hatfield said the taxi drivers scooted through and across the narrow streets so recklessly that one experience was likely to cure one of a fancy for that method of transportation.

-:- RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT -:-

GOING BELOW ONE METER

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Amateurs who operate wireless telegraph sets have been authorized by Secretary Hoover to use a new wave length band between .7477 and .7496 meter. The American Radio Relay League asked permission for experimental purposes.

"Few people realize the immense number of possible operating channels that lie in the low wave length," Secretary Hoover's statement said. "If it ever becomes feasible to conduct broadcasting on these frequencies, it would be possible to place within the band mentioned 100 broadcasting stations and all the stations in the world at present could operate in the upper half of the one meter band. The art has, of course, not developed to make this possible, but the amateurs now have an opportunity to see what they can do."

Label the Leads.

Mistakes in making connections, which often result in the burning out of tubes, is a failing common to radio beginners. A good plan, and one that will prove a reminder in making connections, is to have the leads from the "A" batteries and "B" batteries tagged with little tags marked with the voltage and polarity of each lead.

NEW CANADIAN RADIO STATION

With the completion of the Marconi Wireless Telegraph Co. Radio Station at Drummondsville, Quebec, it is expected that connection with Australia will be made possible by the new beam system of radio transmission, Trade Commissioner Meekins reports to the Department of Commerce. This will require three additional towers which are now in the course of erection. The new beam circuit which will be operated by the Marconi organization in conjunction with the British Postoffice, will permit messages being sent from England to Drummondsville and thence relayed to Australia.

NAVY SEEKING RESERVES.

The Naval Communication Service is elated with the returns from its campaign to enroll 6000 qualified radio operators in its reserve force. In the Chicago District alone some 2100 men have signed up. All of them are radio operators, although many have not attained the speed requisite for classification as naval radiomen. Recent reports from Chicago indicate that amateurs are literally clamoring to get into the naval reserve, even as apprentice seamen for radiomen in Class Six.

The success of the campaign is due largely to the interest of the American Radio Relay League and the activity of the Chicago Naval Radio station in developing its short-wave radio apparatus, with which it communicates with amateurs over considerable distances.

Enlistments in other sections of the country are said to be fair, although spasmodic in comparison to the results in the Ninth District. The campaign under way is national, covering all 13 naval districts.

Be sure your big panels are Formica
FORMICA'S insulating and mechanical qualities are important in getting the best results from any radio set — but they are doubly so in the big superhetrodynes and neutrodynes.
The big panel has more and heavier apparatus fastened to it and if it is a material that will sag, there is more likelihood that it will get out of shape. Formica's mechanical strength assures you of a permanently satisfactory result.
Many makers of these big sets are using Formica base panels, terminal strips and so on.
Be sure to insist on Formica.

PROPER CONNECTIONS FOR THE B BATTERY

Why Is It Best to Attach the Negative B to the Positive A.

By WILLIS P. CORWIN,
Of the KSD Staff.

There are so many circuits and diagrams presented to the radio public in these days of homemade sets and there are so many different ways of doing one particular thing that the beginner is often puzzled over which is correct. In a recent article the best methods of connecting grid returns were explained. In it this statement was made: "When the plate potential is not critical the negative B battery should be connected to the positive A battery terminal." There is a good reason why this is true and the method should be followed.

Let us first consider the drawing of Figure 1a. A simple filament circuit is shown here with the rheostat in the negative lead and a four-volt battery supplying the current for the filament. If a filament voltmeter be placed between the center of the battery and the point market C, which represents the positive filament terminal at the tube socket, it would read two volts. Now, if it were connected to the opposite terminal of the filament or the point A, it would also show two volts, but the polarity would be reversed and the voltmeter would have to be turned around in order to get a correct reading. A third condition, which is an impractical one, is that of the voltmeter connected between the middle of the filament and the center of the battery. In this position the voltmeter would not show a reading because it would be placed at the point of zero potential. That is the two volts on the positive side of the battery would neutralize the two volts from the negative side.

Applying this same arrangement to a more practical circuit, Fig. 1b, we have an ordinary tube circuit with a potentiometer across the A battery and without the B battery and the grid connections. If in this case a voltmeter were placed between the center of the filament and the plate, and the potentiometer contact left in the position B, the voltmeter would show no voltage. By moving the potentiometer arm to the positive side of the battery or the position C the voltmeter would register three volts and the plate would be positive with respect to the filament. Changing the potentiometer arm to the position A the voltmeter would have to be reversed and it would read three volts also. The plate would then be three volts negative with respect to the filament.

Placing a 22½-volt battery in the plate circuit of the diagram just mentioned we have a common tube circuit without the grid connections. Fig. 2a. Here the actual plate potential is greater than 22½ because of the action explained above. With the negative B battery connected to the positive A the total plate potential is 22½ volts plus the 3 volts from the A battery which makes 25½ volts in all. If the negative B were attached to the negative A, as in Fig. 1b, the plate potential, with respect to the filament, would be 22½ volts minus three volts or 19½ volts. Being of the opposite polarity the three volts from the battery would neutralize three volts of the B battery.

In this consideration the resistance of the rheostat and that of the phones have been disregarded because these resistances are small in comparison to the resistance of the filament and tube and their effect upon the experiment would be of little importance. Also by the use of the potentiometer the effect of the potential drop across the rheostat has been compensated for.

The results of the experiment are that the plate of any tube circuit can be made positive or negative to the extent of half the voltage of the A battery without a B battery, and that when a B battery is used the actual plate potential is greater, less than or equal to the B battery voltage depending upon where the negative B battery terminal is connected to the A battery or potentiometer.

In all common circuits, radio frequency amplifiers, audio frequency amplifiers and detectors the negative B battery should be connected to the positive A. This gives the maximum plate potential that can be obtained with a given circuit. A set will work with the negative B connected to the negative A, but with reduced plate potential and a corresponding loss in amplification. One might also gain a few volts by the boost of the A battery when it is only a matter of changing a few wires. It is also a good plan for one to follow the best practices in building a set and then when anything goes wrong it is a simple matter to go over the wiring and find the trouble.

There are a few exceptions to this rule of the B battery connections. When using a soft or hard vacuum detector tube a fine adjustment of the B battery is desirable. Changing the plate potential by cutting out or adding cells of the B battery only permits variations of 1½ volts at a time. Much finer adjustments can be obtained by the use of the potentiometer method as shown in Fig. 1b. This permits the plate voltage to be raised or lowered as much as three volts or whatever the voltage of the A battery may be. When the potentiometer arm is in the C position three volts are added to the B battery and in the A position the same amount is subtracted from the B battery. Between these positions the voltage can be varied by a small fraction of a volt.

In some superheterodynes and other more complicated circuits it is often best to connect the negative B and negative A terminals together for the protection of the tubes or for other reasons. In such cases a little plate voltage is sacrificed in order to gain something else.

More than a battery charger
U. S. Patent May 27, 1924
Balkite is more than a battery charger. It is the only charger on the market which can be used while the radio set is in operation. Many Balkite owners never give their "A" batteries a thought, merely turning on the charger when the set is used. Balkite is entirely noiseless, has no bulbs or moving parts, and nothing to adjust, break or get out of order. Sold by leading radio dealers everywhere. Price $19.50.

GERMANY RELAYING BY WIRES

The new German broadcasting station at Cassel, Hessen-Nassau, will be connected by wire with the similar station at Frankfort, so that programs initiated at Frankfort may also be broadcast from Cassel and picked up by crystal and single tube sets. According to recent consular reports, the Cassel station is the eleventh German station to go on the air under the direction of the Sued-West Deutsch Fuenffunkendienst. For the present it will relay broadcasts from Frankfort on 288 meters, except twice a week, when it will transmit independently. The use of the wire relay system, which is similar to the Bell System and the Radio Corporation practice in this country, will reduce the cost of operation and at the same time furnish broadcasts for the crystal set owners and home constructors in the new territory. Apparently most of the radio receivers in Germany are home-made or of the inexpensive short-range types. The scarcity of money prohibits the purchase of expensive sets, but as German manufacturers have a practical monopoly, a good business in crystal sets and parts is being handled.

ARMY AND NAVY ECONOMIES

Through the co-operation of the Army Signal Corps and the Naval Communication Service great economies in the operation of radio stations where both military and naval posts are located is planned. In some instances the dual use of a single station by both services has saved the Government from erecting and equipping a new station, at an initial cost approximating $50,000. This is true in the Capital City, where the Arlington station, NAA, is used by the army as well as the navy.

A recent consolidation of radio communication activities at Panama has enabled the aviation post at France Field to use the naval station at Colon, when necessary, by means of remote control. This obviated the necessity of erecting a new transmitter for the aviation post. Radio Engineer Donovan of McCook Field, who recently returned from a month's visit to Panama, reports that with improvements made there and a practical schedule, both services are finding their needs are adequately handled by the single station.

Fading Signals.

Fading of signals is thought to be due to the electrical constitution of the upper atmosphere. It is a natural phenomena of the ether which cannot be controlled at the receiver or transmitter. Scientists believe that a layer of electrified and rarefied air exists about 60 miles above the earth's surface and that this layer acts as a reflector of Hertzian waves. Owing to natural causes, the reflecting power of the conducting sheet varies from time to time in the same way a mirror reflects well at one minute and then becomes dim when a person breathes upon it.

Proper Way to Charge Battery.

A storage battery can only be charged by a direct current, and when charging the positive wire of the charging current must be connected to the positive of the battery and the negative to the negative. The voltage of the charging current should be somewhat greater than that of the battery, while the amperage should not be above one-tenth of the capacity. When a battery is charged or discharged very quickly it will overheat, and the paste will fall out of the grids. Not only will this prevent the battery from taking a charge, but it will short circuit the plates at the bottom. For this reason the battery must be charged slowly.

Cardinal Gasparri, on behalf of His Holiness the Pope, has expressed great appreciation of the gift of a special broadcast receiver now in use in the Vatican. The set will receive all of the principal European stations.

In the RADIO TESTING LABORATORY

A new loud speaker that has several distinctive features, has been produced by Crosley Radio Corporation. There are two difficulties that have to be dealt with by every manufacturer who designs a loud speaker. The greatest of these is that of the natural period of vibration of the diaphram which usually falls within the range of audible frequencies. Unless this natural frequency is damped out by some means the frequencies that are very near this tone will predominate. In the Crosley loud speaker this problem has been solved by the use of a large diaphram of parchment paper which has no natural period of vibration. This permits the reproduction of all tones from that of the flute to the low notes of the bass viol without any of them prevailing. The second problem, that of the natural resonant tone of the horn, has been eliminated in the Crossley speaker by using no horn at all. The diaphragm is large enough itself to vibrate the air over a large area without the resonant effect of a horn.

A loud speaker of this kind was tested recently in the KSD laboratory. A five-tube receiver used with the horn brought in all of the popular stations in the midwest, a number of the southern stations, and several stations on the east coast. All of these were heard very clearly with enough volume to understand a speaker at a distance of 30 or 40 feet from the receiver.

NEW RADIO PATENTS.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Patents on radio inventions were granted by the U. S. Patent Office during the past week as follows:

Tuning unit of radiophone apparatus (No. 1,528,686), invented by Joseph Neumann of St. Louis, Mo. An important object of this invention is to provide in combination with a loose coupler tuning coil means for controlling the position of the coil while it is enclosed within a cabinet where it is protected from dust, dirt and the like.

Wireless Telephone System (No. 1,528,047), invented by Frank Conrad of Pittsburg, Pa., and assigned to Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co. One object of this invention is to provide a modulating system particularly adaptable to highpower wireless telephone systems.

Selective Signaling System (No. 1,528,032), invented by Stephen A. Staege of Pittsburg, Pa., and assigned to Westinghouse Electric and Mfg. Co. An object of this invention is a secret and selective sending and receiving system whereby the carrier wave frequency is caused to vary through a predetermined cycle within certain limits.

Radio Signaling System (No. 1,528,010), invented by Charles S. Demarest of Ridgewood, N. J., and Milton L. Almquist of Brooklyn, N. Y., and assigned to American Tel. & Tel. Co. This invention relates to means for selectively signaling a particular station.

Radio Signaling System (No. 1,528,000), invented by Charles S. Demarest of Ridgewood, N. J., and Milton L. Almquist of Brooklyn, N. Y., and assigned to American Tel. and Tel. Co. This invention provides improvements in communication systems comprising a combined radio and wire system.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

The Post-Dispatch Radio Department cannot undertake to answer questions by mail.

Q. I have a Brunswick Radiola, have heard some very good programs from such stations as Boston, Denver, Canada and Texas, but so far have not been able to get a station such as KFI, Los Angeles, or PWX, Havana, Cuba. T. R.

A. You have a good receiving set capable of receiving stations all over the United States. Any set that will pick up Boston and Denver with loud speaker volume will also pick up stations on the west coast under favorable conditions. The only reason that you have not heard them so far is that you have not been tuned in to their wave lengths at the right time. The western stations come in best late in the evening and it usually requires more effort and patience to tune them in than to pick up stations near by. It should be remembered that Los Angeles is just about twice as far from St. Louis as is New York or Denver. You should have no difficulty in picking up PWX when atmospheric conditions are favorable.

Q. I have a three-tube regenerative set which I would like to change into a five-tube neutrodyne or radio frequency set. Will you kindly tell me the parts I would need? J. P. M.

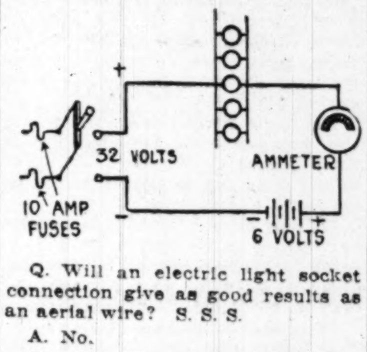
A. A regenerative set cannot be converted into a neutrodyne or a radio frequency amplifier set very easily. Only a few of the parts from the regenerative could be used in either of the two receivers you have in mind. If you wish to build a larger set it would be advisable to dispose of the regenerative set, and get entirely new parts for the new set. You can obtain complete details and data on a neutrodyne or radio frequency amplifier from almost any of the local dealers, many of whom have advertisements in these columns.

Q. I have a one tube set. It is working alright only when I get an out-of-town station there is such a howl I can't understand the program. Please tell me how to cut this noise out. 2. Can you tell me where station WCAF is located? D. B. C.

A. It looks as though you have not learned how to tune your receiver, which is most probably a regenerative set. If this is the case there is one control on it that regulates regeneration or in other words makes the howl. Turn this dial from the minimum to maximum setting until you have a station coming in clear. This particular setting will be found just before the howl or noise starts. If you turn the dial a little too far and get the noise go back and try again. It does absolutely no good to try to tune in a station beyond the setting where the noise starts. 2. The call letters WCAF have not been assigned to a broadcasting station. You probably heard WDAF at Kansas City, or WTAS at Elgin, Ill.

Q. I have a 32-volt direct current at my disposal. Will you publish a diagram showing how a battery charger may be made to work from this circuit? R. T.

A. If the 32 volts circuit is obtained from storage batteries you could attach your radio set to one unit which usually consists of three, two-volt cells. This would eliminate the necessity of having to charge an extra battery. There is, however, a disadvantage to this. The battery used for the radio would have to be charged more often than the others and in that you have to charge all of them at the same time the others would be overcharged. Another method would be to put your radio battery in series with the 32 volts bank and charge it when you charge the others; that is providing the charging generator would stand the extra battery. Still another way to charge the radio battery is shown here. All that is needed here is a bank of lamps, an ammeter, a switch and two fuses. Put in lamps until the meter shows a charging current of five amperes. This system can be used when charging from either a bank of batteries or a generator. With it you could charge your radio battery either at the same time that you charge the others or separately, direct from the generator.



Q. Will an electric light socket connection give as good results as an aerial wire? S. S. S.

A. No.

Q. 1. Will vacuum tubes ever or in the near future be as cheap as electric light bulbs? 2. How can I build a receiving set that will get all or part of the ninth district amateur stations clear and loud with the lowest cost? J. D.

A. 1. It is doubtful that vacuum tubes will ever be as cheap as ordinary light bulbs because the process used in the manufacture of tubes is much more complicated than that used for making light bulbs. 2. See almost any of the late issues of QST. This magazine is devoted entirely to amateur radio and will give you the information you desire.

Q. Will you kindly give me a sketch of the circuit of a lightning arrestor as described in the inclosed copy? F. K.

A. This shows the circuit as described. This particular arrangement will protect your set when you are listening in and afford a greater protection when you ground the antenna through the switch.

NEW ARRIVALS ON THE RADIO MART

A new tube socket worthy of special note has recently made its appearance on the market. The Duray all-glass socket as it is called is made entirely of a special highly efficient glass which reduces radio frequency losses within the socket to a minimum. The socket is very neat in its appearance and adds much to the general neatness of a set. Contact lugs and posts permit good solid connections by whichever method one wishes to use in wiring his receiver.

An absolutely fixed detector is an item that reflex and crystal set owners are continually looking for. They will be interested in the Carborundum fixed crystal detector just announced by the Carborundum company of Niagara Falls, N. Y. This detector is said to retain its sensitivity indefinitely, sharpen the tuning of a set, and add much to the quality of tones received.

Many will welcome sale of the Fleron stand-off insulator that is made particularly for holding the lead in and ground wires away from the building or walls. A great amount of energy is lost in numerous antenna systems because of the lead in and ground wires being too close to a building or wall. The Fleron stand-off insulator is made so that it can be attached to any flat surface such as a wall, window sill, or cornice. It is about six inches high, which is the correct distance that the lead in should be separated from any insulated or conducting surface.

Writes Book on Duplex.

A new book called "The Inverse Duplex and Tuned Radio Frequency" was recently published for the purpose of helping experimenters in this type of circuit. The author is John de Quedville Briggs, a man who has conducted experiments along these lines for the last two years. The book depicts a new phase in inverse duplexing.

RADIO FOR THE AMATEUR AND EXPERT

BROADCAST ROSTER NEARS 600 MARK

Greatest Congestion Is at the 275-Meter Mark Which Is Assigned to 28 Stations.

Five hundred and sixty-nine broadcasting stations are operating in the United States. This was disclosed by the Department of Commerce in connection with the issuance of the first list of American stations published since the new classification and allocation system went into effect. The Department has arranged the broadcasters by wave lengths issued of alphabetically as in former lists. Of the total, 93 have Class B licenses and 476 are Class A plants. According to the list, 96 different wave lengths are employed for the broadcasters, the Class B and Class A stations using 48 each.

Of the wave lengths, the 275 meter mark is the most congested of the lower bands, with 28 stations operating at that point. Twenty-five stations are operating on 268 meters and the same number on 273 meters. At 278 meters, are found 23 broadcasters and the 261 meter mark is assigned to 20 stations. Ninteeen stations are on 250 meters and 18 are on each of six wave lengths—226, 231, 234, 252, 263 and 266 meters. The lowest wave length assigned is 205 meters to WCRB, Providence, WHBE, Sewickley, Pa., WBBH, Port Huron, Mich., and KDZB, Bakersfield, Cal.

Of the class A wave lengths only two marks are assigned to more than three stations, that of 336.9 meters, on which WSAC, Clemson College, South Carolina, WCAL, Northfield, Minn.; KNX, Hollywood, and KFMX, Northfield, operate, and 394.5 meters, on which are WFI and WLIT, Philadelphia; KFRU, Bristow, Ok., and WOAI, San Antonio. Several of the wave lengths are assigned to three stations, one on the Pacific Coast, one in the Middle West and one in the East.

WNAC Boston, on 280.2 meters, occupies the lowest of the class B wave lengths, with KFUO and KSD St. Louis splitting time on the highest wave length, 545.1 meters. The entire power used by all of the class A and class B stations, according to the department's figures, is approximately 120,000 watts. This power is divided almost equally between the two classes.

At the head of the high-powered stations are WEAF, New York, and KGO, Oakland, each with 2000 watts. Eight broadcasters use 1500 watts, 12 employ 1000 watts and six station have stepped up to 750 watts. Thirty baby plants employ five watts each.

A new organization, known as the Radio Artists' Association of America, has been formed in New York City for the protection of radio entertainers and the development of radio programs.

VARIED OFFERINGS ON KSD PROGRAMS

Several Studio Recitals and the Best of the Week's Music From the Theaters.

Violin, vocal and orchestral music all will be presented to the radio listeners this week by Station KSD of the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. The studio series of recitals will begin at 10 o'clock tomorrow night with an artist program given by John Halk, violinist of the St. Louis Symphony Orchestra, and Julie Stevens Bacon, composer-pianist. The following evening at 10, Hugo Diedrichsen, baritone, will give a recital, assisted by the Misses Marguerite Harris and Antoina Kotthoff, pianists. Thursday evening at 10:30 Guy Golterman Jr., tenor; J. H. Roberts, basso, and Miss Mary Raines, pianist, will co-operate in a studio recital and Saturday night Chester Merton, tenor, and Robert Miller, pianist, will present a program also at 10:30.

On Monday evening KSD will broadcast the program from the Grand Central Theater, beginning at 7 o'clock. Tuesday evening the Missouri Athletic Association dinner music played by Rader's Orchestra will be broadcast from 6 to 8 o'clock and at 8:30 the orchestra and organ music at the West End Lyric Theater will be sent out.

At 8:30 on Saturday night the dinner dance music will be broadcast from the City Club. Preceding this program, however, Station KSD will give to the radio listeners the songs, orchestra and other specialties presented on the stage at the Grand Central Theater.

Station 5SC, Glasgow, claims British honors for 1924 in that it was the first to give a whole Greek play, first to give a play by children, first to broadcast educational talks for school children and first to give a complete act of opera.

NEW LICENSES FOR STATION OPERATORS

Special Classification Will Take In Those Who Desire to Specialize on Broadcasting.

WASHINGTON, March 21. — A new set of regulations for operators of broadcasting stations have been formulated by the Department of Commerce, under which many who were formerly ineligible may obtain a license for such duties.

The new regulations, which are the outgrowth of the Third National Radio Conference, are announced in the following letter to all radio supervisors:

"A new class of license is hereby established to be known as broadcasting stations operators' license, and will be valid only for the operation of broadcasting stations.

"The recent commercial second-class operators' license form will be used upon which the inscription 'valid only for the operation of a broadcasting station' shall be placed in the space reserved for grading at the upper left corner of this license form and also in the space provided in the lower part of the license.

"The code test for this examination in transmitting and receiving the Continental Morse Code will be at the rate of 12 words per minute, counting five characters to the word.

"The theoretical examination will consist of a number of questions on transmitting apparatus such as is used at broadcasting stations, receiving apparatus, storage batteries, motors and generators, and the radio communication laws. The passing mark for this class of license shall be 75 per cent.

"Credit for experience is to be rated as follows, and suitable evidence of experience must be submitted.

"Three months' service at any class of commercial station, including broadcasting stations, full credit of 20 per cent.

"Holders of commercial licenses having had no commercial experience, instructors of recognized radio schools and of radio courses at colleges, operators having only experience at Federal Government stations not open to general public service, 15 per cent.

"Graduates of radio schools, those having had special training at colleges and holders of amateur first-grade licenses, 10 per cent.

"Holders of amateur second grade licenses, and correspondence graduates, 5 per cent.

"Questions to be used in this examination will be furnished to the supervisors of radio in the near future.

"Operators holding commercial extra first-class, first-class, or second-class licenses will be permitted to operate broadcasting stations as at present."

How to Connect Phones.

The proper connection for telephone receivers and loud speakers is indicated by a red thread woven in the fabric of the cord tip. This tip should be connected to the battery side of the phone plug and jack. If it connects to the plate side a reversed polarity is produced, which not only weakens the signal, but weakens the magnets in the phones or speaker unit.

125 Stations Forecast Weather.

One hundred and twenty-five broadcasting stations are assisting the United States Weather Bureau in the transmission of weather forecasts, storm and flood warnings and special forecasts for orchardists and beekeepers.

African Imports Increase.

Imports of radio equipment in South Africa were more than six times greater during 1924 than the previous year, according to reports reaching the Department of Commerce. It is estimated that the 1924 imports were $820,390, compared to $137,352 for 1923.

Proper Use of Solder.

The way to use solder is to first make the joint as tight as possible and then use a minimum of solder to hold the joint together. The function of solder in a receiving set is not to make electrical contact, but to preserve a good contact which has already been made.

Tides 50 Years in Advance.

ondence of the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, England, March —An instrument called the prophet of the tides" has been presented by Liverpool steamship owners to the Bidston Observatory at Birkenhead. The machine will tell the time of ocean tides in any part of the world 50 years in advance, and it will also give the time of all the tides during the last 500 years.

HIS BAD HEADACHES SOON HEADED OFF

Sufferers from sick headaches frequently do not know that this symptom, with which at times almost every one is troubled, is often due to poisons in the body that have not been taken care of properly, on account of constipation or a torpid liver.

Such sufferers will be interested in the following story by Mr. Jeff Jervis, of Endicott, Ky., telling how he found relief from his own disorders.

"I began having severe headaches," says Mr. Jervis. "I can't tell just how they would begin, but soon my head felt like it would split open and I would be so sick I felt like I was paralyzed.

"I would have shooting pains in my neck and, if I turned my head, I felt like it would crack at my neck. My eyeballs were sore and I would vomit. I would be 'torn to pieces' for a day or two. I would take headache medicine and feel so queer afterwards I'd be scared. I didn't feel right—I felt numb."

In spite of these distressing symptoms, Mr. Jervis was soon to find relief through following the wise advice of a friend. To use his own words—

"I was telling a neighbor and he said, 'Get some Black-Draught and take a big dose when you feel a headache coming on.' I did it and took a few doses each night.

"Soon I had these headaches headed off. Now it is very seldom that I have one at all. I just keep Black-Draught and use it when I need it. I don't let myself get constipated."

Thedford's Black-Draught has been found to relieve sick headaches in thousands of cases that were due to constipation or a torpid liver. Containing no mineral drugs, it acts gently, helping the organs to drive out the poisons and regain a state of healthy activity.

Black-Draught has been in successful use for 80 years.

Pastor Calls Sunday Papers Ungodly.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

LIVERPOOL, March 3.—Sunday newspapers in England have an aggregate circulation of 11,000,000, according to the Rev. J. J. Armitage, who finds the influence of those journals to be lacking in Christianity. To their readers they say in substance, according to the investigator: "You can do without God; let us be pagans." Dr. Armitage declares that in 887 columns of reading matter, only six columns mentioned anything suggesting the Christian religion.

DUTCH GOVERNMENT PLANS TO LAY TAX ON LUXURIES

Measure Also Would Impose Consumption Levy on Hotel and Restaurant Bills.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

THE HAGUE, Holland, March 2, —A widespread system of sumptuary taxes is about to be introduced by the Dutch Government as a substitute for certain concessions and reductions in the direct taxation. This later has been extremely heavy during and since the war, and has caused much popular discontent. The income tax has been raised again and again, owing to the necessity of providing funds for keeping the country in an efficient state of defense.

Now a bill has been drafted granting increased relief from taxation to married couples, and for children, and also reducing materially the death duties. This would cost the state about 28,000,000 florins annually.

Against this it is proposed to impose a consumption tax of 10 per cent on all hotel and restaurant bills. The same amount is to be levied on the sale of luxury articles such as jewelry, antiquities, porcelains, gramophones, pianolas, tapestries, perfumes and garments for men and women, the sale price of which exceeds an established minimum figure; also on confectionery, canned goods and games.

Automobiles, pleasure craft, wireless and photographic apparatus, sporting guns and paintings will pay 5 per cent.

A noteworthy innovation in the project is that charitable bequests, which have hitherto been duty-free are now to be taxed 10 per cent.

Gas Almost Stops Mrs. Smith's Breath

"I was bothered so much with gas that I could hardly get my breath. I had heart palpitation, constipation and was very nervous. Nothing helped me. After taking Adlerika I am perfectly well." (Signed) Mrs. A. Smith.

Intestinal Evacuant.

There is now offered to the public a liquid preparation which is not only a wonderful effective and QUICK intestinal evacuant, but which also seems to stimulate the glands of the intestinal tract and to cause expulsion of flatus (GAS). This preparation, known as Adlerika, is a valuable agent for the purpose of cleansing the bowels of matter which has been in the system a long time and which other less effective means have been unable to dislodge. It is often astonishing the great amount of matter Adlerika draws from the intestinal canal—even right after a natural movement it sometimes brings out unsuspected quantities of additional matter. Many times it brings out much GAS, thus relieving pressure in the abdomen. Adlerika is especially valuable when PROMPT action is necessary or to encourage the elimination of metabolic poisons through the bowel.

In slight disorders such as occasional constipation or gas on the stomach and headache (when due to bowel inaction), a single spoonful of Adlerika often produces surprising and gratifying results. In cases of obstinate constipation or stomach trouble, if Adlerika does not bring relief in 24 to 36 hours the advice of a reputable physician should be secured.

Reports From Physicians.

"I congratulate you on the good effect from Adlerika since I prescribed it." (Signed) Dr. L. Langlois.

"Adlerika is the best in my entire 37 years' experience." (Signed) Dr. G. Eggers.

"I prescribed Adlerika with highly satisfactory results." (Signed) Dr. A. C. C. (Name given on request.)

"I can't get along without Adlerika." (Signed) Dr. W. H. Bernhart.

J. E. Puckett (a user of Adlerika) writes: "After taking Adlerika feel better than for 20 years. Haven't language to express the impurities eliminated from my system."

Adlerika is a big surprise to people who have used only ordinary bowel and stomach medicines because of its REAL and QUICK action. Sold by leading druggists everything. In St. Louis by Wolff-Wilson Drug Co. and Enderle Drug Co.

Mend That Cog; Heal Those Piles.

Had Both Protruding and Bleeding Piles.

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Your month's treatment for Piles received. Used according to directions and am very glad to write you and let you know results. I was in very bad shape with protruding and bleeding Piles for ten or twelve years. Have used one month's treatment and Piles apparently all gone. If you care to use this testimonial you are welcome to do so.
Respectfully yours,
S. P. REXFORD.

One Small Treatment Was Enough to Cure

Mr. E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: I sent for a small sized treatment of your Pile remedy and by the time I had used it all I was entirely well. Have had no symptoms of Piles since. This was in May, 1923, when I received the treatment. I cannot praise your remedy too highly. You may publish this if you wish.
Yours very truly,
H. S. HULL.

Praise From a Minister

E. R. Page, Marshall, Mich.
Dear Sir: Just a few lines to you in regard to your treatment for Piles. I have taken medicine as you directed. I was, when the medicine came, flat on my back for three weeks, when taking it as you directed brought relief to me such as I have not realized in 20 years. Any time you can use my testimonial I will be delighted to speak for it with the highest of praise. I feel there cannot be too much said in regard to this wonderful treatment.
Your brother,
REV. C. S. DRISKELL.
Houghton, S. D.

Convince yourself of the healing qualities of the Page Method for the Internal Treatment of Piles by sending for the FREE TEST. You will feel like a new person—enjoy sleep, be calm and energetic in your work, and relaxed for an evening's pleasure. Your mind and body can be depended upon to give quick and sure response to the duties and demands of daily life. Once gone—the right way, Piles will not come every few weeks.

The most important part of the Page System for the cure of Piles is the little Page Pile Tablet and you will enjoy chewing one or two after meals. This reaches the inside, where the real trouble is. The Treatment also includes a wonderful ointment for temporary use while the tablets are taking effect, and a bowel regulator.

This system for the Cure of Piles is the result of twenty-five years' experience with every form of Piles, carrying the endorsement of thousands who tell the cure of Pile cases. It goes further than a treatment prepared to give relief for the moment. Its purpose is to cure Piles permanently by treating them from the inside instead of the outside.

Take the time now, forget all that you have tried or thought of trying—sign the coupon and prove the truth of these statements to yourself. Remember the treating of Piles from the inside instead of the outside has been thoroughly proven. It heals. Read the letters on this page. Note the years that others have suffered and then found health and happiness. Many who followed this treatment twenty years ago still report not the slightest trace of returning Piles. Many who have taken just the trial package have been healed. Note that a patient with a case of bleeding Piles for ten or twelve years is reported on this page as completely healed after taking the Page Internal Treatment.

Letters come to us daily like these you read on this page. We have enough of them in our offices to keep you reading for many days. Yet the proof is what the Page Internal Treatment can do for you.

FIVE LOST SECONDS IN ECLIPSE BEING FOUND

Prof. Brown of Yale Explains Why Event Was Not Timed Precisely.

NEW HAVEN, March 21.—Success in the search for the reasons why the total eclipse of the sun, Jan. 24, was five seconds later than the prediction has been attained to some extent, Prof. Ernest W. Brown of the Department of Mathematics and Astronomy at Yale University announces.

"Both the sun and moon are present during an eclipse and the event will be late if either the sun is ahead of its predicted place or if the moon is behind," said Prof. Brown. "Inquiries from the Naval Observatory at Washington and from the Royal Observatory at Greenwich have revealed the fact that the sun was sufficiently ahead to account for two of the five seconds.

"An eclipse is so sensitive a test that a very small change in the position of either body is greatly magnified. The sun was only away one second of an arc, which is the distance the two ends of a foot rule would appear to be if looked at through a telescope 20 miles away. The cause of this small difference will have to wait for further investigation.

Diameter Too Large.

"Another second of the time is explained by the fact that the diameter of the moon used in the prediction was too large or that of the sun too small, or perhaps both. The edges of both of these bodies are very difficult to observe at ordinary times. The moon has mountains and valleys, and if the last ray of the sun shone through a valley a mile deep it would delay the beginning of totality by about two seconds. The sun's edge is difficult, too, because of its brightness, and it seems to "boil" on account of the motions in our atmosphere.

"So it seems that in spite of the fact that the place of the moon is difficult to predict accurately, it was not more than one second of are in error. We shall know more about this when the numerous observations which have been taken all over the world before and after the eclipse have been worked out.

Haze Beclouded View.

"Many were disappointed at their failure to see the rush of the approaching shadow on the ground as totality came on. The reason why it was not visible is explained by the condition of our atmosphere. To us in the East it seemed to be wonderfully clear after the clouds had cleared away. But the beautiful coloring of the sky all around the horizon and above showed that there must be much mist or perhaps ice crystals above us.

"Dr. W. J. Luyton was up in an airplane 15,000 feet high, and saw a thin haze all over the ground below him. At the time he thought we should not get a good view. So the haze was there, though it was so thin that it did not prevent us seeing the bright sun. It was visible like a cloud to the observer from above—the sun's light reflected and the darker earth as a background."

Sweden Experiences Mild Winter.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

STOCKHOLM, Sweden, March 4.—The exceptionally mild winter continues throughout Sweden, and up to the latter part of February no snow had fallen in this usually snowclad country. Winter shipping traffic in the Bothnic Gulf, usually closed in November, is still operating, and throughout the country cattle are grazing in pasture instead of being housed in barns. The mild weather has been a great boon to the poor, who have not been compelled to buy fuel, an item in the budget which usually assumes great importance.

Togo's Flagship to Be Preserved.

TOKIO, Feb. 20.—The battleship Mikasa, Admiral Togo's flagship in the battle of the Sea of Japan when the Russian fleet was destroyed, is to be preserved as a monument. When the famous ship was sentenced to the scrap heap a national movement was begun to preserve her, with the result that she will be imbedded in concrete halfway up her hull, and gangways will connect her with shore.

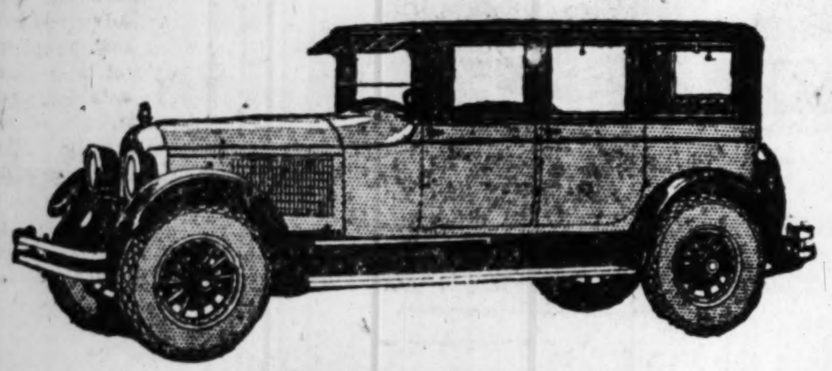
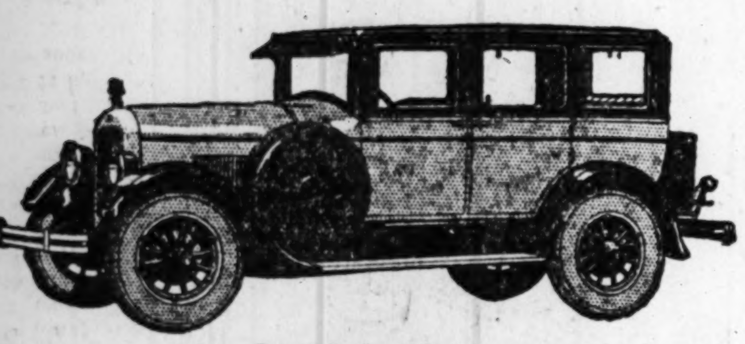
New Results You Can See and Feel—

Performance You Know Will Last



Paige 7-Passenger Sedan



Jewett De Luxe Sedan

New JEWETT

New PAIGE

Just imagine Paige-Jewett performance—already famous—now improved even further! The new results our engineers have achieved in the New Paige and New Jewett are almost unbelievable. They cover the entire range of car action—hill-climbing ability, getaway, slow pulling in high, riding comfort, handling ease.

And better than that—these remarkable new abilities are lasting. The fine performance of these new cars stays fine! A long life of trouble-free service has been built into the New Paige and New Jewett.

Our engineers have achieved what we can justly call—

PERMANENT PERFECTED PERFORMANCE

New Power Results

First—our engineers increased power in the New Paige and New Jewett motors. Increased it without enlarging the motors or speeding them up. The result in silent, smooth power is amazing. In a fast getaway or in pickup—their action is silken smooth.

We accomplished this by many improvements. Lubrication was increased—improved. Cooling system enlarged. Refinements to valve gear and bearings. Costly balanced crankshafts were introduced in these new motors. A silent chain, with an automatic take-up, drives cam, pump and timing shafts.

Thrilling New Action

Such increased power gives the New Paige and New Jewett performance ability that sets new records. On hills or straightaway—they're out in front. They get away first in traffic and stay away if you wish. Accelerate from 5 to 25 miles an hour in 7 seconds in high gear. On a bad stretch where the pull is hard, they take you smoothly through at a crawl in high. And so flexible is this power that you can drive from 2 miles an hour to top speed without shifting from high!

Next—Paige-Jewett engineers worked on handling ease. The result is finger-touch guidance in the New Paige and New Jewett with ball-bearing steering spindles and special gearing for balloon tires.

It's practically impossible to jerk or stall the cars, thanks to the Paige-Jewett clutch of saw-blade steel. And gears shift so quietly and easily with the improved transmission that you can shift from high to second at 30 miles an hour—with barely a sound.

And hydraulic four-wheel brakes (Lockheed type) are now optional on all models at slight extra cost.

New Riding Comfort

Then comfort was considered. The result is riding ease that you would expect only in cars costing thousands more. For spring suspension was completely redesigned to get the fullest comfort from balloon tires.

Another thing—we secured all the advantages in roadability and appearance of a low hung car. Yet we retained the 9½-inch clearance so essential in driving over bad roads. We did this by changes in frames, axles, and bodies.

Long Life

And lastly, Paige-Jewett engineers worked to make these remarkable new qualities lasting—permanent! Old features—proved right in our years of use—have been retained. Where possible, they have been improved. New features—proved in exhaustive testing—have been added for still finer performance and service. No untried theories have been employed to cry "new."

And the New Paige and New Jewett are sixes. Sixes—because our years of experience indicate a six as we build it to be closer to perfection in efficiency, economy and fine performance, than any other type built today.

Try Them Out

We call this new quality—Permanent Perfected Performance. Both the New Paige and New Jewett offer it to you at the lowest prices in our history for such quality. We'll gladly arrange a demonstration at your convenience.

There are fourteen new body styles and two chassis sizes from which to choose.
Paige list prices range from $2165 to $2965. Jewett—from $1205 to $1780.

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

DRAMA-MUSIC-MOVIES

PART FIVE
ST. LOUIS, SUNDAY MORNING, MARCH 22, 1925.
PAGES 13—20.

'Programme Opera' Suggested as Next Step in Music Drama

Disclosure of Plot Points Would Be Shifted From Stage to Printed Text, Leaving Episodes of Unalloyed Emotion.

By Richard L. Stokes,
Music and Drama Critic of the Post-Dispatch.

DURING next Sunday's production of "Lohengrin," we shall once more behold Richard Wagner struggling in equal vehemence and futility with the most refractory problem of his artistic career, that of fusing the unmalleable ore known as recitative into the texture of his music dramas. He never quite solved it, not even in "Tristan und Isolde." But the solution, as we have lately become persuaded, lay ready beneath his hand. It was disclosed in the symphonic poem of Hector Berlioz and Franz Liszt—a new invention which Wagner brushed aside with too hasty disdain.

The tedium with which some of us were afflicted during a recent performance of "Tannhaeuser" was due partly to an undistinguished and obtuse stage management. The Venusberg ballet was as prim as a dance of pious vestals at a Sunday school benefit. When engaged in dialogue, most of the singers addressed the audience instead of one another. The Landgrave Hermann and Elizabeth turned their backs to the footlights while welcoming the guests at the tournament of song. The six troubadours, falling into a debate, lined up at the front of the stage, grasped their lances in rigid hands, struck an attitude and, with countenances fixed straight ahead, caroled their arguments into vacancy.

More Harmony Than Rhythm.

THEN, of course, there was Wagner's self-confessed lack of a versatile sense of rhythm, an effect which appeals spontaneously to the blood. He relied for expression upon harmony, the appreciation of which requires a trained and intellectual ear. The tempo of his music seems heavy-gaited in these days of speed. Moreover, we are often alienated by flaws in the very crises of his plots. For instance, it was scarcely reasonable for the other minstrels to drive Tannhaeuser forth with swords when he protested against their doctrinaire ideas on the theme of love. He had been tutored by Venus herself, and felt the connoisseur's irritation with the tyro. (Quite as irrational is Lohengrin's desertion of Elsa because she dares ask him what his name is).

All these factors may have had their influence, but a principal cause of repugnance lay in the wide expanses of unlyrical text with which Wagner felt it necessary to explain the plot points of "Tannhaeuser." These are areas of exposition and narrative, identifying persons, times, places and situations. Of course these topics can be set to notes, but they are essentially incompatible with true music. When tones are put to such use they wear a mortified air of servitude; but with what exultation do they burst the fetters when an incident of emotion enters, such as Tannhaeuser's rhapsody to Venus, or Elizabeth's apostrophe to the jousting hall, or Wolfram's song to the evening star!

Ways of Revealing Plot.

YET, if you have opera you must have a plot; and if you have a plot you must tell the audience what it is about. Rossini, perhaps the deftest manipulator of recitative, hurried it along in musical patter approximating the speed and cadence of the speaking voice, with the lightest of chord accompaniments in the orchestra. Wagner evolved an elaborate style of musical declamation, with the center of gravity in the orchestra. Possibly with better judgment than either, W. S. Gilbert discarded music altogether in such passages, which he couched in text to be spoken and not sung.

Still another avenue of escape, through the use of pantomime, is found in the dramatic ballet, such as "Scheherazade" or "Petrouchka." Human actors are retained, but they are stricken mute and the orchestra alone speaks. A significant fact is that the plot, as in the symphonic poem, is not revealed in words, whether recited or chanted, which is directed to the ear, but in printed language designed for the eye. The disclosure of the action is removed from the stage to a leaflet in the hands of the spectator. However, the dramatic ballet has the disadvantage of being deprived of the most thrilling and the only articulate musical instrument—the human voice.

Opera With a "Programme."

SO THAT the writer makes bold to suggest a new art-form, which might be called "programme opera." The librettist who attempts it will rigorously exclude from his vocal text every trace of exposition and narrative, and [illegible] these indispensable facts to a printed "programme" such as those which, at symphony concerts, [illegible] the stories and identify the characters of "Till Eulenspiegel," "Tod und Verklaerung" or "Ein Heldenleben." On the stage itself we shall hear and witness merely a series of emotional episodes, [illegible] is the free and characteristic function of music to render.

Now that one comes to think of it, Arrigo Boito stumbled onto something of the kind in his remarkable libretto for "Mefistofele." It happened that the plot was universally known, through Goethe's "Faust" and Gounod's earlier opera. Therefore Boito wasted very little time on exposition; it was unnecessary to provide even a printed explanation. He merely culled from the poem those incidents of the highest emotional content, and set them to music.

THUS, in the Prologue, there was Chaliapin's debonair fiend, strutting about the empyrean, bawling his defiance of virtue, and whistling derisively at God on his fingers. The first act showed a multitude rejoicing in the advent of Easter, and then Faust's temptation and fall. Act II, in Marguerite's garden, came near being an episode of pure passion, stripped of all intellectual concepts. Act III, on the Brocken, was occupied largely by a ballet. The fourth act, Marguerite's death scene, was an uninterrupted outpouring of tragic feeling. Except for a classical ballet, Act V was devoted to the incandescent love-making of Faust and Helena; and the epilogue dealt with Faust's redemption and death, and the discomfiture of his enemy.

Signor Boito may not have written the greatest music in the world, but his luck in finding a familiar plot and his address in turning it to advantage enabled him to create an opera in which exposition is at a minimum and emotion at a maximum. His clever anticipation of "programme opera" may account in part for the fact that "Mefistofele," on its recent presentation in this city, was heard with singular absorption and fascination.

Revues, Opera, Drama At Outdoor Theater

THE new open-air amphitheater in University City will open July 6 or 7 for a season including two weeks of high-class musical revue, two weeks of opera in the lighter vein and one week of drama, according to an announcement made yesterday by Flint Garrison, spokesman for a group of men who are promoting the enterprise. Garrison, who is general manager of the Fashion Pageant, added that it had not been decided whether to hold the fashion show this year at the new theater or at the Municipal Theater in Forest Park. This exhibition has a season of three weeks.

The first spade of soil was turned Thursday by Joseph Solari, who is to be artistic director of the organization, and work was in full swing yesterday. It is expected that most of the fundamental construction will be completed in time for the opening date, though all details of the theater will not be finished until the following year, and the landscaping may require several years. It has been considered naming the amphitheater "The Garden Theater."

Has Elms Instead of Oaks.

THE site, purchased by Garrison and his associates in the early part of last summer, is at the southeast corner of the Olive Street

Nine Operas and Two Concerts Fill Week

WITH the first of nine performances by the San Carlo Opera Company beginning tomorrow night at the Odeon, with John McCormack's recital Tuesday evening at the Coliseum, and with a concert of the New York String Quartet Thursday night at the Sheldon auditorium, there should be something for every musical taste during this busy week.

The San Carlo troupe brings nothing new in the way of repertory and principals who have been familiar here in the past. However, there will be several shifts in casting, and some of the singers will make their first St. Louis essays in various roles.

Among the new assignments are those of Mario Valle as Scarpia, Demetrio Onofrei as the Duke and Josephine Lucchese as Gilda in "Rigoletto," and of Anne Roselle as Aida and Gaetano Tommasini as Radames. In "Lucia de Lammermoor," Mario Basiola, Miss Lucchese and Manuel Salazar will make their first appearances here as Henry Ashton, Lucia and Edgar. The same is true of Elda Vettori, Salazar and Stella de Mette in the roles of Elsa, Lohengrin and Ortrud, in "Lohengrin"; and of Onofrei, Natale Cervi, Miss Lucchese and Mario Basiola in "The Barber of Seville."

Open With "Tosca."

THE season will open tomorrow evening with "Tosca," given in memory of its composer, the late Giacomo Puccini. Following in turn will come "Rigoletto," "Aida," "Cavalleria Rusticana" and "I'Pagliacci," "Madame Butterfly," "Lucia de Lammermoor," "Il Trovatore," "Lohengrin" and "The Barber of Seville." Signor Guerrieri will direct all the performances. The list of works and singers is as follows:

Tomorrow night: Puccini's "Tosca," with Elda Vettori, Manuel Salazar, Mario Valle, Pietro di Biasi, Natale Cervi, Francesco Curci, Luigi de Cesare, Pietro Salori and Filine Falco.

Tuesday night: Verdi's "Rigoletto," with Mario Basiola, Demetrio Onofrei, Josephine Lucchese, Pietro di Biasi, Stella de Mette, Gilda Mercalle, Natale Cervi, Luigi de Cesare, Francesco Curci, Pietro Salori, Frances Morosini and Alice Homer.

Wednesday night: Verdi's "Aida," with Anne Roselle, Stella de Mette, Gaetano Tommasini, Mario Valle, Natale Cervi, Pietro di Biasi, Francesco Curci and Frances Morosini.

New Mystery Play Has One Gripping Act

Single New York Premiere of the Week Is "The Devil Within," by Charles Horan.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.

THERE was only one theatrical premiere this week, and that was a play by Charles Horan, entitled "The Devil Within," which was presented Monday night at the Hudson. The final act is mystery melodrama in the pink of condition. Throughout that last hour an adept and fearsome stage detective bellows home the third degree to a roomful of suspects.

The penknife murder which has been committed upon the wealthy John Blackwood has been not only a dastardly one, but also one offering an infinite field for pardonable speculation. The body has been carried from the study, and Elwood Bostwick, as Chief Driscoll, sits majestically behind the library table. His hirelings have assembled the occupants of the house and also the occupants of the lawn. The doors have been locked. With the dead man's attorney seated on the one hand and the dead man's physician seated upon the other, Elwood Bostwick points his finger and roars: "You!" This man has seen a murder trial.

Everybody Seems Guilty.

EACH in turn rises at the command of the great detective and takes his place in the witness chair. It is a fine and exciting performance in detectics which Mr. Bostwick then proceeds to carry off. Among those who might have done the deed, and to all intents and purposes did do the deed, were Blackstone's niece, his former sweetheart, whom he had betrayed, two illegitimate sons, one of whom looked the part of an expert stabber, a jealous suitor and Blackwood's own fiancee.

Then, of course, there were Blackwood's attorney, his physician and, as has been mentioned before, Chief Driscoll, the great detective. No, Driscoll was not the guilty party.

It has been noted again in this program that the management wishes the identity of the culprit to remain unknown to those who have, as yet, not seen the play. This is all right and shall be respected. Still, there is the haunting urge to say simply that at least three of the suspects who went scot free appeared to have had a better right to the crime than he who finally wore the handcuffs.

Two Acts Are Poor.

IT IS true, there were two other acts. These were less in the true spirit of mystery. In fact, they were pretty terrible. It was something of a competitive test in hysterics.

In the second act the victim was found, while outside a storm was raging. Here was conventionality. The lights went out. And all about were terrified persons acting terrified. Moreover, a fat Irish woman servant kept rushing in, saying things designed to act as comedy relief. Chief Driscoll, with great fortitude and good humor, showed this bothersome biddy the last word in patience. It would have been richly beneficial to the drama at hand had he shown her, after the third funny remark, the sole of his boot.

It is an unevenly written and somewhat reminiscent reproduction from the school of "The Bat," with a last act stirred to a glowing pitch by Mr. Bostwick. Also acting their parts well were William Ingersoll, as the doctor-philosopher, Henry W. Pemberton, as the slain one, and Lenore works by Wilhelm Friedmann, Bach, Sorsby, as the fiancee.

Koehler Makes Plea In Aid of Orchestra

FOLLOWING the close of the Symphony Orchestra season last Sunday, Hugo A. Koehler, chairman of the Executive Committee of the Symphony Society, discussed informally with a representative of the Post-Dispatch the matter of what he termed insufficient public recognition and support. He pointed out that owing to lack of resources, the St. Louis orchestra, with 76 men, is the smallest of the 12 symphony organizations in the country. In New York and Philadelphia are orchestras of 110 men, and not one of the 11 has less than 90.

"The symphony season just closed," he continued, "was in many respects notable. Again the orchestra was strengthened in personnel, although unfortunately not in numbers. It embraces many players of high rank, who could hold their own in any orchestra. Public and private school concerts were conducted as part of the regular curriculum of school studies. Many new compositions were heard at the regular concerts. The devotion of Mr. Ganz in using the orchestra as a means of education has attracted wide attention.

"A three weeks' tour through the Southwest trade territory of St. Louis is now under way, and it is estimated that 3,000,000 people in the United States and Canada have been constantly listening in on the broadcasing of our concerts. As an instrument of artistic enjoyment, education and civic advertising, the orchestra is surely one of our chief assets."

Minneapolis Raised $500,000.

MEMBERS of the Symphony Board have often wondered, the speaker exclaimed, why the St. Louis public does not take a greater pride and interest in its orchestra. He said that in Boston it has been customary to speak of "our" first 'cellist or "our second horn—phrases showing an intimate interest in the men of the orchestra. He referred to the "drive" made last year to obtain a guarantee fund of $150,000 a year for three years, with the result that subscriptions of only $315,000 for the three years were attained. If the full amount had been realized, he asserted, we should now have an orchestra of metropolitan size—that is, at least 90 men.

"Our committee," he went on "has often asked itself if our demands were out of line. Should we give up our ambitions and hopes, and let St. Louis drift into a second or third rate position, no longer to be classed with the big 12. Minneapolis raised $500,000 as a three-year orchestra fund six months ago. True, they had the leadership of a very wealthy and influential man, Mr. Carpenter, and such leadership seems lacking in St. Louis at the present. But the interest of the general community in the orchestra also seemed greater there than here. The goal was more quickly achieved, and apparently with greater willingness and more ready approval.

"A recent writer for the Detroit News commented on the fact that the largest subscription to the guaranty fund of the St. Louis orchestra was $10,000 per year, and praised the courage of the workers who were endeavoring to maintain an orchestra of artistic merit against such great odds. And yet this writer little knew how much that one donation meant to the Symphony Society and how its donor was acclaimed a real friend and benefactor. For some unknown reason we in St. Louis are not, with respect to large donations, as fortunate as Cincinnati and Minneapolis, not to speak of Detroit and Philadelphia with their Dodges, Boks, Stotesburys and Van Rensselaers.

Labors of the Committee.

BUT why is the support of the general public here not more spontaneous and willing? Considering all the labor, the earnest endeavor, the inquiry, study and debate which our committee members expend on orchestra problems and management, has the result repaid them for their efforts? Hardly. The public still requires too much urging and argument to induce them to buy tickets and boxes and subscribe to the fund. Some people seem to feel that they are in reality conveying a favor on the committee by attending the concerts. Last year, in order to handle our subscription seat sale, one of our committee members put it eight hours a day for two months on this work. Annually, to obtain renewals of guaranty fund subscriptions or new ones in place of those lost by death or otherwise, the committee members are put to an unreasonable amount of unpleasant and irksome labor. Criticism comes in plenty, but unfortunately not much of it is constructive or of practicable value.

Our merchants, with some notable exceptions (the Associated Retailers, for example), have never been willing to admit the value of our orchestra in adding to or fostering the prestige of the city by its annual tour. And yet that is an accepted doctrine in Minneapolis and elsewhere, and the merchants and manufacturers recognize it generously. Our Symphony Orchestra concerts are offered to the public at such moderate prices that one would suppose the house would be sold out for every performance. Aside from the extremely low prices for the Sunday concerts, our regular concerts are offered on a subscription basis at approximately from 80 cents to $1.60 per concert, including world-famous soloists, who alone command prices ranging from $2 upwards.

"What shall the committee do? It is almost at the parting of the ways. Shall it—in fact, has it a right to continue if greater and more ready support is not forthcoming? We think of many generous contributions and enthusiastic and well-tried friends and say 'Yes.' We think of the lack of interest in many circles, the petty criticisms, the difficulty in finding the means for our present existence, not to mention our hopes and plans for expansion, and we say 'No.' Perhaps the committee is at fault, but, if so, let new workers come forward and enlist in the cause—certainly they will be welcome. Or let us know through the press what the public wants. Otherwise, is it, after all, not logical to follow the advice which Andrew Carnegie gave to the Pittsburg Orchestra Committee: 'If the public will not support you, quit;' and they did. Pittsburg is not among the 12 orchestral centers of the United States today."

WILL GIVE REVUES, OPERAS AND DRAMA AT OUTDOOR THEATER

road and the Creve Coeur trolley line. On this will be erected a structure shaped like a bowl cut in two, with a seating capacity of 3000. The front curve of the bowl, nearest to the stage, will be about 80 feet across, and the curve at the top will measure 240 feet. The stage has a proscenium arch formed by two trees, as at the Municipal Theater, but they are elms instead of oaks.

Garrison, relating how the project came into being, said that when he and Solari put on the first Fashion Pageant, it was the greatest fun they had ever experienced, but afterwards conditions grew more unpleasant at the Municipal Theater, until three years ago, they decided they must have a place of their own. Many possible sites were canvassed, but at first they were looking for a natural slope like the hillside in Forest Park.

Finally the bear pits in the zoo gave them an idea of building the theater itself in the form of a slope; and soon it appeared that this plan would solve the problem of shelter in case of rain. Should a storm arise during a performance, the audience may seek shelter in the space beneath the amphitheater; and in such cases, it is planned to move the orchestra from its pit and give a concert, so that the evening may not be wasted. Rain checks good at some later performance will also be issued.

Sunday Evening Concerts, Too.

IT is also planned, this summer, to give a series of nine Sunday evening concerts, using the theater's permanent musical organization and in addition a new musical celebrity each week for soloist.

The floor of the amphitheater will rise from the level of the stage to a total height of 35 feet. The slope, 130 feet in length, will not be a straight rise, as at the Municipal Theater, but a series of four planes almost forming the curve of a parabola. This, according to Garrison, will make it possible to get a clear view of the stage from every seat. There will be two double rows of boxes, not at the front of the amphitheater, but half way up.

Apron Projects Into Audience.

THE rows of seats, curved in arcs of a circle, will rather swiftly diminish in width as one descends from the top to the bottom of the slope, since the angle formed by the two sides of the structure is so made that it would come to a focus 50 feet behind the front of the stage. This arrangement is expected to make for better visibility. In front of the stage, and projecting into the audience, will be an apron which may be converted into a pool or covered with a platform on which the actors may appear, thus effecting an approach towards the old Greek idea of intimacy of touch between players and spectators.

An elaborate system of promenades and landscaping is planned, and it is hoped to give the theater a social atmosphere of its own. There will be a restaurant under the amphitheater, in which playgoers may dine before or after the performances.

Gabrilowitsch to Play.

IT is announced that Ossip Gabrilowitsch, eminent pianist and director of the Dtroit Symphony Orchestra, will give a recital on April 4 at the Sheldon Auditorium, under the sponsorship of the Piano Teachers' Association. On the same evening Sigmund Spaeth will lecture at the Wednesday Club on "Common Sense in Music." Zlatko Balokovic, Croatian violinist, will give a recital next Sunday afternoon at Sheldon Auditorium. His major offerings will be Mozart's concerto in D Major and Grieg's Sonata in G Minor.

A musicale will be given this afternoon in the auditorium of the Town Club by Mrs. Karl Kimmel, soprano; Mrs. Esther Walker, contralto, and Mrs. Frank A. Habig, accompanist. Members of the Kroeger Alumni Association will give a concert tomorrow evening at the Church of the Messiah, Union boulevard and Enright avenue. O. Wade Fallert will give his sixteenth free organ recital this afternoon at the Scottish Rite Cathedral.

I Paid $100,000
To learn ways to beauty and to youth
By Edna Wallace Hopper

I have spent over $100,000 in my search for beauty aids. But that search has won me fortunes. It made me a famous beauty. For 40 years it has kept me a famous beauty. Now, at a grandmother's age, I look like a girl of 19.

Those aids are largely due to France. Her scientists have done the most to multiply girls' beauty and give added youth.

Now I offer those helps to others. I have arranged so all druggists and toilet counters can supply them. In four preparations I combine 52 beauty helps. And I gladly send a sample to anyone who wants do what I did.

My Youth Cream

Is a remarkable creation, combining many factors. It contains products of both lemon and strawberry. Also the best helps science gave me to foster and protect the skin.

It comes in two types — cold cream and vanishing. I use it as a night cream, also daytime as a powder base. Never is my skin without it. My velvet complexion shows what that cream can do. The cost is 60c per jar. Also in 35c tubes.

My Facial Youth

Is a liquid cleanser I owe to France. Great beauty experts the world over now advise this formula, but their price is too high for most women.

It contains no animal, no vegetable fat. The skin cannot absorb it. So it cleans to the depths, then departs. My facial Youth will bring you new conceptions of what a clean skin means. The cost is 75c.

White Youth Clay

A new-type clay, white, refined and dainty. Vastly different from the crude and muddy clays so many have employed.

It purges the skin of all that clogs and mars it. Removes the causes of blackheads and blemishes. Brings a rosy afterglow which amazes and delights. Combats lines and wrinkles; reduces enlarged pores.

No girl or woman can afford to omit it. It multiplies beauty. White Youth Clay costs 50c and $1.

My Hair Youth

The cause of my luxuriant hair, thick and silky, finer far than 40 years ago. I have never had falling hair, dandruff or a touch of gray.

A concentrated product combining many ingredients. I apply it with an eyedropper directly to the scalp to tone and stimulate. No man or woman will omit it when they see what hair youth does. The cost is 50c and $1 with eyedropper.

My Face Powders.

They are supreme creations. No face powders you have used can compare. Mine are exquisite. They come in two types. One a heavy, clinging, cold cream powder, in square box, $1. I like that best. The other is light and fluffy, in round box, 50c.

All toilet counters supply my beauty helps. If you send the coupon I will mail you a sample of any one you choose. Also my Beauty Book. Clip coupon now.

I believe eczema can be cured to stay. I mean just what I say: C-U-R-E-D and NOT merely patched up to return again. Remember, I make this statement after handling over half a million cases of eczema and devoting over 20 years of my life to its treatment. I don't care what you have used, nor how many doctors have told you that you could not be cured; all I ask is just a chance to prove my claims. Don't be discouraged but write me TODAY and I will send you a FREE TRIAL of mild, soothing, guaranteed treatment that will surely convince you as it has me. If you are disgusted and discouraged just give me one chance to prove my claims. By writing me today I believe you will enjoy more real comfort than you really thought this world held for you. Just try it, and I feel sure you will agree with me.

One Thin Woman Gained 10 Pounds in 20 Days

Skinny Men Can Do the Same

All weak men and women
All nervous men and women
All skinny men and women
Can grow stronger, healthier and more vigorous and take on solid needed flesh in 30 days just by taking McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets four times a day—as easy to take as candy.

And what a hit these flesh producing tablets have made. One druggist tripled his sales in one week.

Everybody knows that nasty-tasting, evil-smelling Cod Liver Oil is a wonderful vitalizer, flesh producer and health creator.

But who wants to swallow the horrible stuff when these wonderful tablets—McCoy's Cod Liver Oil Compound Tablets—are just as good and so easy to take.

A box of 60 tablets for 60 cents, and if any skinny man or woman doesn't gain at least 5 pounds in 30 days—money back. Ask Wolff-Wilson, Judge & Dolph Drug Stores, Enderle Drug Co., Johnson Bros. Drug Co. or any good druggist anywhere in America.

Be sure and get McCoy's, the original and genuine, and don't forget there is nothing on earth so good to make backward, listless, underweight children grow strong and robust.

CHILDREN EASILY WED, REPORT OF SAGE FOUNDATION

Youngsters of 11 Years to 15 Can Get Marriage License and Have Ceremony Almost Anywhere.

INVESTIGATION IN 90 CITIES OF U. S.

Not Only Do Minors Make False Affidavits as to Age, but So Do Parents, Relatives and Friends.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The great ease with which it is possible for minor children—11, 12, 13, 14 and 15 years of age—to get marriage licenses and to have the marriage ceremony performed, almost anywhere in the United States, is discussed in a statement made public today by the Russell Sage Foundation, which recently completed a nation-wide study of child marriages.

The Foundation's representatives visited some 90 cities, and found in nearly all of them that children under 16 years of age have little difficulty in obtaining marriage licenses by the simple process of signing affidavits, declaring that they are five, six or seven years older than they really are. They found that marriage license offices in many states require only one of the two applicants for a license to apply in person, and at certain offices in 10 states neither the bride nor the bridegroom had to appear before the license issuer.

Tests for Applicants.

Some license issuers have developed plans for discovering falsification of age by demanding various dates in rapid succession or by comparing dates of birth with ages given, but penciled calculations on covers of magazines left in license offices show that minors come prepared to evade just such a system of cross-questioning.

In many states children who have been refused a license at one office in a state grew several years older in their trip to another license office, a few miles away.

Almost universally, the affidavit of a parent is still regarded as the best proof of age in marriage license offices. The Sage Foundation's investigators, however, report many instances of parents swearing falsely as to the age of minor children seeking marriage licenses. The report cites cases in which marriage licenses were issued to 11 and 12-year-old girls because their parents signed affidavits saying they were of legal age.

Affidavits of parents are not conclusive proof of age, says the report, but when license issuers accept the evidence of brothers, cousins, other relatives and friends, they go even farther astray.

The report points out that in most states minors must present documentary proof of age to secure working papers, a license to drive an automobile, or permission to travel abroad, but in no state is documentary proof of age required of youthful applicants for a marriage license.

Documentary Proofs Suggested.

When primary evidence of age, such as birth certificates, baptismal certificates or passports are unobtainable, the report suggests the following forms of secondary documentary evidence of age: Immigration records, naturalization papers, insurance policies, adoption papers, records of social welfare agencies dealing with families and children, census age records (Federal), census age records (local), Bible records, confirmation certificates, Sunday school records, court records, commitment records to institutions for children, hospital and clinic records, records of settlement clubs and classes, and vaccination certificates.

Has New Hair
Kotalko Did It

Mary H. Little has luxurious hair now. Yet for years her head, as she describes it, "was as bare and shiny as the back of my hand."

When Mrs. Little's hair began to fall, she tried to stop it by using various shampoos, oils and lotions, but her hair continued to come out until she had lost all. She perseveringly continued trying to get new hair. She consulted a specialist, but no hair came. Her only hope seemed to be in having a wig.

Luckily she learned about Kotalko, and used it. Watching in her mirror she saw hairs developing. Faithfully she applied Kotalko and the hair continued to grow. It became long, strong and silklike. The likeness above is from her photograph.

Men also who were bald-headed for years report new hair growth by KOTALKO. Many testimonials from men and women. You may buy a full-size box at the druggists under money-refund guarantee, or write for a

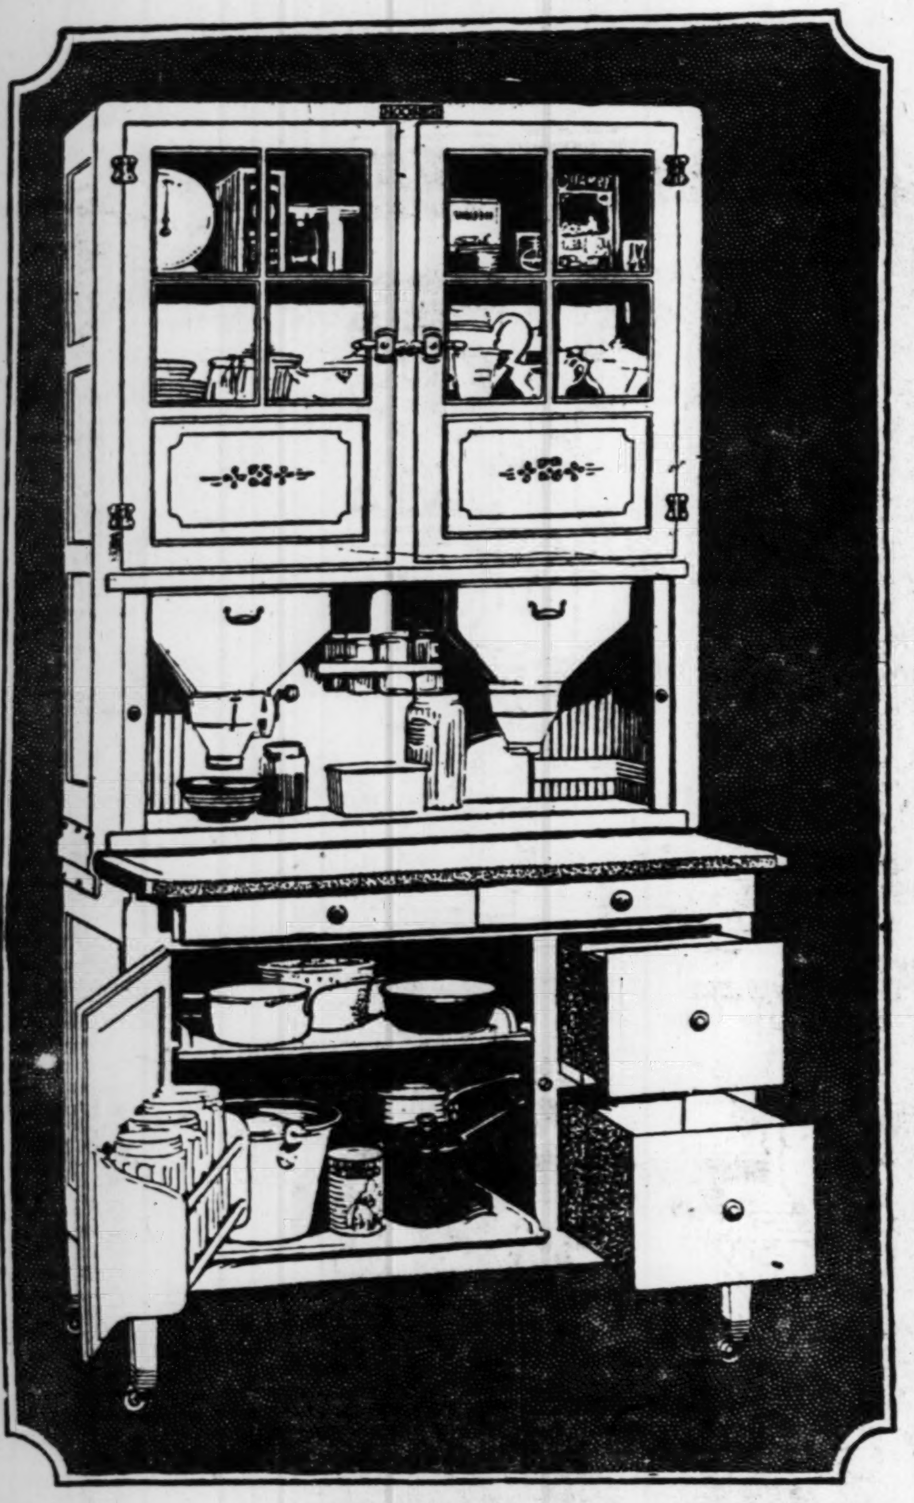
To Introduce the 1925 Hoosier Highboy



The new 1925 Hoosier Highboy

—a still finer kitchen cabinet

A real achievement—that's what experts are calling the new 1925 Hoosier Highboy. They say that it is the most wonderful piece of kitchen furniture ever created. And it is!

Never before has there been a kitchen cabinet so beautiful—with so many conveniences and energy-saving devices. These are its six new features:

1. New combination glass and wood panel doors. An entirely new decorative touch is produced by combining glass and wood panels in the upper double doors. These doors are fitted with handy metal and wood racks. On one, a single rack for extract bottles—on the other a triple tray for change, milk checks, etc.

2. A new-type flour bin. A new flour bin with shaker sifter attached, providing ample capacity for all ordinary needs, is suspended from the lower shelf. It is accessible, removable, and easily filled. A porceliron storage bin conveniently located provides an additional 50-lb. capacity if needed.

3. Enlarged shelf storage space. This arrangement offers unequalled storage capacity above—uncluttered roomy shelves, full 12 inches deep, give a total storage space never before possible.

4. Genuine porceliron storage drawer. The big lower drawer of porceliron is now converted into a wonderful storage bin. It is entirely enclosed, making an absolutely tight, moist-proof, dust-proof storage receptacle for flour, potatoes, all winter vegetables or for staple fruits such as apples, oranges, etc.

5. Genuine porceliron bread and cake box. Just above the storage drawer is another porceliron drawer for bread and cake—the finest and most convenient bread box ever designed.

6. Sliding cutting board. Over the bread and cake box is a new sliding cutting board of rock maple—placed just where you would logically use it.

These, remember, are new features. The Highboy also has the porceliron work table, velvet-lined silverware drawer and dozens of other conveniences and devices that have for years made Hoosier Kitchen Cabinets famous.

Each Hoosier dealer listed below has also a limited number of other Hoosier Cabinets on which the same liberal special offer applies as long as they last.

Cross, Irritable Husbands

MANY a wife is made unhappy because her husband is cross and irritable all the while, always losing his temper, complaining and criticizing. Often she thinks he does not love her any longer or that something is worrying him, when, as a matter of fact, the real cause of all their troubles is simply that his nerves are exhausted.

The terrible part of nerve exhaustion is that it steals on a person so gradually and changes their whole disposition, and they do not even realize that they are sick.

When a man or woman is upset by trifles, jumps at unexpected noises, become quarrelsome and worries about every little thing, it is a sure sign that they are suffering from nerve force exhaustion.

In an enormous number of such cases, the person is easily tired-out by the day's work and even gets up in the morning all tired-out. In such cases, you must replenish the exhausted nerve force. This is best done by the use of a substance similar to the actual composition of your own nerves.

Nuxated Iron, which may be had at any drug store, contains the principal constituent of actual nerve substance together with organic iron. Thus, it not only contains everything you need to build up your exhausted nervous system, but iron in a readily assimilable form, which enables your system to make use of this nerve substance, as it is the blood which carries the nourishment for every nerve and tissue in your body and without iron in your blood, nothing can do you any good.

When the exhausted nerve force is replenished an amazing change takes place. You feel new health, strength and energy and life becomes a pleasure instead of a constant series of irritations.

Get Nuxated Iron today if you are cross, nervous, irritable, weak or run-down, and if you are not absolutely delighted with the improvement in your own case from the use of this very first bottle, your money will be cheerfully refunded.

RAISULI MAY BE PUT TO DEATH BY RIFFS

However, Captured Chief Is Cunning and Has Wealth to Pay for Life.

Special Correspondence of the Post-Dispatch and Chicago Daily News. (Copyright, 1925.)

MADRID, Spain, Feb. 15.—The military directory is taking Raisuli's defeat with remarkable calm. It is true that when a chieftain is old and infirm as well as defeated by his enemies he becomes of little account in the savage world of Morocco. And Raisuli, once more powerful in Djeabla than Abd-el-Krim is today in the Riff, is now only Abd-el-Krim's chattel.

Quite possibly Abd-el-Krim may kill him. This is the fate many think is reserved to Raisuli if, indeed, he survives the hardships entailed by his journey over rough mountain trails, for Raisuli is so swollen with dropsy that he cannot stand.

Lying on his back on the floor of his ancestors' tomb, where he had taken sanctuary, he surrendered and from the floor he was picked up and secured to a contraption slung between two mules when Abd-el-Krim's orders were telephoned through from the Riff. Raisuli, remembering the fate of other chiefs such as the roghui of Zeluan, who was carried off by his captors in an iron cage when defeated in his attempt to invade the Riff, can hardly expect mercy.

Making Use of His Wealth.

There is one circumstance of which Raisuli, whose cunning is very great, may be able to make capital. When Abd-el-Krim's lieutenants surrounded Raisuli at Tazerut and received his surrender they captured much treasure belonging to the bandit shereef as well as a considerable amount of military stores from outlying posts which the Spaniards had deposited with their ally when they retreated last summer. It seemed then that Raisuli was mad not to retreat with the Spaniards who paid him so handsomely, for, left alone, he seemed inevitably doomed to defeat and capture. There is just a chance, however, that there was some method in his madness and that he counted upon the remaining elements of his great fortune, his palace and lands at Arzella, his heavy bank accounts abroad, to help him make terms with the emir of the Riff.

Spanish Line Is Strong.

Spain has little cause to feel sympathy with Raisuli. He has played her false more than once and has cost the Spanish treasury large sums, for which little was given in return. Gen. Jordana's humiliation in 1916 is too recent. When Gen. Primo de Rivera visited Morocco last summer many thousand Moors sent by Raisuli rode out to meet him, but when the revolt broke out a few weeks later those paladins of the Spanish cause were nowhere to be seen.

If, as is reported from Tangier—though still disallowed here—it should prove that Raisuli's defeat has been followed by his espousal of the Riffian cause, the result may be awkward for Spain. The Primo de Rivera line is undoubtedly strong, but the presence behind it of the unsubdued Anjera tribe, which has had to be surrounded by a strong cordon of posts, is a weakness that would be rendered more unfavorable still were a similar focus of rebellion to be created in the vicinity of Arzella, where Raisuli may still be credited with considerable influence.

DRYS URGE ABOLITION OF BRITISH NAVY'S RUM RATION

Churchill Instigated System by Which Amount of Grog Consumed Was Lessened.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 21.—Britain's merry jacktars were never so temperate as they are now, say the authorities, and the steadily decreasing consumption of the navy's "rum ration" has again brought about a discussion of the question of total abolition of this allowance, which is as old as the navy itself.

Proponents of abolition point out that the naval taste for liquor has changed and whereas in the days of wooden frigates and muzzle-loading guns great strength and endurance were required, necessitating some alcoholic incentive, the work of the present-day sailor is not so strenuous, and he does not need, or care for, rum.

But established rules and precedents are hard to change. Attempts in the past to follow the example of Josephus Daniels in banning alcoholic beverages when he was Secretary of the Navy, have always led to wordy warfare with adherents of the rum ration. The most successful attempt at cutting down the ration was made when Winston Churchill was First Lord of the Admiralty. He tried the ingenious plan of placing the letter "T" against the name of any man who preferred hard cash to hard liquor and who was willing to take money instead of rum, and the "G" against the name of those who preferred rum. This caused a howl at first, but everyone got used to it, and a notable decrease in the navy's grog followed.

Later the allowance, which was 3 farthings daily, was increased to 3 pence and it is reported that the navy authorities are considering a further increase in the amount of lieu money in an effort to decrease liquor consumption, even though such an undertaking may boost the naval financial estimates.

FRENCHMEN SUE WHEN NAMES ARE USED IN AMERICAN FILMS

By the Associated Press.

PARIS, March 21.—A new vein has recently been opened in the proverbial "American gold mine," thanks to American film producers in choosing French history as a background for scenarios. A Frenchman finds his family name used in a production and promptly sues for damages.

Two of the latest examples of this sensitive family pride have been furnished by a Monsieur Beaucaire and by the Duke de Brissac. Monsieur Beaucaire, who is a retired Prefect, finds that the film in which Booth Tarkington's hero figures involves his namesake in adventures which he thinks throw ridicule and discredit on the name.

The Duke de Brissac complains that the film called "Zaza" contains a character representing the Duke de Brissac, whose attempts to fascinate a fair lady, despite his advanced age, are used to move spectators to laughter. As head of the De Brissac family, the Duke demands compensation amounting to 100,000 francs for what he deems an insult to his ancestor.

Deaf? A post-card brings joy of good hearing again

Amazing Invention enables deaf to hear instantly
Sent on Ten Days' Free Trial.

Some folks imagine that deafness is merely a personal annoyance. But it's far more than that. It ruins the disposition. Upsets the nerves. And taxes the health.

Now science has proven it is needless to remain deaf. A remarkable little personal hearing aid has been perfected by a group of New York scientists. Immediately restore good hearing even to the poorest ears. Results are immediate—there is no waiting—no delay—no danger. You hear at once—clearly, distinctly, naturally.

The inventors are so sure you will be elated with this wonderful little discovery that they offer to send it to you without a string of any kind—for ten days' free trial. No red tape—no deposit—no C.O.D'S of any kind. To take advantage of this liberal trial offer, simply write to the Dictograph Products Corporation, Department 1341, 220 West 42nd Street, New York City. In justice to yourself, please do this now.

If you have lost hope through other methods, we are even more anxious to have you try this remarkable little invention. For it will not fail you; and there is nothing for you to lose. Simply send name and address now.

ALASKAN ESKIMO BEST EDUCATED OF RACE

Danish Explorer Urges Denmark to Adopt U. S. Methods With Those in Greenland.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

COPENHAGEN, March 2. — American methods of treating and caring for the Eskimos were urged upon Denmark by Dr. Knud Rasmussen, the Danish explorer, in a recent lecture here before the upper and lower Houses of Parliament. Dr. Rasmussen has just returned to Denmark after an extensive survey of Eskimo life in Greenland, Canada and Alaska.

American Eskimos, the explorer said, were better educated than those living in Canada or Greenland, spoke good English and in every way demonstrated their ability to meet the white man on his own ground.

Speak Good English.

"The Americans are absolutely right in their viewpoint," the speaker said, "that as soon as a primitive race has made even the slightest acquaintance with civilization, even in its crudest form, it is impossible to preserve the primitivity of such a race. It is then far better to make these men and women into ordinary American citizens, with the citizen's privileges and duties."

Dr. Rasmussen declared that the importance of the work of the American Bureau of Education, as represented by the many schools for natives in Alaska, could never be over emphasized. American school teachers, he said, not only taught the natives the English language, but helped them in many other ways, such as in the establishment of co-operative stores and the carrying on of infant welfare work.

Criticises Danish Policy.

He criticised the policy of the Danish Government in attempting to keep the Greenland Eskimo away from any contact with the white man, and pointed out that while the Greenland Eskimo lived in a state of primitive squalor, it was no strange thing for the Alaskan natives to own motor boats and large reindeer herds, and to be supplied with the most modern equipment wherewith to carry on his family life and business.

One fault with the American system, Dr. Rasmussen said, was that often the Alaskan native was not taught properly how to read and write his native tongue, and he urged that this be given particular attention in the case of the Greenland Eskimo. Reindeer, he said, had proven a great source of wealth to the Alaskan natives, and he urged that herds be established in Greenland wherever possible.

BRAZILIAN PROHIBITIONISTS START DRIVE AGAINST DRINK

Intemperance Is Most Apparent Among Workers and in Rural Communities.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

RIO DE JANEIRO, Feb. 21.—Reports from Sao Paulo announce the opening of a prohibition campaign, the publicity to be in charge of a prominent newspaper, O Estado de Sao Paulo.

There are three temperance organizations in Brazil, the International Order of Good Templars, with three chapters; the National League Against Alcohol, whose president is Dr. Miguel Calmon, Minister of Agriculture, and a municipal club in Porto Alegre, Rio Grande do Sul, where the medical students have initiated a fight against intoxicating drinks.

Drunkenness is not a vice of wealthy and middle-class Brazilians, who prefer light wines, soft drinks and mineral water. Public saloons in Rio de Janeiro are as respectable and quiet as tea shops, and it is not uncommon to see a Brazilian and his wife enter a saloon at midnight for ice cream. Although the city has more than 1,000,000 inhabitants, there are only three saloons which cater to prosperous business.

Brazil's problem is among the laborers, who drink large quantities of very strong rum. Scores of beer and rum shops are scattered through Rio de Janeiro in the districts inhabited by the poor people. The drink habit in the rural communities is said to be universal.

Students of social conditions claim that a growing problem in Brazil is the increase of the drug habit, especially cocaine, morphine and hashish.

MAYOR A "COAL MAN," TOO

Chief Executive of Calne, England, Continues His Deliveries.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

CALNE, England, March 3.—Appointment to the post of Mayor of Calne has not interfered in the least with the business of Albert James Strange, a coal dealer, who makes his daily rounds with horse and cart calling out "coal man, coal man," and who shoulders a hundred-weight and delivers it to the housewife whenever he gets an order.

Calne has about 4000 inhabitants, nearly all of whom know Mayor Strange and respect him. The other coal dealers also respect him, all asserting that he is always "on the coal job, early and late," just as he was before he became the town's chief executive, and, furthermore, his competitors assert, the Mayor has not endeavored to hinder them or to get the better of them in any way in his official capacity.

PELTS OF STRANGE BEASTS FOR WOMEN'S SUMMER DRESS

Latest Craze in London and Paris Calls for Skin of at Least One Animal.

By the Associated Press.

LONDON, March 21.—Animal pelts, of known and unknown beasts from all parts of the world, are being used to furnish a large part of women's apparel for the coming summer season. The latest craze of London and Paris customers is to get a skin of at least one animal somewhere on every dress. This has proved so popular in London that already there is a tight pinch for furs, which has caused most of the leading customers to hunt in hitherto untouched parts of the world for new animal skins.

One of the leading West End houses, anticipating the fur furore last year, sent out expeditions to the interior of Brazil, India and Africa. These have just returned with a collection of skins, most of which never have been seen in London or used to adorn women.

Most popular of these is a small thick gray, silky skin, which comes from an animal whose habitat is the trees of Brazil. It immediately became popular for cloaks, but on account of its scarcity it costs as much as the finest chinchilla. Other customers in London have organized expeditions who are now on their way to Brazil to hunt these animals. It is claimed that they overrun that section of South America.

Another popular fur is the skin of an unnamed animal of India, which is much like the fox. The popular color of dyed furs for summer wear will be "platinum" and champagne, the latter being extensively used along the hems of summer cloaks, which, like the dresses, are all fur trimmed.

Because of the scarcity of furs, a substitute has been found in a new creation of downy feathers which are carefully sewed together, then clipped and dyed.

Dresses for summer again show slim, hipless lines, but are a little shorter than the spring styles, carrying light-colored fur at the bottom or on the hem of an overskirt. Most favored colors are brick red and gold.

Germans Predict Charade Fad.

Correspondence of the Associated Press.

NUREMBERG, March 1.—Charades will be the next world-wide fad, in the opinion of German specialists in games who have had much to do with popularizing cross-word puzzles in this country. The cross-word puzzle is a direct lineal descendant of charades, they declare, and one of the many curious and interesting games which have grown out of plays on words.

"A TEXT-BOOK CASE OF TYPHOID," OR A SCIENTIFIC MURDER BY GERMS?

Judge's Intuition Leads to Indictment of W. D. Shepherd for Death of Millionaire

Harry Olson, Nicknamed "The Bloodhound," Thought It Peculiar That Shepherd Should Have Been Heir to William McClintock's Fortune and Nurse in His Fatal Illness — Testimony Shows Shepherd Sought Training in Use of Typhoid Germs—Death of Young McClintock Is Last of Series of Tragedies Which Have Pursued Holders of Ill-Starred McClintock Fortune.

By PAUL Y. ANDERSON,
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

CHICAGO, March 21.

HARRY OLSON was a noted prosecutor in the criminal courts of Chicago 20 years ago. He was called "The Bloodhound," for his relentlessness. Later he became a Judge, and took up in a serious way the study of the psychology of crime, introducing the science into the courts.

William Nelson McClintock, 21 years old, an orphan and heir to a $1,500,000 estate, died Dec. 4, at the home of his foster-parents, Mr. and Mrs. William D. Shepherd, in Kenilworth, a suburb of Chicago. In a will drawn by Shepherd, who is a lawyer, young McClintock left the entire estate to Shepherd, excepting only an annuity of $8000 to his fiancee, Miss Isabelle Pope, which was made payable at Shepherd's discretion. Attending physicians of irreproachable standing certified the death as natural and regular—"a perfect textbook case of typhoid." Officials did not question the circumstances.

Judge Olson and "Billy" McClintock's mother had been friends from childhood. As a practical psychiatrist, Judge Olson worked out a theory about Shepherd. As a former prosecutor, he applied this theory to "Billy" McClintock's death. The result was that he publicly accused Shepherd of murdering the youth to get the fortune.

Then, over a painful period of several weeks, he endured the derision of officials, some newspapers, and the bitter denunciations of Shepherd's friends. One official in the State's Attorney's office said if Judge Olson insisted upon an indictment they might indict an oyster, as it appeared young McClintock had contracted the disease by eating one. A newspaper printed the Judge's photograph under the questioning caption "CRAZY?" Shepherd threatened action for criminal libel. Exhumation of the body, and confirmation of the typhoid diagnosis, accented the ridicule. The Judge, nevertheless, stood by his theory with all the conviction of a scientific investigator and all the pertinacity of a one-time prosecutor who had earned the sobriquet of "The Bloodhound."

Today Shepherd is under a murder indictment, charged with giving typhoid germs to his foster son. Judge Olson's theory has been accepted by the State's Attorney's office as a basis for action.

Dr. Charles C. Faiman, head of the National University of Sciences, a Chicago institution of doubtful character, has made a confession declaring that he supplied Shepherd with typhoid germs intended for "Billy" McClintock, and schooled him expressly in the method of administering them, in return for which he was to receive a slice of $100,000 out of the fortune after Shepherd obtained it. Faiman was indicted as an accomplice, but expects clemency for turning State's evidence.

A Haunted Fortune

The somber history of the fortune comprises alone a tragic record, without taking account of its latest recipient's present plight. Death and frustration have dogged its shifting progress. Death and ignominy at the end a rope now threaten. Three men have their wives, three women have been widowed, a boy orphaned and a foster-father confronted with trial for murder, in the course of these sinister annals, in which remarriage and death have followed in inexorable routine.

Because of its rapid changes in ownership, fortune's origin is obscure, and was unknown even to some of its subsequent possessors. The accepted chronicle begins with death, somewhere near the middle of the century, of an English nobleman, who bequeathed a comfortable estate to his wife. The widow married William Hickling, an English country boy, younger than herself. The union was regarded as a mesalliance by her equals, and eventually, to escape social ostracism, the couple came to America.

The farmer boy, however, proved to be an able financier, and due chiefly to his acumen the comfortable estate became the present fortune. They settled in Ottawa, Ill., where Hickling bought land, engaged in business, according to the story, became the town's Mayor. His activities extended to Chicago, where he bought real estate that afterward became very valuable. He helped build a railroad.

His investments prospered, but his wife and the estate, now much larger, became his. In was the second of a series of changes that were to be many and swift. Hickling married Miss Sarah Gensler. He died and the fortune went to her.

She married her secretary, William McClintock. Then she died, and he became the possessor. He married Emma Nelson. He was killed and the fortune was hers. Two more deaths were yet to come, completely obliterating the family succession. The tragic train of circumstance was to take on a yet deeper hue. Before coming to that, however, it is necessary to go back several years and weave another thread into the narrative.

Two Swedish building contractors, Nelson and Olson, had come from Stockholm many years ago, and settled on farms in St. Marys, Kan. There were children, Emma Nelson and Oscar and Harry Olson. The Olson boys went to Chicago, where Oscar became a physician and Harry a lawyer. Emma grew up and had a sweetheart, Carl Sigfrid. On weekends she would go to Salina to visit Julie Graff, the barber's daughter, Julie and Carl Sigfrid being cousins. Carl went West; Emma Nelson met and married an elderly Chicago capitalist, William McClintock. It is said she wept when she learned the magnitude of her husband's wealth and its sad history.

The Elder McClintock's Fate

A year later, in 1903, a son was born, the first child to appear from all those marriages and remarriages. It seemed the deadly cycle might be broken. Alas! One day in 1907, as Chicago pedestrians turned to gaze at one of those rare vehicles, an automobile, the clatter of a runaway was heard. A charging team plunged headlong against the motor car, and there upon his cushions William McClintock died horribly, impaled on the end of a wagon tongue. Again the money passed to a bereaved mate.

Shepherd enters the story hereabouts. He had come a devious road. Born in a small Indiana town, his early years were spent in the slums of Indianapolis. His mother told fortunes. While a high school student, he was riding with Juliet Bohme, a schoolmate. The horse threw him, and his leg was broken. He was taken to the Bohme home, where he remained as a guest for several years, until Juliet married. He enlisted for the Spanish-American War, but never left this country. Stories of heroism which he told later, however, caused his Captain, years afterward, to describe him in court as "the biggest liar in the company." He said Shepherd's comrades called him "Ananias Bill."

He returned to Indianapolis and studied law. Then he drifted to Salina, Kan., where he married Julie Graff, the barber's daughter. For several years he worked in a drugstore. The Shepherds decided to move to Indianapolis. In Chicago Mrs. Shepherd met the recently widowed Mrs. McClintock, the Emma Nelson of their childhood. Emma was now wealthy, Julie had not prospered, so the former offered to aid the latter by getting her husband a job. This job consisted of looking after certain McClintock properties in Texas.

Prior to this, however, Mrs. McClintock had renewed other old ties, those with the Olsons, now lawyer and doctor. Oscar Olson was now physician to herself and little "Billy."

When Shepherd returned from Texas, he and his wife made their home with Mrs. McClintock. Soon they all moved to Texas, building a bungalow in a remote spot on a bayou. And here it is, at a period nearly 17 years ago, that Judge Olson's theory about Shepherd has its beginning, the scientifically elaborated theory which in the last week has become the official theory of the State's Attorney of Cook County. Let Judge Olson, its author, state it, as he did to the writer a few days ago.

The Chief Justice of the Chicago Municipal Court, to use his formal title, is tall, stooping and bald. He has hard gray eyes, an aggressive head, long thin lips, a harsh voice. He is a grim old man, a man of resisting metal, hard to turn from his purpose, hard to deceive, hard to placate, a corrosive man, one with stomach to hold on when the fighting is nasty. This is what he said:

"William D. Shepherd had a plan to get the McClintock money. He began to lay that plan, in my opinion, shortly before he took Mrs. McClintock and Billy to Texas in 1908. This belief is supported, first, by the fact that when a relative asked him what he expected to get for his trouble and pains in Mrs. McClintock's behalf, he replied: 'Don't worry about little Willie. He'll come out of it with his pockets filled.' Second, it is supported, as will be shown later, by the fact that while there he induced Mrs. McClintock to make a will in which a considerable share of the estate was left to him or his wife. This shows that even at this early date the idea of getting possession of the money was uppermost in his mind. Subsequent events prove that it remained uppermost.

The Murder Plot

"Jerome Matillo, a carpenter employed on the Texas house, will testify that Mrs. McClintock told him she was uneasy about Shepherd's actions, that she felt drowsy and ill, and wanted to get away from there, and that she wanted Shepherd kept in ignorance of the fact that she was planning to leave, and got Matillo to assist her. At the same time, Shepherd wrote my brother that Billy was ill, asking him to come down. I have my own idea about this. It would have been awkward if anything had happened and no doctor around to issue a certificate.

"Mrs. McClintock returned to Chicago a sick woman. Mrs. Shepherd followed her, and then Shepherd. Although he was her physician, Dr. Olson was not called. There will be testimony that Mrs. McClintock expressed aversion to, or fear of, the Shepherds. On her deathbed, however, she made a will, in which her attorney, Alexander Reichmann, and Mrs. Shepherd were named as co-guardians of Billy, to whom the bulk of the estate was left in trust. She died, having outlived her husband only a year.

"Reichmann agreed for Mrs. Shepherd to have the custody of the child, because he had no way of caring for him. Soon afterward, however, when he found the Sheppherds had taken the boy to Texas, he became alarmed, and filed suit to obtain custody. Mrs. Shepherd won the suit. Reichmann at that time expressed apprehension for Billy's safety.

"He was not alone in his fears. Although Mrs. McClintock had specifically requested that Dr. Olson be retained as Billy's physician, because of the old family friendship, and because she knew my brother had more than a professional interest in the boy, the Shepherds soon ceased to call him. He had from the beginning distrusted Shepherd, whom he regarded as an adventurer. In 1919 my brother learned that Shepherd had been displaying an interest in germs, and had made several visits to a laboratory for the purpose of studying them. Dr. Olson told his own wife he didn't like the looks of things, and that he intended to warn Billy against his foster parents. I believe he did so.

"Two years later, in 1921, Dr. Olson had what was diagnosed as a slight attack of ptomaine poisoning. Billy visited him, and they had a talk lasting several hours. I have reason to believe that my brother again warned the boy. On the next day Shepherd and his wife called on Dr. Olson, although they had not visited him for years. They brought some fruit, and my brother ate one pear. They departed, expressing solicitude for his health.

"I saw him about an hour afterward, and was struck by his appearance. His face was pink, his eyes glassy and dilated, his breath short, and there was a curious odor in the room. However, to my worries he replied that he was all right, and would be up in a day or two. I did not learn that the Shepherds had been there. I did not learn it until the day Billy McClintock died, three years afterward, when my brother's widow told me that and many other facts which now seem significant. A few hours later my brother, after suffering from delusions, died before a doctor could arrive. His death was attributed to angina pectoris.

Shepherd Asked About Germs

"Pinkness, shortness of breath, glassy and dilated eyes, delusions and the odor which I noticed, are all symptoms of prussic acid poisoning. I believe my brother's death was a prussic acid death. Unfortunately, prussic acid unites with embalming fluid and forms an oxide which escapes from a body in a few hours, leaving no trace. A postmortem now would not show it. Nevertheless, I intend to have my brother's body exhumed. I am taking no chances of overlooking anything."

One realized, without being told that Judge Olson could be depended on to overlook nothing.

"We come now to Billy's death," he continued. "Remember, first, that we have the testimony of Dr. F. T. Breidigan that in 1919 and 1920 Shepherd visited the Illinois Research Laboratory half a dozen times, where he made inquiries about bacilli culture, showing particular interest in typhoid germs. Shepherd says Breidigan is a liar.

THE TWILIGHT BELL OF BUCKHORN CALLS TO PRAYER; STORY OF A LOG-HOUSE COLLEGE

Remote School on Squabble Creek Is Giving Kentucky Mountain Boys and Girls Their Chance

They Come Down the Trails by Hundreds When the Doors Are Opened, but Some Have to Be Turned Away Because There Is Not Room for All — How Dr. Harvey S. Murdoch Has Found His Life by Losing It in a Remarkable Service to the Children of the Mountains.

By F. A. BEHYMER.
A Staff Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

BUCKHORN, Ky., March 21.

TWILIGHT on Squabble Creek, and the hush and peace of twilight. Somewhere a church bell is ringing. The prayer bell of Buckhorn is calling.

Through Buckhorn settlement and up and down Squabble and Middle Fork, and to the cabins among the mountains and to the travelers along the trails, the call of the prayer bell carries far and clear. At that call action stops. Children pause at their play. Boys and girls, sons and daughters of the mountains, who have come down the creeks to Buckhorn College to be taught, stand silent. Every head is bowed. Through Buckhorn Valley there is no sound save the peal of the prayer bell and the singing of Squabble's waters.

It might be well if all the world could come, at the end of a day, to the top of the trail, where it drops to Buckhorn, and listen to the call of the prayer bell, but coming to the top of the trail that drops to Buckhorn is a task. For Buckhorn is as far as possible from everywhere. That is why Buckhorn College is where it is. It serves the boys and girls, the young men and young women, of five Kentucky mountain counties. It is accessible to these, as accessibility goes in the mountains. It is shut in to serve where serving is most needed. The rest of the world is shut out.

When the college was founded, 22 years ago, the railroad, coming up the North Fork of Kentucky River, had penetrated the region only as far as Jackson, 25 miles away. All supplies had to be teamed up and down the creek beds from there or pushed up the Middle Fork in flat boats from Elkatawa, 24 miles away.

A Hidden Sanctuary

And, oh, those mountain miles! They tell you, now that the railroad has been built up North Fork almost to the Virginia border, that it is only eight miles from Altro, the nearest station to Buckhorn, but when winter is melting to spring and the waters of Bush branch and Gay's creek tumble over their rocky beds and the mud of the trail over the divide is knee deep, it takes a tenderfoot on a mountain mule three hours and a half to make the journey. Howbeit, in estimating the distance, it must not be forgotten that the mountain mule is peculiar and that for all tenderfeet he has a vast and consuming contempt.

Twenty-two years ago Buckhorn Valley was wildly beautiful, hidden away here in the heart of the mountains, but all that it had was its wild beauty. That and its needs, for the few families that lived along the banks of Squabble needed everything.

Their needs cried to Miles Saunders, a Presbyterian preacher up in the Blue Grass, and for two years he and his daughter, Louise, had spent their summers in this region of mountains and creeks, ministering to the scattered families, the father preaching to them and the daughter teaching them and both trying to lead them into better ways of living. Traditionally and temperamentally religious, these children of another age, who had lost their way in the mountains and been forgotten, listened eagerly to the preaching of Saunders and gave their simple hearts to "Miss Louise."

The Founders

Through these two, somehow, the needs of these Southern Highlanders were brought to the attention of people far away in the crowded places, and they cared. Harvey S. Murdoch, away off there in Brooklyn, N. Y., heard their cry and cared. He had come up through tribulation to an education, his best friend a Rochester lamp that, sometimes, had to suffice for light to study by, heat for his body and for the cooking of his meals. But he had carried on and Colorado College and Princeton Seminary had honored themselves by graduating him, and, 22 years ago, he was assistant pastor of Lafayette Avenue Presbyterian Church, Brooklyn, and the future was bright.

When the cry came from Buckhorn Valley, partly because his heart answered and partly because a strong young man was needed to go down there and investigate and make a report to the Presbyterian Board of Missions, Murdoch came to the mountains.

He came to Buckhorn Valley and Squabble Creek, and that is why the church bell of Buckhorn calls to prayer at the day's twilight. For he came again and stayed, and so there's a Buckhorn College and a Buckhorn bell to call to prayer.

They told him away off there in Brooklyn, that he was making a terrible mistake, but he answered that there were many to take his place in Brooklyn but there didn't seem to be anybody to go in his place to Buckhorn. He came to Buckhorn and they spoke of him, there in Brooklyn, as the fine young man who had gone and lost himself in the mountains.

Mountain boys and girls who come to Buckhorn College for an education, grouped around Dr. H. S. Murdoch.

Forgetting that One, wiser than they, had said that he that loseth his life shall find it.

They say, those who know him, that he has been losing his life ever since, losing himself in the toil of the day, all but forgotten by the world that knew him once, counting that world a small price to pay for the satisfaction of service on Squabble Creek.

Yes, you have guessed it. Romance came as it was bound to come, to the man and the maid. And so, after a while, they were married, the man from the crowded East and the girl from the Blue Grass, and side by side they served, losing their lives that others might have life more abundantly.

A Small Beginning

It had been a small beginning. The first need was a school building. Of resources there was abundance of standing timber, a decrepit sawmill and $240. It took $200 to repair the sawmill engine. That left $40 in the treasury. Forty dollars plus faith. Well, with all that money—and all that faith—there was no reason for delay. "Let's go," he said, and the mountain men he had hired began felling the trees and the old sawmill began shaping the logs to the dimensional needs of a school building 40 by 50 feet and two stories high.

Wages were not high but at the end of the first week he was broke. That is, he was out of money. But he had more faith than ever. "Saw on," he cried. Somewhere, somehow, he would get the money to pay when payment was due. It came, and although through the years there has hardly been a day when this Dr. Murdoch knew for certain where the next day's support was coming from, through the stress and struggle the support has come for the school's expansion.

They christened it Witherspoon College, but the mountain folks, with a talent for descriptive terminology, called it the Log-House College, with reference to the manner of its construction, or Buckhorn College, with reference to its location.

During the early years the buildings that were added to meet the growing needs were built of logs. In later years transportation of building materials has been more feasible and the modern additions have been of frame, with a log veneer that preserves the log-house effect of the group.

It is a notable group that they form now, facing inward on three sides of the campus quadrangle, class halls and gymnasium, dormitories and buildings for industrial training, the president's home and homes for members of the faculty. Others planned, too, in the effort, always vain, to provide housing and facilities adequate to meet the constantly increasing demands.

For, from the first, the one great problem of Buckhorn College has been to take care of all the mountain boys and girls who have come down the creeks, knocking at Dr. Murdoch's door and asking for their chance in life. From the deep valleys along the swift-flowing Middle Fork and North Fork and South Fork, from Lost Creek, Troublesome, Quicksand, Spring Fork, Laurel, Cutshin, Cow, Greasy, Red Bird, Goose, Frozen and Squabble and Long's Creek, and the score of others that drain the domain which Buckhorn College serves in Breathitt, Perry, Owsley, Leslie and Clay counties, circled and sentinelled by the county seat towns, 18 to 32 miles away.

They count it no hardship to walk the weary miles to Buckhorn, even at the risk of finding no room for them at the college. Or they come muleback, with a little brother perched behind, to guide the mule homeward if fortune favors the boy or girl seeking an education.

The College on the Creek

Back there when the college was visioned there was no question about the location. For was not Buckhorn Valley in the center of this domain and could not the students come with equal facility from the four points of the compass. Where Squabble, after tumbling down from the higher reaches, widens to pebbled shallows, approaching its confluence with Middle Fork, there were more level acres along its banks than could be found elsewhere and the lower slopes were gradual enough to admit of advantageous cultivation.

Scattered through those mountains were 20,000 descendants of the pioneers who, in the long ago, trekking from Virginia and the Carolinas, lost their way in the mountains or hearkened to the call of the mountains, stayed there and let the world pass on. And their needs were so great.

The few native schools were of the most primitive character. Education was limited practically to what was handed down from one generation to the next. Illiterate, they yet possessed a rugged intelligence which enabled them to adapt themselves to the hard conditions of their lives. If, in the process of adaptation, moonshine whisky had a part, it was to them an economic and not a moral matter, for the corn that they raised in their perpendicular patches could not be transported and corn whisky could. And if blood vengeance not infrequently took the place of lawful adjudication, it could not be denied that the justice of the distant courts was slow and uncertain.

Religious, educational and economical were their needs and to supplying those needs Dr. Murdoch and his wife had dedicated their lives, to give religious inclinations the guidance that was lacking, to educate them and show them that there was a better way to live.

Dr. Murdock's Work

It had at the beginning seemed to be an impossible thing, and even after much bad been done it seemed impossible. It seemed so to Newell Buck, novelist, who came riding by one day and went away and told about the people over there on Squabble who were attempting the impossible and accomplishing it.

Here it stands, the Log-House College, with scattered cottages of villagers about it, and here last fall came 425 boys and girls, grown men and women and little children, hungry for the knowledge that it offers. For the curriculum embraces everything from the kindergarten to the plowed and planted field. The kindergarten and grades for the children near about, the usual preparatory courses for the older boys and girls, training for teachers, domestic science, home nursing, the manual trades. And there are homes for orphan boys and girls and a hospital which serves the region and where, from time to time, specialists from out yonder come to hold clinics and give of their skill to the afflicted.

Sorrow came six years ago to Dr. Murdock in the death of the companion who, with him, had visioned this and helped bring it about.

And there was sorrow, too, among the students who had been taught by her and the mountain men and women to whom she had ministered. When time's healing had been wrought another took her place and now Dr. Murdock is sustained in his labors by the devotion of this other wife, Mrs. Mary C. Murdock.

Earnest Students

Always, in view of the need, the emphasis at Buckhorn has been upon religious instruction. Of fervor, induced by the exhortations of the mountain preachers, there was no lack even among those who found it expedient to make moonshine whisky or kill their enemies, or both. What, they felt they had a right to ask, had moonshine and killin's to do with religion and what had religion to do with the

There were feuds in the mountains. Many of the students came from families that were deep in these vendettas. There was not much, it seemed, that the laggard law could do, but if the boys and girls could be taught away from these things there would be the dawning of a better day. So always there has been careful religious instruction, along with the training of mind and hand. Chapel exercises every morning, universal Bible teaching and the holding of church services at Buckhorn church and at scattered school houses.

Angelus

And, at each day's twilight, the call to prayer from the belfry of the community church. For nine years the ringing of the bell was the labor of love of a little mountain woman, Mrs. Nancy Jane Smith, and then one twilight, it tolled the passing of her [illegible] spirit. Her son rang the prayer bell [illegible] Buckhorn College had done all that it could for him and he had gone away, as many others have gone, to the Presbyterian Theological Seminary at Louisville. Charley [illegible] rings it now.

Twilight now again on Squabble Creek as a traveler, departing, climbs to the top of the trail. And the hush and peace of twilight. And the prayer bell of Buckhorn is calling. Back there in the valley every head is bowed. No sound save the peal of the prayer bell and the singing of Squabble's waters.

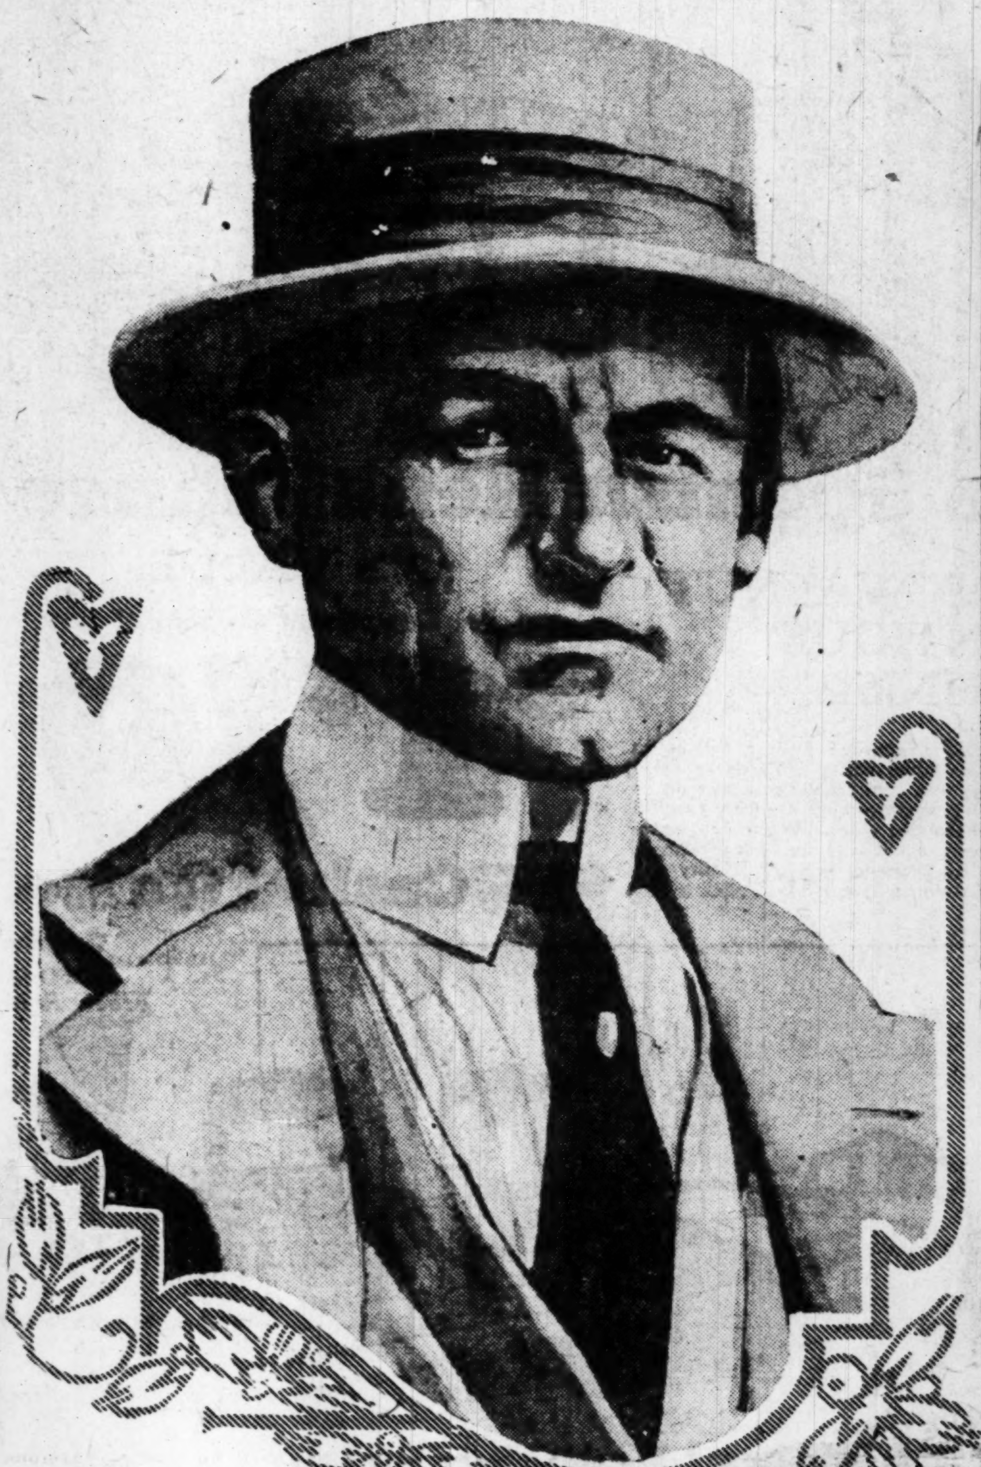
JEAN ST. CYR



By a Special Correspondent of the Post-Dispatch.

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., March 21.

AFTER 16 years earnest practice of his profession Jean Harald Edward de Saint Cyr has come into his reward. The reward is $10,000,000.

It just goes to show that if a man has selected the occupation for which he is best fitted, and if he applies himself assiduously he cannot fail. Jean St. Cyr in early manhood was granted the opportunity to be the husband of a rich, elderly widow. His talents were such that he would be most successful with such a wife. His particular art lay in soothing her declining years.

There were two rich widows in his life, as it turned out. The first, Mrs. Caroline Redfield, whom he married in 1909 when she was 70, left him $100,000 at her death. This sum enabled him to move in the social plane of a much richer widow, Mrs. James H. Smith. He married her in 1915 when she was 60 and she died March 3 at her $500,000 home near San Mateo. Newspapers announced the other day that she had bequeathed Jean St. Cyr one-third of a $30,000,000 estate. As with his first wife, he must have pleased his second until the end, which is testimony to his genius.

Now at 43 Jean St. Cyr stands at the top of his profession. His $10,000,000 rating stamps him as a master of the art. He can relax now, having earned a competency. Perhaps he will marry a young and penniless maiden who can soothe his declining years. His friends say that his $10,000,000 record may remain unbroken for many years, so there really is no need of his adding to it.

A Slow Start

Jean St. Cyr, as is the case of many a professional man, was slow in finding his true vocation. He was even a bit slow about finding his name. Down in Waco, Tex., when a child he was christened John Henry Thompson and Waco folks called him plain Jack Thompson. This served him very well in Waco, those days, but he did not stay there long. He apparently felt an urge for a larger life, an urge for new scenes and new people. It was a matter of course that he should pick New York.

In New York there were too many Jack Thompsons. His name would give him no distinction. So he appropriated Jean Harald Edward de Saint Cyr from a magazine article which dealt with a famous French family. Here was a name that suggested blue blood, [illegible], France, chivalry, romance. Moreover, it was a distinctive alias—Jean St. Cyr—if you said it real fast it sounded like Jean Sincere.

He arrived in New York in 1904, being then 22 years of age. He was rather a good looking youngster although a bit too slim and girlish. Yet were not Frenchmen slim, dapper men? Friends noticed that he began to practice a bow from the waist. and how to roll his eyes, and how to kiss a lady's hand. His voice was drawly and nasal, but he labored to improve that.

He Becomes a Gentleman

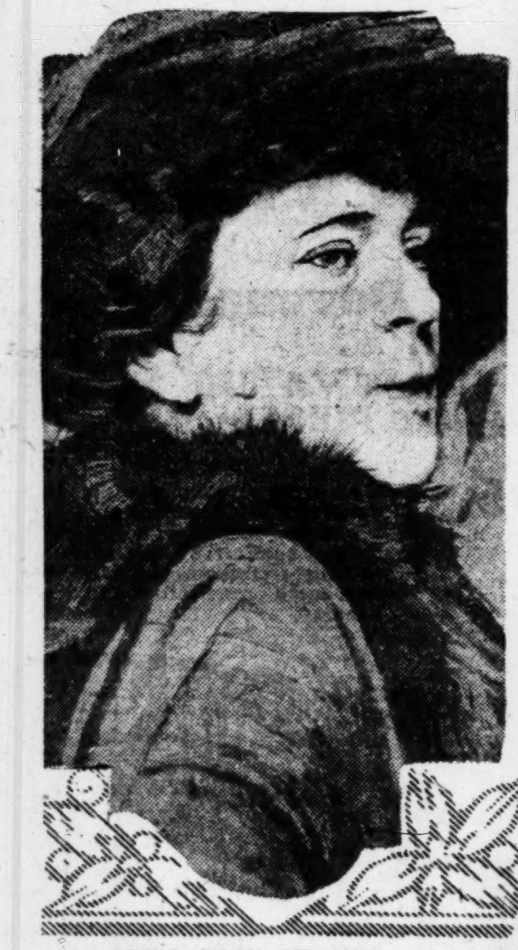
It was characteristic of him that he should seek some very genteel form of employment at first. He became a haberdasher's clerk. For a while he worked at Wanamaker's behind the hat counter and then for Saks & Co. Here he picked up the manners of a gentleman. A gentleman's manners were more ceremonious in those days than they are now, but Jean St. Cyr had no difficulty in mastering the code. He watched gentlemen as he [illegible] them hats, and he practiced.

Just what led him to seek a job as a chorus man is not known. Perhaps he had looked about and had seen that the quickest way to society was through the stage. Perhaps he even then formed the conclusion that he would find happiness with a rich, elderly widow. He knew that rich, elderly widowers sometimes married chorus girls. Did rich, elderly widows ever marry chorus men? He would tempt fate.

His period on the stage seemed to have convinced him as to his life work. He did not meet a widow at the stage door but he heard his comrades talking. "I'm going to get me a John with plenty of rocks," said the chorus ladies in the slang of that period, and the chorus men said, "I'm going to get me a rich widow and settle down."

Jean St. Cyr quit the stage and accepted a position as hotel clerk at the Waldorf Astoria. He saw plenty of rich widows there, and those who knew his ambition told him he had made a start with bright prospects. It was in 1908, after four years in New York, that he found the first opening. He met Robert von Schwemm.

He and Von Schwemm were kindred spirits. Von Schwemm's name had been Robert Swem, and his father was a telegrapher at Trenton, Pa. Possibly they confessed to each other. At any rate they joined fortunes in a definite campaign. Swem had ingratiated himself with Mrs. Caroline Redfield, widow of a Hartford, Conn., banker.



MRS. JEAN ST. CYR

She was the widow of James H. (Silent) Smith and the divorced wife of William Rhinelander Stewart when she married St. Cyr.

The Widow Redfield

"She treats me like a son," he told St. Cyr.

Mrs. Redfield, a cheery wisp of a woman, nearing 70, took an instant liking to St. Cyr when Swem introduced him. One story is that St. Cyr caught on with her as a private secretary on Swem's recommendation. Anyway, Jean St. Cyr was adopted by Mrs. Redfield as a second son.

The two young fellows lived in her house in Yonkers and had the privileges of sons. The servants called them "Mr. Robert" and "Mr. Jean." They went everywhere with her, summering at Bar Harbor and wintering in Florida.

Jean St. Cyr began to attract attention by his peculiar taste in dress. He wore pastel shades in linen, romantic hats with floppy brims, coats of outlandish cut and walked with an air. When newspaper reporters accosted him he would burst out, "Oh, dear, I'm not the person you want to see." He was noted, too, for his very polite manner among ladies. He bowed and kissed their hand. When questioned as to his past he said that he had been born in France but had come to this country at an early age with relatives. A scion of a very old and wealthy French family. Ah, yes. But American at heart. He chose to spend his income over here.

The Princess Braganza with her children. Princess Nada and Prince Miguel stand on her right and Prince John at her left.

Sometimes he would be addressed in French. It was his custom to explain that he had come to America at such an early age he had never learned his native tongue.

The First Job

In 1909 he and Robert Swem made some sort of agreement. That April Jean St. Cyr was married to Mrs. Redfield, secretly, at an Episcopal rectory in Jersey City. The witnesses were Swem and the wife of the minister. It is said that friends who were let in on the news later, joked Swem about stepping back and allowing St. Cyr to carry off the prize.

"I got the best of the bargain," he replied, cryptically.

Servants soon noticed a change in St. Cyr's demeanor. He told them to address him thereafter as "Mr. St. Cyr." His taste in clothes grew more fantastic and he plunged into a series of extravagances. He purchased a white racing car, engaged a Japanese valet and appeared at social affairs wearing costly jewelry. Robert Swem continued to make his home with the St. Cyrs. Trips to Palm Beach in the winter and to Alexandria Bay and Bar Harbor during the warm months continued.

Friends of Mrs. St. Cyr did not know for several years of her marriage. They had remarked how attentive Mr. Jean was, and how fond of him she appeared to be. But there was a gasp when the marriage announcement came.

For five years Jean St. Cyr applied himself to his new job as Mrs. St. Cyr's husband. He seemed to delight in the work, although he found that the hours were somewhat long. It was quite confining, too, as Mrs. St. Cyr did not care much for travel. Yet, friends never heard him complain. Reporters who saw the St. Cyrs at occasional social functions noted that the young husband was cheerfully attentive to his wife.

Crape and $100,000

In 1914 Mrs. St. Cyr died. She had made a will two years before, leaving $100,000, the bulk of what remained of her money to her husband. He seemed genuinely grief stricken. After she was buried at Yonkers, the widower traveled to Palm Beach. At the Southern resort he appeared in a coat made of funeral crepe and a hat heavily banded with crepe. He astonished friends of Mrs. St. Cyr by falling on their necks and weeping when they mentioned his bereavement.

However, he soon rallied. Maj. E. Gray Pendleton of Philadelphia, cousin of the first Mrs. John Jacob Astor, and the social dean of Palm Beach in those days had known Mrs. Redfield-St. Cyr very well. To him the sorrowing widower appealed. He declared he must find relief in social pleasure or he would die. Would the Major sort of introduce him around? The Major replied that he would, but suggested he had best wait a few months longer. St. Cyr was insistent.

He started in a round of gayeties, well supplied with funds from his wife's estate. At a party he first saw Mrs. James H. Smith, widow of "Silent" Smith, and former wife of William Rhinelander Stewart. He knew that Mrs. Smith had been left the bulk of her second husband's wealth, and that he had inherited $70,000,000 from an English uncle. He knew, moreover, that she was through the Rhinelanders and Stewarts one of the bon ton of New York and had the reputation of being "the most patrician-looking woman in America."

Maj. Pendleton said afterwards that St. Cyr was rather rude about it.

"How much is she worth?" he inquired.

"I am not acquainted with her financial affairs," the Major replied.

He Meets His Next Wife

A few minutes later the Major happened to speak to Mrs. Smith. And he found Jean St. Cyr right at his elbow.

"Of course there was nothing for me to do but introduce the fellow," Maj. Pendleton explained to reporters afterwards.

In this way Jean St. Cyr applied for his second position. He had liked the work so much he would not give it up. Having been the husband of one wealthy widow and made a success, he was qualified to look after Mrs. Smith the rest of her life. It was a tremendous promotion for him, too. Mrs. Redfield had been only moderately well known. Mrs. Smith was famous.

Her daughter, Anita, had married Prince Miguel Braganza, son of the claimant of the throne of Portugal. He was a Duke in his own right. Her son, William Rhinelander Stewart Jr., was a society leader in New York. Her first husband had been a famous clubman. Her second husband had been the mysterious "Silent" Smith, whose inheritance of millions and whose operations on the New York Stock Exchange made reams of newspaper copy.

It was a bold stroke, and Palm Beach society did not even imagine that Jean St. Cyr would attempt it. Mrs. Smith was 60 and a woman of the world. She had been everywhere and seen everything; had all that money could buy, except a young husband. Her friends did not believe she wanted a husband again.

Jean Harald Edward de Saint Cyr's courtship of the elderly widow astounded society. People who saw them much in each other's company refused to believe their eyes.

The Prince and Princess Braganza on their wedding day. He is pretender to the throne of Portugal, and when they were married all the pomp of a royal wedding attended.

He Is Exposed

They were married in 1915. He gave his age as 39 and she gave hers as 47. The marriage created a sensation at White Sulphur Springs, Va., where the St. Cyrs' spent part of their honeymoon. But St. Cyr was accepted for what he had become—the husband of a woman of high social standing. He had a charm of his own, it must be said, and particularly among women. Slender, dapper, of most courteous address, he ornamented the Smith establishment. His attentions to his wife were constant and marked with many endearments, and she seemed proud of her new mate.

The Princess, who was An[illegible] Stewart, with her first born, Prince John.

No one in these years since he left Waco had questioned St. Cyr's pedigree. He said he was a Frenchman and everyone believed him. He said he had an income of $60,000 a year and all but a few tradespeople believed that.

The denouement came deviously. Newspaper photographers had snapped many views of St. Cyr after he became the fiance of Mrs. Smith. One of these was published in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch. A Waco citizen saw the picture and said to himself, "Danged if that ain't Jack Thompson, one of our home boys." So he wrote his suspicions to the papers.

In January of 1916 the New York World, after a long and careful investigation, exposed Jean St. Cyr as an impostor. Long articles were published reciting the facts in his life and it was established that he had been born Jack Thompson of Waco. St. Cyr, who with his wife was at The Breakers in Palm Beach when the stories came out, stoutly denied that he was Jack Thompson. He declared it was a case of mistaken identity.

Roses and $10,000,000

His wife said:

"I don't care what they write about him. Just so they don't call me an old woman."

The Saint Cyrs fled to Washington, Philadelphia and New York. Then they forsook the East altogether. Moving to California, Mrs. St. Cyr purchased El Cerrito in the foothills near San Mateo.

Suddenly, they dropped from sight. Jean St. Cyr was no longer a story. He had married and his wife apparently was satisfied with him. So long as he kept his job the newspapers were little interested. And he did keep his job. He stood by his contract without a murmur as far as the world knows. For 10 years it had been so.

No one knows how near he came to earning that $10,000,000 during those 10 years. Probably it was "Jean do this" and "Jean do that" for long months. But then, each occupation has its unpleasant side. Jean St. Cyr is no one to complain. Now she is dead and he will share equally with her two children in the estate. That's fair enough, isn't it?

'Text-Book Typhoid,' or Murder?

"Next we have the testimony given at the inquest by Dr. George Fosberg. He says Shepherd visited him twice last summer and asked not only about typhoid germs, but also about poisons. He testified Shepherd told him a young male relative of his had died under mysterious circumstances and he intended having the body exhumed. He inquired whether a postmortem would disclose this administration of typhoid germs, and inquired what deadly poisons could be administered without leaving traces. Shepherd says Fosberg is a liar.

"Consider now the will. Shepherd drew it. Shepherd is the beneficiary. Reichmann, one of the boy's guardians, was not consulted. The trust company which administered the estate was not consulted. Observe that the beneficiary is Shepherd, not Mrs. Shepherd, Billy's guardian. This is interesting when we learn that for several years Shepherd has been carrying on an amorous correspondence with Estelle Gehling, a nurse, who says he promised to divorce his wife and marry her. Remember that the will was made after Billy had announced his intention of marrying Isabelle Pope, an event which would have ended Shepherd's chances of getting any considerable part of the fortune.

"Miss Pope's annuity of $8000 was made payable at Shepherd's discretion, and no trust fund was established. Any lawyer will recognize at once the strangeness of this provision, and the fact that its logical effect was to tie her to Shepherd, and make her interests interlock with him. That might make her disinclined to raise questions embarrassing to Shepherd.

"Billy's marriage was set for February. If it should take place Shepherd would not get the fortune. If Billy should die before then, Shepherd would get the fortune by virtue of the will which he drew last April. On or about Nov. 23, Billy became ill and took to his bed. A doctor was called and on Nov. 29 made a tentative diagnosis of typhoid. On Dec. 1 a specialist was called in consultation, and the diagnosis was verified. That day Billy expresses a wish to be married at once, and Miss Pope consents. She tells Shepherd. What did he say?

"'You can't get a license. In this State the law requires that both parties must be present when the application is made,' she now says he informed her. Miss Pope knew better, because her sister had obtained a license during the war to marry a soldier who was absent when the application was made. She told Shepherd so.

"'But what a shame it would be to give up all your plans for a pretty church wedding. Better wait until Billy gets well; it won't be long. These bedside weddings are not good,' she says he urged. But Miss Pope got the license next day. When Mrs. Shepherd learned of it through the newspapers she called up Miss Pope's family and said she was sorry Isabelle had done such a thing. When Miss Pope appeared at the Shepherd home with the license she was told that Billy was too ill to be seen. When she was admitted the next day Billy was delirious and died in a few hours. The will steps in; on the face of it Shepherd get the fortune. The conspiracy which I believe was conceived 17 years ago has finally borne its fruit."

The old Judge laid a clenched fist on his desk. His hard eyes grew harder, his grim mouth grimmer still, his harsh voice was more rasping.

"A dead man spoke from the grave to accuse him," he said. "They call me his accuser; I am but counsel for the dead. The accuser is my brother, Oscar Olson."

Then he told how, on the day he learned of Billy McClintock's death, he visited his brother's widow, and learned from her of Dr. Olson's apprehensions concerning Billy, and his suspicions touching Mrs. McClintock's death, of Shepherd's alleged study of germs, and finally of the Shepherds' visit to Dr. Olson himself just before he died. Once upon the trail he never faltered. He interviewed Miss Pope and Dr. Breidigan. He dug into the past as far back as Indianapolis and Texas. He searched diligently for other witnesses. Then he worked out his theory.

This writer's interview with him occurred the day before Dr. Faiman made his full confession. But Judge Olson's mind already was made up. Already, for weeks, he had been hammering doggedly at the State's Attorney and Coroner. He had other evidence which, to him, was conclusive, and this was what it was:

After Billy McClintock fell ill, but days before the case was diagnosed as typhoid, Judge Olson declares, Shepherd said to three different people: "Billy thinks he has typhoid, and he says he knows where he was exposed to it—he 's certain he ate some infected oysters when he went east for the Harvard-Dartmbuth football game."

"I hope you realize the significance of this evidence," Judge Olson said. "We know positively that Billy did not know he had typhoid, that he was certain he had the grippe. Shepherd's statement is evidence, therefore, that he knew the boy did have typhoid, and knew it before the doctors did, knew it, in fact, before anybody did. It is evidence that he was preparing certain people for the news that he had it, and was planting in their minds an explanation of how he contracted it. The people to whom he said it were those most likely to ask questions, because one of them was Miss Pope, and the other was an official of the trust company which had the estate. His statement to Dr. Fosberg that a young man's body was to be exhumed and examined for traces of typhoid and poison, belongs in the same category. I think he foresaw that a young man's body might some day be so exhumed and examined—Billy McClintock's body.

In legal phraseology, these statements constitute evidence of guilty knowledge, and an explanation. In the law it is called an indirect confession of guilt, which the courts have held to be moral evidence of the strongest character, stronger in some instances than physical evidence, because it came from the accused himself, and was offered voluntarily, even eagerly. I tell you that, regardless of what the State's Attorney may hereafter find, he will get no evidence stronger than this, because there can be none stronger."

The next day brought Faiman's startling confession. Shepherd said Faiman was a liar. He reiterated that he had never seen a typhoid germ, denied that he had ever heard of the school. John P. Marchand, a salesman for the school, declared that Shepherd had written a letter inquiring about a course in bacteriology, and that he had visited Shepherd and discussed it with him. "He's a liar," said Shepherd. Three other men came forward and asserted that Marchand had told them, months ago, about the conversation with Shepherd, and about the letter, and that Marchand had remarked, when the inquiry into Billy McClintock's death opened, that the letter would be worth $50,000. Faiman said Shepherd came to the school and recovered the letter. "All lies," Shepherd reiterated.

The police were led to Faiman through Marchand, whose remark about the letter was reported by one who heard it. Faiman at first denied knowing Shepherd, then accused Shepherd of stealing the germs while a student, and finally broke down completely, admitting his own part in the alleged murder plot.

The indicted foster father is a man of medium height, but massive girth. He has a big conical head, descending to heavy jowls. His hair is blonde and wavy, slightly streaked with gray. His neck is short and thick, his shoulders are thick, his waist thicker still. His movements are heavy, stolid and deliberate. He conveys an impression of physical inertia, immovability, but he speaks fluidly and easily, although he is not voluble. He meditates before he speaks. When seen by the writer, he was leaning back in a swivel chair in the State's Attorney's office, his guard nearby. His hands were clasped in his lap, his hat pulled low over his eyes.

Shepherd meets the accusation and the evidence in just two ways: To part of it he offers explanations, to the remainder he gives the lie. And the entire case, he says, "Is simply a conspiracy to deprive me of my rights under Billy's will—nothing else."

"The association of Mrs. Shepherd and myself with Mrs. McClintock and Billy grew out of the childhood friendship between Mrs. McClintock and Mrs. Shepherd, and was continued solely at Mrs. McClintock's insistence. She was lonely and bereaved. Mrs. Shepherd was her best friend. They had corresponded unbrokenly since they were girls. It was at her dying request that we consented to care for Billy.

"The statement that I said I would come out of it with my pockets filled, is a lie. The statement that Mrs. McClintock slipped away from us in Texas is a lie. All the statements that I studied typhoid germs are lies.

"That I objected to a bedside marriage of Miss Pope and Billy is true. For one thing, the doctor was opposed to it; for another, Billy didn't want it. I hesitated to tell Miss Pope so, because I didn't want to wound her felings. If I told anybody that Billy thought he had typhoid, it was because Billy had said so.

"All there is against me in this case is a dead body, a motive, and the statements of a few obviously irresponsible witnesses. Mrs. Shepherd and I loved Billy McClintock as if he had been our son, and he loved us as his real parents, as his letters to us plainly show. We never put any obstacles in the way of his marriage; on the contrary we encouraged it, because we admired Miss Pope. Billy was attended throughout his illness and up to his death by reputable physicians, who have repeatedly declared that everything possible was done to save him, and that his death was natural.

"I don't know what prompted Judge Olson in his course, but I am perfectly certain that this investigation is for the purpose of bringing about a criminal action to support a will contest. When it is over and I have been vindicated, those responsble for desecrating our boy's grave, wrecking my wife's health and besmirching my own good name, will have to answer for their conduct. I am innocent and an innocent man needs no defense."

It should be explained here that seven cousins of Billy McClintock, all living in Iowa, have instituted a will contest. Judge Olson, however, is not a party to it. He claims no interest in the estate. Billy McClintock was no kin of his. If he has any personal motive, it is not apparent, nor has any been specifically alleged in all the denunciations that Shepherd's lawyers have leveled against him.

Reichmann, co-guardian, has been in constant consultation with Judge Olson. He has not been friendly to the Shepherds since his attempt, 15 years ago, to take the boy from their custody. All his sympathy is with the prosecution. He accepted Judge Olson's theory before the prosecuting officers did.

Atmosphere of Spain at Costume Party Given By Miss Eleanor Klein

Home Like a Hacienda for Gay, Colorful Dinner Dance —Shawls and Pottery Decorations.

GAY and colorful and radiating the atmosphere of Spain was the costume supper dance given last night by Miss Eleanor Klein, daughter of Mrs. J. S. Klein, in their new home on Wydown terrace. The structure itself suggests the Spanish hacienda, with its rough plastered walls and iron balconies about the windows, while the interior decorations, Spanish shawls draping stair rails and bits of Spanish pottery, added to the picture. The furniture had been removed for dancing and arranged in the garage adjoining the house for a lounging room. Here supper was served informally. Bright Spanish [illegible] on the walls of the dancing rooms [illegible] with the costumes of the guests in giving [illegible] color, and gay senoritas danced fandangos with slim bandilleros under serpentines. The hostess was gowned as a Spanish dancing girl in scarlet satin skirt veiled in black lace, black velvet bolero and white blouse, and wore about her head a purple bandana embroidered with a single red rose at the side.

Four of the guests, Benjamin Turner, George Harvey, Robert Carr and Curtis Wol[illegible], motored from Chicago for the affair, and are remaining over the week-end to attend an informal tea this afternoon by Mr. and Mrs. Myles Hasgall, a buffet supper tonight by Miss Eleanor Atkins and a dinner party tomorrow night by Miss Dorothy Wray. Other guests included Messrs. and Mmes. Women's Luncheons to Aid Symphony Ticket Sale

THE recently formed Women's Committee of the St. Louis Symphony Society has arranged for a series of luncheons to be given during the next few weeks in connection with the committee's plan of placing subscriptions for tickets for the 1926 concert season. The first luncheon will be given Friday at a place to be determined tomorrow. The officers of the committee, Mrs. Thomas G. Ratcliffe, chairman; Mmes. Daniel K. Catlin, Newton R. Wilson, Oscar Johnson, Harry French Knight, George Gellhorn, Edward A. Faust, Guido Pantaleoni, John Fowler and Misses Mary Lionberger and Florence Wade, vice chairman, and Mrs. O. K. Bovard, secretary, together with Mmes. Horace Rumsey, Francis G. Eaton, M. A. Goldstein, Charles M. Rice, Joseph W. Lewis, John T. Davis, Eugene H. Angert, Howard Bailey, Grace Wilson Clark, William V. Schevill, Horace W. Soper, Harry Steinbreder, Charles A. Stix, and Miss Adele Schmitz, members of the board of directors of the society, will constitute the list of patronesses.

The Women's Committee will have charge of stimulating and popularizing the demand for season tickets and single seats. Mrs. Oliver Richards and Mrs. J. L. Johnston will be co-chairmen of the drive. In addition a telephone

Girls Coming Home From Eastern Schools or Joining Their Parents at Various Points for Spring Vacation

Next Few Days to See Influx of Students for Fortnight's Holiday — Some to Spend Time With Classmates.

THE spring vacation period for most of the Eastern schools and colleges, finds many of the St. Louis students en route home for a fortnight, glad of the brief respite before the strenuous end of the season and examinations. Others are joining their parents in the east, and still others are visiting friends elsewhere.

The Westover girls, Miss Katherine McCluney, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel B. McCluney, who will make her debut next season, Miss Katherine Smith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. Herndon Smith, and Miss Carol McDonald, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Stewart McDonald, will return home Wednesday. Miss Anne Wallace, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry B. Wallace, will join her mother at Hot Springs, Va., and Miss Elizabeth Douglass, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Douglass, will remain the East as the guest of Mrs. Cornelius Kelly of New York.

Three of the girls attending Miss Porter's School in Farmington, Conn., are at home ill. They are Miss Gertrude Catlin, who with her mother, Mrs. Daniel K. Catlin, recently returned from Florida where Miss Catlin has been recuperating; Miss Elizabeth Clark and Miss Mary Brooks Holmes, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Howard Holmes, Miss Marjorie Niedringhaus, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lee I. Neidringhaus, is expected home today. Misses Emily Lewis and Miss Janet Kauffman, both of whom attend the Ethel Walker School in Simsbury, Conn. have returned. Miss Kauffman will attend school in Florence, Italy next year. Miss Alita Davis, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel C. Davis, will spend her vacation from Bryn Mawr College with a group of young women at Hot Springs, Va.

Miss Mary Sloan, daughter of Mrs. James M. Sloan, who has just been elected to Phi Beta Kappa at Smith College, will go to New York to visit her sister, Mrs. George Dock.

Miss Martha Dyer, another Smith College girl, is home, as is Miss Frances McConnell. Miss Elizabeth Upthegrove, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel Upthegrove, has returned from Vassar, while Mrs. Greenfield Sluder has visited her daughter, Miss Virginia, at the same school for the past week. Miss Marydelle Gambrill, another Vassar student, will return March 28.

Of the Wellesley girls, Miss Martha Strickler will be home in April, while Miss Elizabeth Robert will be the guest of friends at Providence, R. I., and Miss Elizabeth Wearen will go to New York, where her parents will join her.

Mrs. David R. Calhoun has leased her house on the Clayton road to Mr. and Mrs. Elzey G. Burkham of 4537 Pershing avenue, who will take possession within a few days. Mrs. Calhoun will depart tomorrow to sail March 26 for Rome, Italy, where she will make her home. Her son, David R. Calhoun Jr., will reside in St. Louis.

The Alliance Francaise will meet Wednesday afternoon at 3 o'clock at the Buckingham Hotel where M. Louis Reau will give an illustrated talk on the artistic relations between France and the United States. A luncheon for M. Reau will be given at the University Club.

On Saturday, March 28, the Alliance will have a soiree by M. Edmund Vallee of the Theatre de l'Odeon and M. Raymond Presles of the Gymnase. Tickets for those interested may be had from Mrs. Guy Study of 4530 McPherson avenue.

Mrs. Ted H. Banister of Wichita, Kan., will arrive in St. Louis today to be the guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. N. Cornatzar of 4931 McPherson avenue.

MISS ELISE HARBAUGH of Chicago, who will arrive in St. Louis Easter Monday for a visit with Miss Bertha Condie.

Mrs. Dawes' Lunch-Basket Party in Senate Gallery Stirs Washington Society

Precedent Set by Wife of the Vice President Is Followed by Others —Much Interest in New Cabinet Member.

WASHINGTON, March 21.

SOCIAL Washington enjoyed many sensations this week watching one Attorney-General designate being talked out of confirmation at the Senate, another one confirmed in record time; the adjournment of the Senate; the return of Gen. Pershing to Washington and the brand-new thrill of watching the wife of the Vice President lunch in the executive gallery of the Senate, heretofore immune from picnic parties, large or small.

Society always has watched from reserved seats the classic struggles between the President in the White House and the lords of Capitol Hill. There is a sort of instinct in the 400 here which turns to Capitol Hill when battles are on. Then, as last week when the Charles Beecher Warren strife was waging, other social engagements are cast into the discard for the pleasure of sitting in a gallery seat at the Senate and applauding one's favorite senatorial warrior from afar.

The society gallery fans, together with lesser mortals, gasped when, on the closing day of the President's struggle to have Warren confirmed, Mrs. Charles G. Dawes, wife of the Vice President, who was entertaining a group of friends in the gallery, calmly unpacked a lunch basket and her particular group began to munch sandwiches as they watched. Other ladies of the Senate present looked on expecting the heavens to fall. When they did—they followed suit and numerous little picnic parties sprang up here and there while the sergeant-at-arms vainly rumpled books of regulations and wondered how to stop this precedent smashing by these official gallery fans.

Washington is greatly interested in the new addition to the Cabinet, John G. Sargent, neighbor of the President in Vermont. Attorney-General Sargent has a wife and one child and Mrs. Sargent is said to be a charming hostess and a close friend of Mrs. Coolidge.

Vice President and Mrs. Dawes are house-hunting. It is said they are considering taking over the handsome home offered by Mrs. John B. Henderson, widow of the late Senator from Missouri, to Coolidge when he was

Vice President, declined by him as being much too grand for his modest tastes. Vice President and Mrs. Dawes, of course, have large independent means and, while Mrs. Henderson has not as yet renewed her proffered gift to the nation, it is thought she will do so and thus a permanent home on fashionable Sixteenth street, northwest, in thorough keeping with the dignity of the second officer of the Government, will be available for all who are elected to this important post.

Although Congress has adjourned the town is still full of national legislators. A number have gone off on official junkets and on official missions which include every form of vacational entertainment. Senators Reed and Spencer of Missouri are still in town and will remain, according to present plans, until early in the summer. Mrs. Spencer will take an important part in the deliberations of the Continental Congress of the Daughters of the American Revolution, she being honorary chaplain general of that organization. Many of the Missouri delegation in the Lower House are keeping their homes here also. The news that Congress will probably reconvene in September will hold even a greater number of Congressmen in town than usual.

Mrs. A. T. Goodhue, mother of Mrs. Coolidge, is still at the White House. Mrs. Coolidge is not giving any formal functions for her, as she is still in mourning for her husband, but is inviting her friends in informally to present them to her mother.

Missouri's warrior son, Gen. Pershing, was given a royal welcome by the National Capital and its official and resident society when he returned here Monday after an absence of many months in South America. The General has reopened his apartment in Connecticut avenue and is entertaining there his sister, Miss Mary Pershing of Nebraska. He exhibited some of his horses at the indoor show held Friday at the Riding and Hunt Club. In a few weeks, Gen. Pershing will go to France. He is looking well, despite the news of his illness in Cuba, and appeared much moved by the warmth of the welcome accorded him.

One of the big social events of the week was the testimonial luncheon given at the Mayflower for Mrs. Minnie Maddern Fiske, in recognition of her work for animals. Mrs. George Barnett and a group of society women were in charge of the arrangement and more than a hundred guests were present from official, diplomatic and resident society to attest their esteem for the actress, who was pronounced one of the 12 greatest women in America during the recent contest to discover them.

Mrs. Frederick Dent Grant is expecting her granddaughter, Princess Bertha Cantacuzene, who is now with her parents in Florida, to visit her at Easter.

A former Ambassador to Russia, George T. Marye, has turned author and has just printed a book about the days of '49 in California. The Ambassador is receiving many congratulations on his work.

Diplomatic society is busy greeting the new envoys who have joined the colony, including Baron and Baroness Maltzan, the new German representatives, and Ambassador and Mme. Matsudairas of Japan, who, with the new French Ambassador and Mme. Daeschner, find life here just a round of entertainments and State functions.

Mrs. Medill McCormick, widow of Senator McCormick of Illinois, is the house guest of Representative and Mrs. Nicholas Longworth. Mrs. McCormick will remain here for several weeks while she is closing the McCormick residence on G street long. Mrs. Longworth has been holding a series of informal luncheon parties for her women friends, with Baby Paulina the center of interest. Around this child already has sprung up a widespread interest that promises to make her as well-known nationally as Baby McKee, Quentin Roosevelt, Ruth Cleveland and other White House children. While she was not born in the White House capital society takes a proprietary interest in her for her father and mother were married in the East Room of the White House, while a notable assemblage looked on.

READ ABOUT "SANGRINA"—LATEST FRENCH WAY TO TAKE OFF FAT—IT'S SAFE AND LASTING.

"Dear Fat Folks: Let me tell you the truth about fat. Do not be fooled by believing you can check a fatty condition in your system by going through weakening diets, strenuous exercises, rubbing your body with creams or lotions, or by using any of the old drugs for reducing. If these were effective, THERE WOULDN'T BE A FAT MAN OR WOMAN IN THE COUNTRY today, as diets, exercises, creams and old remedies have been tried for years. Do not think for a minute that you can take off fat by wearing so-called reducing girdles—it cannot be done. I personally know the horror of being fat—I went through it. Not only did I feel ashamed of my figure, but worse still, I never was well or happy like the rest of the girls—I always had pains in my back or limbs, my feet ached, my head was dizzy—ALL THAT BECAUSE I WAS OVERTAXING MY FRAME WITH 50 POUNDS OF EXCESS FAT WHICH NATURE DID NOT INTEND FOR ME TO CARRY. I had spent a small fortune trying everything known to reduce, but never succeeded until I found out about 'SAN-GRI-NA,' the discovery of a French scientist, who has devoted his life to the study of 'obesity' and has been able to compound in a small, tasteless tablet the ingredients necessary to gradually and safely eliminate fat from the body. If you want to reduce and at the same time improve your health, go today to your drug store, get a package of 'SAN-GRI-NA' (make sure it is 'SAN-GRI-NA'), take two small tablets before each meal and watch your weight go down. 'SAN-GRI-NA' is GUARANTEED ABSOLUTELY HARMLESS. Not only does it do away with fat, but it acts as a tonic on the entire system. Do not accept any substitute, as 'SAN-GRI-NA' is the only thing which ever reduced me, and which I can truthfully recommend."—M.E., N.Y.C.

The Institute of Government and Politics to be held at Hotel Statler for three days this week, and which is of interest to many women of St. Louis, will open its sessions Tuesday with a luncheon at 12:30 in the ballroom of the hotel. Chancellor Herbert S. Hadley will preside. Former Gov. Charles Whitman of New York will be the principal speaker. Mrs. Scott Porter is in charge of arrangements, assisted by Mmes. A. D. Nortoni, Frank C. Blelock, W. L. Henry, J. K. Wass, George Share, N. David Thompson, Ralph Thompson, Misses Frances Hayes, Elizabeth Tupper, Janet Phelan, Jane Rule, Jane Nugent and Dorothy Cramer.

Mrs. D. O. Ives will preside at a similar affair the following day, assisted by Mmes. Charles Swingley, Charles Passmore and Misses Fay Johnston, Claire Fischer and Dura Otto. Thursday there will be four round-table luncheons in charge of Mrs. Harry Sprague. The sessions will close with a dinner Thursday night in the ballroom of Hotel Chase, when Dr. Harold Glenn Moulton, director of the Institute of Economics at Washington, D. C., will speak.

There will be discussions of general problems of politics and Government, with local speakers to bring the subjects to closer interest for St. Louisans.

Announcements have been received in St. Louis from Mrs. George C. Sexton of the engagement of her daughter, Miss Esther Adele Williams, and William P. Shirley of England. The prospective bride and her mother are former St. Louisans, but for the last few years have made their home in Fairfield, Ill. Miss Williams is a niece of Mrs. Samuel McChesney of St. Louis. She was educated at the University of Missouri and Smith College, where she was graduated, and met her fiance in England. The wedding date has not been set.

Invitations have been sent out by Mrs. W. N. Bemis of 5 Kingsbury place for a tea April 4 in honor of her young daughter, Miss Dorothy Bemis, a senior at Mary Institute. The guests will include members of the class and some of the young women home from Eastern schools for the spring vacation.

Miss Marjorie Blumeyer, member of the senior class at Mary Institute, has as her guest Miss Louise Fullerton of Dallas, Tex., who will remain here a fortnight before going to Kansas City to visit relatives. Miss Elise Blumeyer who was visiting relatives in Louisville, Ky., returned to participate in the gayeties for her sister's guest. The Misses Blumeyer are daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad Blumeyer of 6827 Pershing avenue.

Mrs. Henry Wise Hobson of Worcester, Mass., and her children, who has been visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. P. Taylor Bryan, for three weeks, at their home, 4346 McPherson avenue, have departed for their home.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Harry Scullin of 5218 South Broadway will sail the latter part of this month for Italy. They will spend the spring and summer traveling in Europe. They departed a few days ago for New York, accompanied by their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Alex H. Sullivan, of the Big Bend road.

ACTIVITIES AMONG CLUB WOMEN OF ST. LOUIS

The Social Economy Section of the Wednesday Club will meet at the clubhouse, Taylor avenue and Westminster place on Wednesday, March 25, at 10:30 a. m. Mrs. Richard Morey, who is leader for the day, has provided the following program: "International Economics," by Mrs. Frank P. Hays; "Varying Theories of Consumption," by Dr. W. F. Gephart, vice president of First National Bank. Mrs. P. Holme Morrison, the chairman, and Mrs. Hildegard Wulfing Morris, the secretary, have been reelected for next year. Mrs. Halsey C. Ives is the new vice chairman. Preceding the program, the topic for next year's study will be adopted.

Luncheon will be served at 12:30 p. m.

At the meeting of the History and Literature Section at 1:30 p. m. the subject for next year's study will be voted on and a large attendance of the section members is requested. The program for the day is a review of the "Social Ideals in American Literature." "The Earlier Period" is to be considered by Mrs. W. A. Layman; the "Later Period of Howells and His Successors," by Mrs. Walter M. Bartlett. The chairman, Miss Ellen Brooks Johnson, and the secretary, Mrs. Frank C. Belser have been re-elected. Mrs. Edward E. Magill is the new vice chairman.

The history and literature section met March 16 at the Monday Club, under the leadership of Mrs. W. W. Keysor. Mrs. William Hull, chairman, presided, and the class responded to roll call in either characterization of Antony or Cleopatra. Officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. E. H. Elkhoff; vice chairman, Mrs. F. J. Krone, and secretary, Mrs. A. H. Kiskaddon. Two papers were read and discussed by Mrs. T. R. Talbot and Mrs. J. Q. Patterson. The subjects for discussion were, "How Far Can a Woman's Beauty Exempt Her From Moral Obligations?"—Helen, Cleopatra and Lady Hamilton.

In the afternoon of the same day, the fine arts section met at the Monday Club at 2 o'clock and adjourned after voting to postpone the election of officers until next Monday, March 23, at 2 o'clock. The class then went to the Shortridge Galleries, where Paul Shortridge showed a number of fine paintings, those of Graves and Percy Granger being on special exhibition.

Monday, March 23, the Monday Club will have an open meeting, with a special program and on Thursday, March 26, at 10 o'clock, the parliamentary law class will meet at the club house under the leadership of Mrs. N. P. Zimmer.

The monthly board meeting of St. Louis Chapter, D. A. R., was held March 12 at the residence of Mrs. George H. Martin, 5584 Maple avenue. The chapter meeting for March will be held at the Jefferson Memorial on Friday, March 27, at 2 p. m. An interesting program has been arranged, and a large attendence is particularly desired.

The Tuesday Club, of which Mrs. B. F. Miller is president, held its regular monthly meeting March 17 at the Artists' Guild. Mrs. Carl Fisch, chairman for the day, presented Mrs. George E. Mix, who read a paper on "Charles Lamb, Essayist and Humorist." She also recited excerpts from his "Dream Children, a Reverie." Mrs. Stephen S. Eagle, with "Emerson and Burroughs" as her subject, compared these two writers, and was followed by Mrs. C. H. Austin, who sang a group of bird songs, typifying their spirit. Mrs. Neal was the accompanist. Mrs. Ernest Ohle and Mrs. J. P. Materne presided at the tea table later.

The Current Topics Club met Tuesday at Hotel Claridge. Following the business meeting and committee reports, the resolution of the Press Committee was adopted, and Mrs. F. H. Littlefield indorsed for re-election as president of the eighth district, Missouri Federation of Women's Clubs. Mrs. Littlefield was a guest of the club and spoke on "University Membership," and of the International Council of Women in Washington, D. C., May 4 to 14. The club will meet April 7.

The St. Louis Section, Council of Jewish Women, will give a luncheon at Hotel Chase tomorrow at 12 o'clock. The guest of honor and speaker will be Mrs. Milton E. Fuldheim, chairman of the Wisconsin branch of the Women's International League for Peace, an organization which represents more than 20 countries and is working for a universal reduction in armament.

The St. Louis Story Tellers' League will meet in the Central Library Building, March 27, at 8 o'clock. The subject will be "Fairy Tales"; the speaker, Mrs. L. C. Rader and the leader, Miss Genevieve Apgar. Stories will be told by Misses Addie Murray, Reola White, Anna Volger, Elizabeth Hall, Lucille McDonald, Dorothy Corkins and Mrs. F. A. Clifford. There will be two musical numbers.

The University Thimble Club was entertained last week at the country home of Mrs. Lottie Proetz on the Henderson road. The new president, Mrs. J. I. Chappel, presided. Guests of the club were Mrs. W. P. Blanton, Mrs. B. J. Proetz, Mrs. H. T. Proetz, Mrs. B. E. Tate, Mrs. Lyle Campbell, Mrs. Edith D. Ambruster and Mrs. Charles Healy. Assisting hostesses were Mrs. L. E. Melick, Mrs. F. H. Britton, Mrs. O. P. Blackstad and Mrs. William B. McSorley.

Mrs. Bertha Fromm of 3117 Lackland avenue entertained the members of the St. Louis Outing Club at her home Sunday evening. The club will meet in Moose Hall, 3830 Olive street, March 21 at 8 o'clock.

The Mothers' Circle of Perfection Chapter, Order of De Molay, met Friday afternoon at the Scottish Rite Temple. The Barbara Fritch Tent No. 8, Daughters of

New Trends in the Mode

Coats Flare in Front

—but their backs are straight as can be. Tied in front and with fullness accentuated by flaring fur bands, this new mode is the last word in fashion.

Sleeves Are Longer

—for fashion sponsors them on the smarter frocks. Long tailored sleeves, quite snug—others that flare from the shoulder—peasant sleeves with tight cuffs and many other lovely effects are now in vogue.

Skirts Are Shorter

Fourteen inches from the floor over here—and as high as seventeen inches in Paris. And with them so brief, the smart miss will more than ever appreciate the even sheerness of Garland hosiery.

Colonial Bedroom Suite

Seven Pieces $199.00 Illustrated Below

THERE is something intimate and restful about a room furnished in Colonial style—something quaintly charming and soothing to tired nerves after a busy day. The seven-piece Suite sketched below borrows its design from the Colonial period and varies the conventional pattern with distinctive details all its own. A dull-rubbed and high-lighted finish adds an air of antiquity to this Suite which comprises a dresser, chifforette, full-size bed, bench, chair, rocker and vanity dresser. This Suite is specially priced and is a commanding value.

American Walnut Bed Suite, $169.50

This Suite is sturdily constructed and is dustproof throughout. The three major pieces, 48-inch dresser, chifforette and bow-foot bed in rich American walnut are offered at this price. A value worthy of attention.

Four-Piece Tudor Bed Suite, $229

An American walnut Bedroom Suite, consisting of 50-inch dresser, chifforette, vanity dresser and full-size bed is well made and dustproof throughout. This is a large Suite with plenty of drawer space and is artistically fashioned.

French Walnut Bed Suite, $325

GRAND-LEADER

A Special Group of Women's Printed Frocks

Presents the Season's Popular Dresses in a Variety of Styles, Patterns and Colors

$16.75

AT this moderate price you may choose from a comprehensive group an appealing version of the printed dress. Frocks appropriate for immediate and Summer wear in silk crepe and silk broadcloth are offered in bright new patterns, reflecting a variety of colors. Straight youthful lines influence the styles. The sizes range from 34 to 46.

New Patterns in the Fabrics

Silk crepes, silk broadcloth and tub silks display a variety of designs in the conventional prints, stripes and polka dots. Full patterns on light backgrounds, open effects on dark backgrounds, dark colors in combination.

Colors Include Many Shades

Tans in all the new tones—blues in the many shades of the season—greens ranging from lettuce to olive effects—rose, purple, red, gray, black and white—the dominant shades and combinations may be somber or gay.

Trimmings Emphasize Long Lines

Lace panels, long rows of buttons, jabots from shoulder to hem, pleated panels falling from low waistlines—the trimmings upon the slenderizing slipover frocks accentuate long lines. Self materials, contrasting solid colors, "V" necks with turn-back collars are effective decorative notes.

(Moderate Price Dress Section—Third Floor.)

DISCOVERER EXPLAINS USES OF POWERFUL NEW GERMICIDE

Hexylresorcinol Described as Particularly Effective in Diseases of the Kidneys.

By the Associated Press.

BALTIMORE, Md., March 21.—Dr. Veador Leonard, chairman of the Committee on Internal Antiseptics, National Research Council, explained further before the Baltimore Medical Society last night the action of hexylresorcinol, the antiseptic which he recently discovered. The new drug has been described as fifty times more effective than carbolic acid in its power to kill disease germs in the genito-urinary tract.

While the antiseptic is an irritant to the stomach and has been administered with olive oil in capsule form, Dr. Leonard declared it to be non-irritating to the genito-urinary tract. He described his discovery a germicidal, soluble to a high degree, and capable of being eliminated in high passages by the kidneys.

The effect of hexylresorcinol, Dr. Leonard said, was to combine at once with the secretions of the kidneys, and to render those secretions, when acid in character, themselves antiseptic. The power of the drug is destroyed, Dr. Leonard said, when the kidney secretions are alkaline.

Dr. Leonard presented reports of cases in which he said the new antiseptic had been used. Several types of germs best known as producers of pus and irritation—staphylococcus, streptococcus and bacillus coli—Dr. Leonard declared, have been successfully combated. The first named two types, he said, were conquered after treatment ranging from two to 19 days, although the third, peculiar to the large intestine, required more patient effort. The Thompson bacillus, found in prostrate operations, also has responded to treatment with his discovery, according to Dr. Leonard.

Dr. Leonard's work in evolving the antiseptic was carried on, for the most part by Johns Hopkins School of Hygiene and Public Health Service.

CARDINAL MUNDELEIN, BACK FROM ROME, TELLS OF PLANS

Expects at Least 1,000,000 Strangers to Attend Eucharistic Congress in Chicago Next Year.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW YORK, March 21.—Cardinal Mundelein of Chicago returned last night on the Cunard liner Berengaria from his Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome with completed plans for the Eucharistic Congress in his city next year.

"I expect at least 1,000,000 strangers to come to the Congress," said the Cardinal, "and the Pope is very anxious that we make this the greatest Congress ever held. 'America can do it,' His Holiness told me before I left Rome."

Asked if he noticed any difference in drinking in Europe, the Cardinal replied:

"I noticed the Americans abroad were having a good time, especially in Paris."

New Oil Treatment Now on Sale Here.

Contains coal oil, turpentine, Oil of Eucalyptus, Camphor, Capsicum and other valuable ingredients. Put up under the name MILLER'S ANTISEPTIC OIL, known as Snake Oil and is now in great demand. Penetrates to the affected parts quickly, tends to open up air passages, relieving the congestion; few drops on tongue prevents the germ. So penetrating is this great Oil remedy that it will penetrate the thickest piece of sole leather in three minutes. Therefore, little wonder how quickly it relieves Influenza, Chest Colds, Coughs, Rheumatic Pains, Stiff Joints, Neuralgia, Lumbago, etc.

This new formula is said to be the most powerful, penetrating, pain-relieving liniment yet discovered.

Woman writes: "One bottle of your wonderful 'Snake Oil' relieved three in my family of the Flue, prevented my other two children from taking it." Over 3,000,000 bottles have been sold under an absolute guarantee to give satisfaction or money refunded, and less than a dozen bottles have been returned. Get the Genuine Miller's Antiseptic Oil, known as Snake Oil, at your druggist—35c, 70c and $1.00 bottles [illegible]

Tongue grey?

Your intestines need attention

NATURE has a way of informing us when all is not well within. The sign that something is out of order in the intestinal tract is a coated tongue.

Don't wait until you begin to feel ill. When your tongue shows grey in the mirror, take Pluto Water at once.

Gently but insistently, this safe water physic releases and removes the disturbing accumulations that are causing the trouble. It acts in thirty minutes to two hours, while overnight cathartics, when they work at all, often serve only to make matters worse. And a big advantage of Pluto Water is that it does not gripe after use.

Keep Pluto Water on hand at all times. Physicians prescribe it, druggists sell it and it is bottled at French Lick Springs, Indiana.

2 ARMY TEAMS CHOSEN FOR NATIONAL BALLOON RACE

Three Lieutenants at Scott Field on List Announced by War Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Officer pilots and aids for army entries for the National Balloon Race to be held at St. Joseph, Mo., were selected today by the War Department.

The first of the two team entered comprises Capt. R. E. O'Neil, now on duty at the office of the Chief of the Air Service, as pilot and First Lieutenant Guy R. Oatman, now at St. Joseph, whose permanent station is Scott Field. The second comprises First Lieutenant H. H. Holland of Scott Field, pilot, and Second Lieutenant Haynie McCormick, also of Scott Field, aid.

TO STUDY EASTERN RUINS

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, D. C., March 21.—A study of the relics of mankind's earliest existence will be conducted in Asia, Java, Australia and South Africa during the summer by a party representing the Smithsonian institution and the Buffalo Society of Natural History.

Dr. Ales Hrdlicka, curator of physical anthropology at the Smithsonian institution, will be in charge of the survey, which will consume about six months. The expedition will be set on its way next week, and will devote its attention entirely to studying material already discovered in original surroundings rather than to seeking new keys to the extreme past. The party hopes to examine all of the rich collections of paleolithic implements and pre-human skeletal specimens in India and also visit the Siwalik hills section where much knowledge of the origin of the race has been unearthed.

RADIO OPERATION OF TRAINS

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—It is now possible to operate electric trains by radio from a central control office, G. Y. Allen of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Co. told the New York Railroad Club last night.

"It is entirely feasible," Allen said, "to start a train without a crew, run it at full speed over clear tracks, slow it down or stop it, start it up again and open its doors, by signals of an automatic block system." The radio features of this system, he added, are of the "carrier current" type, waves which travel along the power lines of the railroad instead of spreading out through the ether as in ordinary broadcasting. The system is now being used by electric power and street railway companies, to control distant switches and for conversation between points on the system.

PARTIES OF THE WEEK, OTHERS PLANNED

An important affair of Easter week will be the card parties which will be given the afternoon and evening of Easter Tuesday, April 14, at Forest Park Hotel, by the Catholic Women's League. Dancing will follow the evening card game. Among the women interested are Mmes. Theodore Benoist, John C. Muckerman, Clarence Maloy, Seth W. Cobb, James Cahill, Clifford Scudder, John Calnane, E. J. Scott, Raymond F. McNally, Edward J. Walsh, Charles E. Michel Jr., W. T. Donovan, Martin Shaughnessy, Festus J. Wade, Catherine Drew, John Ring Jr., G. F. A. Brueggeman, W. W. Boyd, Marquard Forster, George McNulty, J. F. Schlafly, V. C. Sigillito, Leo Moser, and J. J. O'Donnell, and Misses Eugenia Chouteau and Clara Myerson.

Among the large affairs of Easter week is the play which the members of the 1925 class at Maryville College of the Sacred Heart will give at the Cathedral auditorium Easter Monday evening. The presentation will be Barrie's "Quality Street," with the college girls in the mixed cast. This is the first occasion Maryville College has presented a dramatic offering away from the college campus.

Mrs. Jules J. Wehrle of 3534 Grace avenue, who will depart soon for Tulsa, Ok., to reside, was honoree at a surprise party given by Mrs. C. J. Trebus of 4823 Hammett place, March 10. The decorations were in green and white. The guests were Miss Ann Clark, Mmes. J. Anderson, A. Ahnefeld, E. Burg, E. Baltz, W. Berrian, D. Foley, E. Lile, J. Patterson, C. J. Trebus and W. Will.

The B'nai El Young People's Aid Society will give its annual dance at Hotel Statler next Sunday.

The Zeta Alpha Chapter of Pi Gamma will give an informal spring dancing party at Riverview Club April 17.

Mr. and Mrs. Merrell Johnson of Wheaton Station, St. Louis County, gave a St. Patrick's dinner and musical program.

A surprise masquerade was given March 14 at the Home Comers' Club in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Traube of 1819 Russell boulevard. A musical program was given by Miss E. E. Dietrich, Miss Boehmer, Miss Elle Lanig and Miss Alma Fricke. The guests included Mr. and Mrs. J. Dietrich and Mr. and Mrs. F. Fricke of Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. Otto Schmutz, Mr. and Mrs. William Denser, William Denser Jr., Mr. and Mrs. William Schmidt and Emil Fluetsch.

A card party will be given Saturday afternoon, April 18, at the Marquette Hotel for the benefit of the St. Louis Pageant Choral Society. Reservations can be made by telephoning Mrs. Joseph H. Muehling, 5916 Cabanne avenue, Cabany 1359J.

Miss Esther Buchrucker was hostess at an informal dinner party and dance on her birthday yesterday, at her home, 3820 McDonald avenue. The guests were Mr. and Mrs. A. Wethmueller, Misses Mildred Platzer, Ethel Neigh, Florence Kamper, Helen Flaskamp, Irene Sommer, Gene Alexander, Anna and Martha Hopft and Messrs. R. Windly, Frank Williams, Walter Becker, Roy Galyian, Glenn Turner and George Platzer.

Mrs. Albert Utter of Tuxedo boulevard, Webster Groves, was hostess at a luncheon Tuesday afternoon.

Texan Given Death Penalty.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Tex., March 21.—William H. Langhorn Jr., 25 years old, member of a prominent South Texas family, was given the death penalty by a jury here today for the slaying Feb. 3 of Valeria Zapalac, 17-year-old school girl. Other cases involving an attack on Minnie Zapalac, 15, sister of the slain girl, are pending against Langhorn. The prosecution charged that Langhorn attacked the younger girl and that Valeria was shot and killed by the defendant when she went to the aid of Minnie.

Texan Given Death Penalty.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Tex., March 21.—William H. Langhorn Jr., 25 years old, member of a prominent South Texas family, was given the death penalty by a jury here today for the slaying Feb. 3 of Valeria Zapalac, 17-year-old school girl. Other cases involving an attack on Minnie Zapalac, 15, sister of the slain girl, are pending against Langhorn. The prosecution charged that Langhorn attacked the younger girl and that Valeria was shot and killed by the defendant when she went to the aid of Minnie.

COUNTY ANNEXATION PETITIONS COMPLETE

Signatures of About 14,000 City and County Residents Obtained by Committee.

Authorities of St. Louis and St. Louis County will receive early this week the petitions circulated by the Metropolitan Committee of the Chamber of Commerce for the appointment of a board of freeholders to draft a plan of whole or partial merger of city and county.

The petitions will go to the Election Boards of the two communities separately. Within 40 days after accuracy of the signatures is certified, nine county residents will be appointed as freeholders by the Judges of the Circuit, Probate and County courts, and nine city residents will be appointed by the Mayor and Circuit Judges.

Signers of the petitions number about 3000 in the county and 11,214 in the city, which gives a large margin for faulty signatures. Under the constitutional amendment voted by the people of Missouri last November, provisions are made for the convening of the board and the general plans which it is to follow in drafting its scheme for providing city benefits for the thickly settled county and extension of the city. It will have a year in which to do its work, but to become effective the merger scheme will have to be approved by a majority of city and county voters in separate elections.

In the county there has been considerable discussion in political and civic circles about appointments to the board, and some wire pulling in behalf of those desiring places or those desiring to keep others from being appointed. There has been little talk about the city appointments. Freeholders will receive no pay. Their expenses will be borne equally by city and county.

PURE MILK COMMISSION SHOWS INCREASED ACTIVITY

$737 of $1087 Expense for Service During February Was Paid From Community Fund.

Special cultured milk modifications prepared and distributed by the St. Louis Pure Milk Commission in February numbered over 400 more than those prepared in January, according to a report issued yesterday by H. E. Mortland, executive secretary to the Community Fund.

In addition, 30 chemical and bacteriological milk analyses, 276 tuberculin tests on cattle, and six visits of inspection were made. A total of 12,719 bottles of specially prepared milk and 56,056 quarts of certified milk from inspected dairies were sold.

The cost of all the service rendered in February was $1087.83, of which $737.88 was received from contributors to the Community Fund for 1925.

Col. J. D. Miles, Indian Fighter, Dies.

By the Associated Press.

LAWRENCE, Kan., March 21.—Col. John D. Miles, formerly a resident here, and long prominent in the Indian service, died yesterday at Fresno, Cal. He entered the Indian service at the time it was turned over to the Friends' Church and was the Government agent in the Indian territory at the time Chief Dull Knife led his band of Cheyennes on the last raid of hostile Indians into Kansas in 1878. Col. Miles' appeal for troops made to the commandant at Fort Leavenworth at that time were attributed to fright, and no troops were sent, with the result that the Indians brushed aside the garrison at Fort Dodge, Fort Larned and Fort Hays and massacred some 45 settlers in Western Kansas.

SERIES OF COLLISIONS SENDS TAXI CHAUFFEUR TO HOSPITAL

Street Car Hits Coupe and Two Cabs Are Struck—Driver Knocked 15 Feet.

In a series of automobile collisions caused by a Belt line car striking a Ford coupe near Eighteenth and St. Charles streets yesterday, William Whiteside, 24, of 5211 Cates avenue, chauffeur of a Brown taxicab, was knocked 15 feet by his cab and seriously injured. At city hospital it was said he probably had suffered a fracture of the skull.

Robert Kremble of the Marquette Hotel was backing into a parking place on the Eighteenth street side of the hotel when the street car, northbound, hit his coupe, knocking it into a Yellow cab parked there. The Yellow cab was rammed into the Brown cab, in front of which Whiteside was bending to crank the engine preparatory to taking away a passenger.

$100,000 Fire at Smelter.

QUINTON, Ok., March 21.—Damage estimated by company officials at approximately $100,000 was caused to the plant of the Quinton Smelter Co. early today by fire of undetermined origin. The offices were not reached by the flames, which ruined about two-thirds of the plant. More than 175 men are out of employment. The plant will be rebuilt, it was said.

FARIS UPHOLDS CLAIM AGAINST MRS. LEATHE

Approves Finding That She Owes $359,078 to Trust Company.

Federal Judge Faris yesterday sustained Special Master Walter N. Davis in the suit of Mrs. Grace A. Leathe for an accounting by the Title Guaranty Trust Co., for the handling of her estate, approving the finding of the master that instead of the trust company being indebted to Mrs. Leathe, as she claimed, she owes the company $359,078.31.

Judge Faris' ruling was made in denying an application to review and set aside the report of the master. Mrs. Leathe has the right of appeal.

Holdings Reduced.

Mrs. Leathe inherited from her third husband, Samuel H. Leathe, large realty holdings, which have been greatly reduced during the 17 years since her husband's death by unprofitable deals and disastrous litigation. Mrs. Leathe's fourth marriage, early in 1920, to Clarence G. Hoover of New York, was annulled and she resumed the name of Leathe.

The suit of Mrs. Leathe has been in Federal Court nearly five years. She charged that the trust company sold certain parcels of real estate and converted the proceeds to its own uses. She demanded an accounting and judgments for amounts that might be due her.

Trust Company's Contention.

The trust company not only denied Mrs. Leathe's charges of wrongful acts, but alleged she became indebted to it by reason of the purchase of a judgment held by Mrs. Elizabeth Knisely for $192,263.75 in order to protect the titles to Mrs. Leathe's property. The company advanced $93,000 of its own funds to settle the Knisely debt, then amounting to $226,000, it alleged.

In finding that the trust company had a claim against Mrs. Leathe, the master recommended that other property of hers held by the company should be sold to satisfy it.

An attorney in close touch with the affairs of Mrs. Leathe said at the time of the filing of the master's report, if its recommendations were followed Mrs. Leathe would be practically "cleaned out." Most of the troubles of the estate resulted from the Knisely judgment and a settlement made with Leathe's son, who threatened a will contest.

MISSOURI DEPUTY IS FREED

Killing of Man in Auto Was in Line of Duty.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

NEW MADRID, Mo., March 21.—Former Deputy Sheriff Murel Kerr, held since last July under bond for the murder of Charles Cleveland, 21 years old, a farmer living near Kewanee, is free today following trial in the Circuit Court at Caruthersville. The jury deliberated only a short time before deciding the shooting was justifiable.

Late in the evening of July 12 last, Kerr, with a number of other officers, was out on a robbery case, and they were patrolling the highway near New Madrid when an automobile came along. Kerr jumped into the road with a flashlight, and ordered the driver to stop. Instead, Cleveland believed it was a holdup and speeded on. The officer called to the driver to halt. When the car did not stop Kerr fired, and a bullet struck Cleveland in the side. A girl who was with him drove the car to a home of relatives, where he was given treatment. He died the following night.

FARR'S GRAY HAIR RESTORER

Don't be afraid of living. Enjoy all the wonderful modern advantages!

While famous laboratories have been perfecting radio, the great manufacturing chemists have been busy producing a formula for restoring gray hair that should be as superior to old-fashioned hair dyes as the perfected cold white electric light is to the old-fashioned smoky lamp.

The Brookline Chemical Co. guarantees their product as a simple, absolutely harmless means of bringing back gray or faded hair to its original natural color, leaving it glossy, soft and lustrous.

Price, $1.10

Easy to use, because perfectly clear, not sticky and will not rub off or stain the scalp. No trouble at all to use; a few minutes in your room is enough. Every bottle sold with the positive guarantee that it cannot cause the slightest harm or annoyance to hair or scalp. Once the hair has returned to its original color it is easily kept so, and can be washed or curled without affecting the color.

ACIDS IN STOMACH CAUSE INDIGESTION

Create Gas, Sourness and Pain How to Treat

Medical authorities state that nearly nine-tenths of the cases of stomach trouble, indigestion, sourness, burning, gas, bloating, nausea, etc., are due to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach, and not as some believe to a lack of digestive juices. The delicate stomach lining is irritated, digestion is delayed and food sours, causing the disagreeable symptoms which every stomach sufferer knows so well.

Artificial digestants are not needed in such cases and may do real harm. Try laying aside all digestive aids and instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This sweetens the stomach, prevents the formation of excess acid and there is no sourness, gas or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and is the most efficient form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

NEW POLICE BOARD TAKES OFFICE AND OUTLINES POLICIES

No Consideration Should Be Shown to Known Criminals, Statement Declares.

A policy of no quarter for known criminals, of fearless enforcement of all laws, regardless of "influence," and of total abstinence from all political party activities except voting is emphasized in a statement issued to all policemen by the new Board of Police Commissioners which was formally inducted into office yesterday.

The new board was sworn in at 10:30 a. m. by Circuit Clerk John Schmoll at the courthouse, and was then received by the retiring board at Police Headquarters. The room was lavishly decorated with flowers sent by the Spanish War Veterans of St. Louis to Allen C. Orrick, president of the new board.

Following a consultation of 45 minutes, the transfer of the reins of authority took place, the old board departing and the new entering its first executive session. This resulted in the election of Dr. Frank L. Magoon as vice president; Henry Kortjohn, treasurer, and Arthur J. Freund, purchasing member. Former members comprised Philip H. Brockman, president; Clarence H. Howard, William Young and Richard Moore.

Tour Through Headquarters.

A tour through Police Headquarters, largely devoted to getting acqainted with Chief of Police O'Brien, Chief of Detectives Hoagland and other officers, was conducted after the meeting.

The formal statement, which reminds policemen that the board will make any changes in personnel of the department it deems necessary in order to obtain execution of its policies, follows:

"The duties of the Board of Police Commissioners are clearly defined by statute. These duties are to preserve the public peace, prevent crime, arrest offenders, protect the rights of persons and property, protect the public health, preserve order on all public occasions and enforce all laws and ordinances.

"To enable the board to perform these duties, it is authorized and required to maintain a police force of some 1800 men.

"As the board can perform its duties only through the authorized police force, it is essential that such force be composed of the best men available and be maintained at the highest degree of efficiency. In the absence of adequate information concerning the existing force, the board cannot now determine what changes, if any, may be necessary in the personnel. However, the board will, as soon as it can, obtain definite information as to existing conditions and if it appears that the force can be improved, the board will make any changes necessary to accomplish this result.

Same Treatment for All.

"The board believes that all laws should be enforced and that such enforcement should be carried out in a vigorous, legal and impartial manner, that the same treatment under the same circumstances should be accorded to the offender with political or other influence and to the offender without such influence.

"Certain consideration should be shown to citizens of good repute who commit minor offenses, but no consideration should be shown to known criminals or to persons who commit serious offenses.

"The law contemplates that the action of the board shall be nonpolitical and the board will not permit its actions to be influenced by politics or political considerations.

"As the board is non-political, the police force, which it controls, must take no part in party politics. This means that all police officers are prohibited from advocating the cause of any candidate for nomination or election and from participating in party politics in any manner whatsoever, with the sole exception that they may vote as they see fit at elections.

Duty of the Force.

"The board expects the police force to feel that they are members of an organization created by the State to protect the legal rights of its citizens; that it is their duty as such members to so conduct themselves as to make that organization efficient, and one upon which the State and its citizens may safely rely. To accomplish this, all officers must devote themselves solely and energetically to police work and be aggressively impartial in enforcing the laws.

"In making arrests and doing other police duty officers should show no fear or favor and they will have the full support of the board in all acts lawfully done in the execution of their duty, no matter who the persons affected thereby may be.

"The members of the board realize the responsible nature of the duties they are assuming and will endeavor to perform them to the best of their ability.

"In the performance of these duties, they desire the co-operation of all good citizens and they will welcome pertinent information and constructive criticism."

Simple Home Mixture Darkens Gray Hair

Cincinnati Barber Tells How Any One Can Prepare It in 5 Minutes.

Any man or woman can easily look twenty years younger by simply darkening their gray, faded, or streaky hair. This is now easy to accomplish with a recipe given by a well known Cincinnati barber.

Simply take a half-pint of water, add one ounce of bay rum, ¼ ounce of glycerine and a small box of Barbo Compound. Shake and it is ready to use. These ingredients can be bought at drug stores at trifling cost.

Applied to the hair twice weekly this delightful mixture quickly gives the desired shade. It is easy to use, is not sticky or greasy, will not color the scalp and does not rub off.

3 Minute Hair Removing Cream

Nu-Del
Snow-white Fragrant
Nu-Del
Patent applied for

NO wonder women everywhere are enthusiastically praising NU-DEL. It is the first improvement of any value that has been made in Depilatories in over seventy-five years. NU-DEL is the first really satisfactory hair-remover. For years chemists have tried in vain to produce a hair remover that would be pure white, pleasantly fragrant, and act immediately. At last we have discovered the secret—and NU-DEL is the result.

NU-DEL is the only snow-white, fragrant, hair-removing cream in the world. It removes unwanted hair in 3 minutes. No mixing, no delay, no disagreeable odor, no obnoxious color. The whiteness of NU-DEL proves its purity. The least tinge of impurity would make it dark.

Nu-Del is ready for instant use

You women, who are now using razors or other methods of removing hair, will find NU-DEL the quickest, daintiest, most convenient and satisfactory way to remove any growth of superfluous hair.

NU-DEL will give you a lovely, smooth, white hair-free skin. The marked superiority of NU-DEL is almost unbelievable. You must try it—then you'll know. Simply smooth on NU-DEL as it comes from the tube, ready for instant use. In 3 minutes rinse off, and every trace of hair will go with it.

We are supplying leading Department and Drug Stores with NU-DEL as fast as possible. Accept no substitute. If your dealer does not have NU-DEL, send us his name with 10c, coin or stamps, for generous sample tube in plain wrapper. Better still, send $1.00 and dealer's name for full size economy tube of NU-DEL, prepaid, in plain wrapper. Money refunded if not satisfactory.

THE NU-DEL LABORATORIES
Dept. 93, 540 Lake Shore Drive, Chicago, Il

Just smooth on NU-DEL and lightly rinse off in 3 minutes. Hair all gone. Skin white and smooth.

GRAY HAIR

How It May Be Overcome

INSTANTLY - SAFELY - NATURALLY

THIS is the Day of Youth. No matter how many years have passed over your head, you must present to the world the Appearance of Youth. There are no old women these days. Women do not accept age even at 50. And every modern mind grants this woman's privilege and lauds her for bravely withstanding the onslaught of time. Not only is it woman's right—it is her duty to be charmingly youthful.

Gray Hair Banned Today

PRESENT day styles of hair dressing make no allowances for Gray Hair. The "shingle," the "bob," the masculine pompadour, the chic coiffure of closely arranged hair, call for the greatest care.

Such arrangement accents gray, faded, streaked or unevenly colored hair. The tiniest thread of silver forces itself to attention. A faded strand or streak clamors for prominence. Surely you cannot afford to be gray when it is so easy to keep hair presentably tinted. A small portion of Brownatone brushed through your locks and presto! Gray hair is gone! In its place is glossy, natural, youthful hair, the crowning glory restored to its rightful beauty. Especially trying to bobbed hair is the slightest touch of gray. When the hair is combed tightly and smoothly from the face gray strands are especially noticeable. A touch of Brownatone and the pompadour is perfect. Why hazard your charm when assured beauty is so easily had?

Gray Hair Tinted Generally

Social leaders, and the most famous women of the stage, long since recognized the imperative need for hair tinting. The restoring of the natural color to hair is also recommended by the best authorities.

Dr. Montgomery, a distinguished authority on hair, says that staining is the only practical treatment for premature gray hair. "Duhring's Diseases of the Skin," says that staining may be resorted to. Thomas Cattell, M. D., M. R., C. C. E., not only permits staining, but advises it in a thoroughly professional way.

Endorsed by Beauty Expert

THE tinting of gray, faded or streaked hair is strongly recommended for all younger women by the famous nationally known beauty expert, Madame Ida Chernoff. She says: "It is every woman's duty to at all times look her best. She owes it to herself, her family and her friends to keep young. If marks of age first appear in the form of wrinkles, then those wrinkles should be removed before they deepen. If graying hairs, the most tell-tale signs of age that I know of, creep in, tint them at once to their original, natural shades. But let me warn you to use a hair tint that has been proven over a long period of time to be effective and safe. There are several such on the market. Personally, I have found Brownatone, made by the Kenton Pharmacal Company, to be satisfactory in every respect."

Excerpt from lecture by Madame Ida Chernoff, on Dec. 4, 1924, at the Garrick Theater, Detroit, Mich.

Tint Gray Hair Safely

THE manufacturers of Brownatone now feel a duty to women to tell in plain words just how hair may be safely tinted to natural shades. The color cannot be "restored" to hair, naturally, because of its physical construction. A hair is a hollow, shaft-like structure, surrounded by a cortex, or wall, of laminated cells. The natural coloring, called "pigment," is contained in the hollow, or core. Gray hair is caused by the absence of pigment. When the coloring disappears, the hair blanches or turns gray. Pigment cannot be replaced—it never returns.

Some dyes cause a brittle condition with a resultant splitting or breaking off. Other dyes coat the outer surface only, as an article is varnished or painted, while still others stain the hair by imparting to the outer cells a false coloring. Brownatone penetrates the hair gently and thoroughly, leaving the hair texture in a natural, healthy condition; restored to its exact original shade.

Restore Your Natural Hair Shade

Brownatone imparts natural shades as desired — golden, blonde, or varying shades of brown or black. (You cannot, with any preparation, tint dark hair to a lighter shade without first bleaching the hair.) Brownatone acts quickly—no waiting for results. It is easy to use, and is only necessary to apply as new hair grows in. The color imparted is not affected by shampoo or bath. It will not rub off. Positively the most pleasing and satisfactory hair tint ever offered.

Be Sure To Use a Guaranteed Harmless Tint

BROWNATONE is safe and sure—it is the best-known, most used hair tint in the United States and Canada. Millions of bottles have been sold with uniformly satisfactory results. The manufacturer has a long and honorable business record. The guarantee is unequivocal. You are assured that Brownatone contains no sulphur, silver, mercury, zinc or peroxide; aniline, coal tar products, or their derivatives; neither does it contain lead or para phenylenediamine (deadly poison). Products containing these last named ingredients are prohibited from sale in New York City. Brownatone has passed the most rigid tests, made by some of the world's best chemists. You need have no hesitancy in using this reliable preparation.

BROWNATONE
TINTS GRAY HAIR ANY SHADE

MORE than 50,000 drug and department stores sell Brownatone under the strict guarantee of the manufacturer. You can buy it in almost every city or town. There are two colors—lightest blonde to medium brown, and dark brown to black. There are two sizes—50c and $1.50, the larger bottle containing five times the quantity. Should you be unable to purchase at home, write the manufacturer direct.

You cannot fail to obtain desired results if simple directions are followed. Send for Trial Bottle today and test it in the privacy of your home. A very instructive booklet on hair, and complete directions for using Brownatone will be included. Don't delay while youthful beauty fades. Send coupon!

Roosevelt Request Denied.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The proposed expedition of Kermit and Theodore Roosevelt into Turkestan has met with difficulties, it was learned today, owing to the refusal of the Viceroy of India to permit the party to use the Hunza Pass from India to Turkestan. It is understood permission is being sought to use another route. The Indian Government's position was based on the ground that insufficient native carriers were available this year.

SPONGE FLEET BRINGS CARGO INTO PORT

Heavily Freighted Ships Begin to Dock at Tarpon Springs Fla.

(Copyright, 1925.)

TARPON SPRINGS, Fla., March 21.—The sponge fleet has begun coming into harbor here from the first of its three months trips this year with approximately $200,000 worth of sponges piled on the decks and in the holds. This industry alone brings into Florida over $1,000,000 of new wealth each year.

The great majority of the thousands of sponges bought in and marketed here are torn from the coral rocks of the Gulf of Mexico by deep sea divers and the fishing end of industry is entirely in the hands of Greek divers and boatmen. As a result there is a large and prosperous Greek colony in Tarpon Springs, which has become the center of the sponge industry.

The port achieved that pre-eminence as a result of the exigencies of war. The industry was first put on a commercial basis in the early nineties as the result of the efforts of John L. Cheney. At that time Key West was a sponge center, he said today, and all fishing was done with poles equipped with a three-pronged hook. As the sponge supply became exhausted in shallow water, this method became impossible since no man could handle a pole more than 50 feet long. Cheney induced the Greeks to come here and fish outside the nine-mile limit in diving suits.

93 Vessels in Fleet.

At the time of the Spanish-American war, the spongers of the Florida keys who made Key West headquarters, were afraid to run back to that port for fear some wandering unit of Cervera's fleet would cut them off. They brought their cargoes to Tarpon Springs, far from the track of the Spanish ships, and the brokers and packers followed them. Many of the packers remained after the war and while Key West still reaps a bounteous harvest from the Key fisheries, it has ceased to be the center of the industry.

Today there are 93 vessels in the Tarpon Springs deep water fleet, which makes four trips a year. Each is manned with a crew of from five to nine men, according to the depth of water in which they expect to work. The finest sponges come from the deepest water and many are taken in depths of 120 to 130 feet. It is not unusual for a boat to bring in a cargo from one trip valued at from $4000 to $10,000, according to Theodore Petzold, manager of the Sponge Exchange. The sponges are rotted and cleaned on board and deposited in the iron barred warehouse which surrounds the sponge exchange. There they are examined and bought by the sponge brokers and packed for distribution to the markets of the world.

Catches Depend on Weather.

The size of the catches and the profits of the season depend largely on weather conditions. In shoal water, a stiff breeze soon makes diving impossible through rolling of the water, but the fishermen frequently go down in 100-foot depths in a breeze which would send many a vessel scurrying for harbor.

Tarpon Springs also is a center of the food fish industry and the total value of the fish caught annually far surpasses that of the sponge catch. It is anticipated that there will be at least 75,000,000 pounds of fish caught on the west coast alone this year. Possibly double that amount will be brought to dock on the east coast. But a few days ago one vessel came into this port with over 6000 pounds of mackerel on board, taken from one run of fish. The larger part of the fish caught in Florida waters are shipped fresh in ice. Many of the fishermen make headquarters at fish camps located in sheltered spots up and down the coast between Cedar Key and Key West, running their catches into whatever harbor is most available. Few of the Greeks are engaged in this trade, but for deep water diving they are declared to be unexcelled, staying down an hour in 60 feet of water, a half hour in 80 feet, and 15 minutes in depths above 100 feet.

MICHIGAN HAMLET SENDS $100 TO STORM SUFFERERS

Heart of Nation Touched by Disaster, Messages to Gov. Small Reveal.

By the Associated Press.

SPRINGFIELD, Ill., March 21.—That the heart of the nation has been touched by the disaster in Southern Illinois continued to be evidenced by messages from all parts of the country which are being received at the office of Gov. Len Small here.

All extend sympathy and offers of help. Governors who have sent telegrams include Alfred E. Smith of New York, Vic Donahey of Ohio, John J. Blaine of Wisconsin and Tom Terral of Arkansas. In addition, the Mayors of New York, Philadelphia, Detroit, Memphis, St. Paul, Jacksonville and other cities throughout the nation have asked Gov. Small to direct them what they may do to help. The little town of Oxford, Mich., through its Red Cross, sent $100 without waiting to be asked, and scores of men and civic organizations in all parts of the Middle West have offered their services to aid in relieving the injured and caring for the dead.

NY NATIONS EXPRESS SYMPATHY FOR SUFFERERS

Japanese Ambassador Among Those Delivering Messages at State Department.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Formal expressions of sympathy from foreign Governments and peoples for the storm sufferers in the Middle West continued to reach the State Department today in increasing numbers.

A message delivered by Japanese Ambassador Matsudaira said:

"The Japanese Government, having received with profound regret the news of a great tornado which has wrought a tremendous havoc in the central part of the United States, instructs me to call upon you and convey to you the expression of their deep sympathy and sincere condolence on this great disaster."

Secretary Kellogg acknowledged this expression of sympathy.

A message delivered by Sir Esme Howard, the British Ambassador, in the name of the Canadian Government and people, expressed sincere sympathy "for all those who have suffered as a result of the catastrophe."

C. Brun, the Danish Minister, presented condolences in behalf of his Government and people, as did also the Salvadorian charge, H. D. Castro.

"Deeply impressed by the misfortune that has taken place," Castro said, "I express to the Government of your excellency, the sentiments of the Government of Salvador and my own, the assurances of the keenest sympathy."

G. A. R. Veterans to Get Sword When They Return Flag.

By the Associated Press.

NEW ORLEANS, March 21.—A sword which belonged to a union officer will be returned to the North through the delegation of the Grand Army of the Republic veterans, who will come here May 4, to give back to the South the battle flag of the Tenth Louisiana Infantry.

Col. Ledward Colburn, from whom the sword was captured, has been dead many years and if any of the 1392 men who made up his infantry regiment survive they are not known to the South. Negotiations for the double ceremony are being carried on between James Dinkins of this city and Ira R. Wildman of Danbury, Conn., commander of the Connecticut department of the G. A. R.

Baptist Council to Meet.

The Sunday School Council of the St. Louis Baptist Association, an organization recently formed to bring together the teachers and workers of all St. Louis Baptist Sunday schools, will hold its first meeting on March 24, at 8 p. m., at the Third Baptist Church, Grand and Washington boulevards. The association plans to meet quarterly.

French Teachers Gain in Politics.

PARIS, March 21.—Teachers, literary men and journalists are gradually creeping up on lawyers in representation in the French Chamber of Deputies and Senate. Although the former contains 142 attorneys and the latter 59, the pedagogical Deputies have reached the respectable number of 46, while there are 19 instructors or professors sitting in the upper house. The Chamber boasts 38 writers and journalists and the Senate 26, while the doctors are pretty evenly represented in the two bodies—33 Senators and 32 Deputies. The same applies to manufacturers, who number 30 in the Senate and 38 in the lower house. The Senate has a lone veterinarian to the Chamber's two.

UNIVERSITY OF JERUSALEM TO BE OPENED APRIL 1

Lord Balfour, Who Made Possible New Seat of Hebrew Learning, to Preside at Ceremony.

From the London Bureau of the Post-Dispatch and New York World.

LONDON, March 10.—Leading Jews from all over the world will participate in the official opening of the Hebrew University of Jerusalem, April 1, when the Earl of Balfour, famous Christian philosopher-statesman-student and sympathizer with Zionism, will formally declare the new seat of learning open.

The university site is admirably chosen, comprising some 40 acres on Mount Scopus, looking down, to the west, on Jerusalem City, and to the east lie the Dead Sea and the Valley of the Jordan, while on the further side are the Mountains of Moab. The foundation stone of the university was laid in 1918 and the complete plans provide for far more extensive buildings than it has been found possible or necessary to construct yet, but for the present the main portion comprises the famous semiclassical style residence of the late Sir John Gray Hill.

The Gray Hill House is to remain the central unit of the university in any future additions and the whole scheme of construction was drawn up by Prof. Geddes and Mr. Mears, the well-known Edinburgh architect.

American Jews have played a large part in the gradual achievement of the Zionist ideal of a Jewish university in the Holy City, the leaders of American Jewry having been generous financial supporters as well as prolific with suggestions, gifts of scientific and literary equipment, etc. Only last year the famous financier and philanthropist, Felix Warburg (of the banking house of that name), gave $100,000 to the university funds, and the American committee includes Louis Marshall and Samuel Untermyer.

It is intended to make the Hebrew University the intellectual center of "the renaissance of the ancient people," and it is described by the founders of the first European university to be erected on Oriental soil by an Eastern people, "who, after 2000 years absence, are returning to the East with the culture of the West." The language to be used at the university is the ancient tongue—Hebrew.

For a start, it is proposed to regard the University of Jerusalem primarily as a research university rather than concentrating on the normally recognized functions of a university of teaching and training students for professional and nonprofessional careers. The promoters recognized that the danger in new universities in countries like Palestine, which have not yet been provided with modern educational institutions, is to furnish quantity at the expense of quality; to strive at turning out numbers of graduates rather than aiming at a high standard of intellectual life, and it is admitted that in Palestine an intellectual atmosphere has to be created. This necessarily will be the work of time and it has been decided to start with two or three well equipped institutes, which are to set the standard of the new seat of learning.

Accordingly the university opens with three research institutes and a library. There is a medical department a microbiological institute and a chemical institute, the medical department being founded in 1921 by the American Jewish Physicians Committee with Dr. Nathan Ratnoff as organizer and president. More than 10 acres of the land on Mount Scopus were purchased from funds raised in America and sufficient funds raised remained to support the budget of the research laboratory for the opening years.

To Study Tropical Diseases.

The Research Institute in Microbiology consists, at present, of two departments dealing with (a) bacteriology, (b) serology. The American Jewish Physicians' Committee has rented temporarily a part of the Pasteur Institute in Jerusalem, where the Medical Library, largely the gift of one of its members, Dr. Julius Jarcho, is housed and in use by the profession in Palestine. The committee also has defrayed the cost of equipping an X-Ray Therapeutic and Diagnostic institute which it has donated temporarily to the Hadassah Medical Organization in Jerusalem, but which ultimately will become part of the projected University Hospital, for the construction of which the American Jewish Physicians' Committee is conducting an intensive campaign to raise funds.

As soon as the drive for the hospital is completed, the committee will begin the erection of the Medical College proper, with its laboratories of physiology, anatomy, then pathology, etc., lecture and clinic rooms and auditoriums and then will institute post-graduate instruction in modern health methods and tropical diseases.

The Chemical Institute is under the direction of Prof. Fodor, formerly of the University of Halle and there will be two departments dealing respectively with general chemistry, research work being the and bio-colloid and bio-physical chemistry, research work being the main program for the present. The microbiological and chemical laboratories cost $100,000.

The library, under the direction of Dr. Hugo Bergmann, formerly of Prague University Library, possesses some 85,000 volumes, of which 5000 are not catalogued and these include gifts of books from all over the world. The British, French, Italian and Czecho-Slovakian Governments made gifts of valuable books, and institutions like the New York Public Library, the British Museum in London, and the Jewish Library of Berlin, made contributions. Jewish literature naturally forms the basis of the collection, for which a new building is being prepared.

Dr. Chaim Weizmann and Dr. Sokolow, the leaders of present-day Zionism, accompany Lord Balfour, who sails for Jerusalem March 20, from Naples. Many American tourists are expected to attend. Incidentally, a section of the Arab community of Palestine has announced its intention of boycotting Lord Balfour during his visit, on account of his support of the Zionist movement, but it is not clear how widespread this movement is, for other Arab communities have publicly deprecated any action which might be offensive to Britain, on whom the Arabs still rely for "protection" from the Jewish rulers of Palestine.

NEW AMERICAN MUSIC PUZZLES

Berlin Audience Cold to "Adventures in a Perambulator."

By the Associated Press.

BERLIN, March 21.—Ernoe Rapee, Chicago Orchestra conductor, who has been introducing some American music into the concerts he has directed with symphony orchestras in European capitals, recently puzzled an audience here by playing "Adventures in a Perambulator," by John Alden Carpenter of Park Ridge, Ill.

This suite for orchestra attempts to tell the experiences of a baby being wheeled by a nurse, but the introduction into the music of the "heavy steps of an American policeman," tunes of a hand organ and other American street noises were so unfamiliar to the Europeans that they apparently failed to get the composer's idea, or did not regard the subject as suitable for musical treatment.

Rapee was enthusiastically received when he directed Strauss numbers, but the audience was cold to the new music from America.

Here are values that are real opportunities for anyone interested in Furniture and Home Furnishings. It will be to your advantage to come to the FRANKLIN Monday and make your selections while these low prices prevail.

een Tree Brewery And Bonair Hotel Sold

rsity of Week's Transactions Indicates a Broader Market for Spring and Summer.

By Berry Moore.

e week in realty closed yes- ty with the sale of the build- and equipment of the Green Brewery, the Bonair Hotel the southwest corner of Grand Flora boulevards, Proetz & ell, Eugene Christy and the elmann-Spackler Real Es- Co., acting as the intermedi- in the transactions.

St. Louis Bank & Equip- Co. purchased the property Green Tree Brewery, which frontage of 304 feet on Sid- reet by a depth on Ninth and nth streets of 304 feet. The as made by Proetz & Schnell alf of the St. Louis Brewing ation, which is liquidating its s. Edward S. Bokern and McCaskell acted for the pur- s.

buildings, which are of brick one construction, will be ed by the St. Louis Bank & ment Co., which has made a outlay for plant equipment alterations. The price paid the property was not disclosed.

Bonair Hotel, formerly n as the Berlin, and occupy- a site 113x200 feet at the west corner of Taylor and hing avenues, was purchased the Ivory Realty Co., of which nk Dubinsky, president of the insky Realty Co., is the mov- spirit, through Eugene Christy, esenting Mrs. Katherine But- Blackmore. The hotel struc- comprising 90 rooms, was by Mrs. Blackmore's father, late Edward Butler. It is ite the convent of the Sacred t, and in the center of a large ment building section. The reported by Christy was 000.

Church Acquires Corner.

Compton Heights Christian h acquired the southwest cor- Grand and Flora boulevards, ding the 14-room home of Nicolaus, who was the r in the transaction. The eration was $40,000. Under rms of the sale possession of emises must be given April 1, is taken to mean that the h congregation has immediate ing plans. The transaction was effected by the Hemmelmann-Spackler Real Estate Co.

These deals are noteworthy as markinug the culmination of the winter and the advent of the spring season. Especially does their diversified character pressage a broader market in the ensuing spring and summer, it is believed.

Plans were disclosed during the week for another lofty office structure for a Pine street corner, east of Twelfth street, but details are withheld pending financial arrangement with investment bankers. This enterprise is sponsored by a large construction company, which believes that the proposed structure would impart the needed impetus to this thoroughfare.

Skouras Bros. said yesterday that construction would be launched May 1 on the 22-story office building to be erected by them at the northwest corner of Seventh and Locust streets. The structure will include a commodious theater on the first floor, while the upper floors will be available for offices and shops, it is understood. It will be one of the most pretentious buildings of its type in the West. Architects now are perfecting the details of this project, which formed the inception of the downtown movement.

The site was acquired at the instance of W. R. Cady, real estate officer of the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., who conducted the negotiations for it and who arranged with the first National Co. for the requisite capital. Cost of the building and site is estimated at $5,000,000.

Building for Oil Company.

Maritz & Young, architects, are perfecting plans for the 10-story office building to be erected at the southeast corner of Washington and Theresa avenues for the Puritan Oil Co. This project is heralded as the forerunner of important developments on Washington avenue.

Another notable sale was that of 1809-15 Franklin avenue, inclusive, comprising five stores and 16 flats, which was acquired by Ben Piven from Frank Yawitz, through the Dubinsky Real Estate Co. Another sale was that of 662 East Bend road, consisting of stores, flats and garage, to David Tunnella, for the account of Sophia Lerner, through the Dubinsky Realty Co.

CONTRACTS FOR $400,000 MORE WORK AT HOLLY HILLS

The Federer Realty Co. announces that in the last week final contracts for streets, sidewalks, sewers and water installation at Holly Hills have been let to the Central Paving & Construction Co. and the Riley Construction Co. These contracts for $400,000 worth of work mark the final stage in the completion of the subdivision and are in addition to more than $350,000 already spent in grading and improvement work.

The contracts call for completion of the work on or before the first of August. The majority of the streets, however, will be ready for traffic in less than 60 days. Sewer and water installation is now more than 90 per cent complete.

The Laclede Gas Light Co. has contracted to install high pressure gas mains and will start the work in the coming week. All of the improvements will be installed under supervision of the city and of Pitzman's Co., engineers.

Sales in the subdivision have been very active in the last two weeks, deals having been closed in excess of $75,000.

William F. M. Buechting, formerly with the Yeckel-Feydt-Earickson Realty Co., has joined the sales force of the Federer Realty Co., selling improved property, at 2610 Gravois avenue. Buechting is well known in the real estate field in South St. Louis.

RESIDENCES, APARTMENT, LOT SOLD BY JOHN S. BLAKE & BRO.

Seven-room residence, 2520 North Garrison avenue, for Florence Hinchey to Cecelia Tracy.

A four-family apartment of six and eight rooms at 3215 and 17 Lafayette avenue, for Gus George to a client of the Hartman Realty Co.

A residence at 6222 Ella avenue for a client to Allen J. and Nora A. Cook.

A flat at 3433 Abner place for Thomas J. and Nettie Burns to Venus E. Smiley, who was represented by the Schemel Realty Co.

2921 Cass avenue, lot 25 by 125 feet through to Howard street, cottage, for Mary Haplin to A. Seufert and wife.

Nos. 4622-22A Sacramento avenue, lot 25 by 120 feet, a single frame flat building, for J. T. Wilson and wife to Edward S. Keady and wife.

WAGNER-GRANT-BELL REALTY SALES REACH $250,000 MARK

The Wagner-Grant-Bell Realty Co. announces through their sales manager, C. E. Cravens, that sales have reached the $250,000 mark for the first 15 days of March.

Horace G. McKim recently joined the sales force of the firm. McKim formerly was associated with the Mississippi Valley Trust Co., later with the Lytton T. Block Co.

Frank Ebbeler, for many years connected in the real estate activities of St. Louis, has also joined the sales organization. Ebbeler's sales for the last 10 days since joining this firm have totaled $84,700.

Al Engelman has also joined the sales force. Engelman formerly was associated with the Brunswick people.

A. R. SCHOLLMEYER CO. REPORTS SALE OF LOTS

The A. R. Schollmeyer Real Estate Co. reports having sold 30 50-foot lots in Adele Park, a subdivision on the Denny and Manchester roads, to a building contractor, M. M. Connole, who plans to erect a house on each lot. These houses will be of bungalow type and will contain all improvements. The improvements in Adele Park are being pushed to completion. Sewers, water, gas and walks have been installed and work is scheduled to start soon on the streets and curbs. The development of this section is largely due to the transportation supplied by the bus line now in operation on the Manchester and Denny roads.

NATIONAL REFINING COMPANY BUYS UNIVERSITY CITY SITE

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. reports the sale of northeast corner of Delmar boulevard and Leland avenue, in University City, to the National Refining Co. for the account of George M. Scheu. The lot has a frontage of 65 feet on Delmar boulevard and a depth of 100 feet on Leland avenue.

The National Refining Co. will erect a filling station. This is the third corner sold by the Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. in this vicinity within the last 90 days.

MAVRAKOS CANDY CO. LEASES BROADWAY AND OLIVE STORE

The large store room on the first floor of the La Salle building, northwest corner of Broadway and Olive street has been leased to the Mavrakos Candy Co. for a long term of years. The candy company will occupy the corner 25 feet and space on Olive street will be sublet through Isaac T. Cook & Co. It is intended to have the new shop open for business about May 1. Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., represented Mavrakos in negotiating the lease.

HUNDRED NEW HOMES FOR MAJESTIC TRACTS

Gannondale and Los Angeles Properties Visited by Large Crowds.

The Majestic Homes Corporation announces that in the two Majestic communities, Gannondale and Los Angeles (St. Louis), more than a hundred homes will be completed this spring and early summer. Perhaps this is the first time that a single organization has built a similar number of homes as a single operation.

Although the most extensive home building operation in the city, every indication points to more spring and summer buyers than there are available Majestic homes. This indication is particularly well borne out by the December and January sales, off season months. The sales in these two months were in excess of a half million dollars.

All the Majestic homes are individually designed. Each home during its erection being under the constant supervision of the architect.

The public interest in the Majestic homes is apparent by the number of visitors. Last Sunday both tracts were visited by many persons. Gannondale is a part of University City, on Delmar between the Hanley and North and South roads, conveniently reached by automobile, street car and bus. Los Angeles (St. Louis), comprising 200 acres, is on Natural Bridge road, only 35 or 40 minutes from downtown and adequately served by street car and bus lines.

ARSENAL-WATSON PARK OPENS FOR SALE TODAY

Arsenal-Watson Park, a 75-acre subdivision at Arsenal street and Watson boulevard, will be formally opened for sale today. The tract contains 450 lots and improvements have been going on for the last nine months and are about 75 per cent completed. Sewers, water, gas, five-foot granitoid sidewalks and macadamized streets are being installed.

Lots on Arsenal street and Watson boulevard are ready for building, concrete streets and sidewalks having been recently completed. Twenty bungalows and flats are to be started at once. Three hundred new homes have been built within six blocks of this property in the last two years.

The Peoples' Motor Bus (Lindenwood line) runs past this property, and the Tower Grove car passes it at Fifty-ninth and Arsenal streets. Stedelin Bros. Wholesale Poultry Co. are the owners and David P. Leahy is agent.

RESIDENCES AND LOT SOLD BY THE BELLIS REALTY CO.

The Bellis Realty Co., through its president, Milton B. Bellis, reports the following sales for the week.

Sold 4863 Cote Brilliante avenue, a flat on a lot 33 by 100 feet, for the account of Mrs. Agnes Lavin to Nathan and Becky Shapiro.

Sold a bungalow at 5241 Lexington avenue to Mrs. Lavin.

Sold a tract of ground consisting of 50 feet on the east side of Fair avenue by a depth of 123 feet, for the account of Margaret Higgins to a client, who will erect a double flat.

Sold 5168 Enright avenue, residence on a lot 28 by 172 feet, for the account of Anna Camarda to Helen Bright.

WEISELS-GERHART COMPANY SELLS RESIDENCES AND LOT

The Weisels-Gerhart Real Estate Co. reports the sale of the residence at 5153 Washington boulevard to Charles S. Knight for the account of J. A. Hutcheson. The residence is an ornate three-story rock front structure. Mr. and Mrs. Knight will take possession of their new home about April 1.

Also reports the sale of 5564 Bartmer avenue for E. F. Green to William A. Browning. The residence contains 12 rooms.

5157 Cates avenue, a residence was sold for J. A. Hutcheson to I. Simpkins.

A lot in Hi-Pointe, fronting 42 feet 6 inches by 142 feet on the north side of San Bonita avenue, 800 feet west of Skinker road, for Patrick Usher to the Guilford Realty & Investment Co., of which Richard A. Bullock is president.

Haffner Reports Sales of Flats.

The Henry H. Haffner Realty Co. reports the following sales for the week: 1429 Rowan street, a single flat, sold for Mr. and Mrs. Nathan Bournstein to Mr. and Mrs. S. Perlmutter; 1217 South Seventh street, stores and flats, sold for Mr. and Mrs. Morris Zabrach to J. L. Simkin.

LACK OF UNIFORMITY IN TAX SETTLEMENTS ALLEGED

Senator Couzens Tells of Case Involving an Oil Well Now Being Considered by His Committee.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—Chairman Couzens of the special Senate committee investigating the Internal Revenue Bureau, charged today that a case being considered by the committee in executive session showed the Treasury Department was not settling tax questions uniformly and that the personal views of the tax assessors influenced the result.

The case, involving about a quarter of a million dollars, Chairman Couzens said, was of two men with interests in an oil well, one owning a one-third interest and the other one half. The man owning the one-third interest sold his holdings, which created an actual value, under the rules of the treasury, and a tax settlement was made on that basis.

When the owner of the one-half interest came to pay his taxes, the chairman asserted, he claimed another value and a basis was agreed on with the treasury experts under which he paid less taxes than his former partner.

The Treasurer's explanation, Senator Couzens asserted, was that the assessments were made by two different sets of engineers and auditors, who did not come to the same conclusions. "I do not believe," he added, "that these cases happen in all sections of the bureau, but I hope the investigation will show to what extent the conditions do exist."

C. P. HEATH REAL ESTATE COMPANY SELL FIVE HOMES

The Chauncey P. Heath Real Estate Co. reports the sale of 4319 McPherson avenue for Blasdel Shapleigh to Justin Quirk, who was represented by the Bergans & Dohrenkamper Real Estate Co. The house consists of 10 rooms, two baths and has hot-water heat. Mr. Shapleigh, the former owner, has just built a home in Southmoor.

They also report the sale of a single five and six room flat at 5926 Hamilton Terrace for Christian Heyer and wife to a client of the Shuchart Realty Co.; also 1504 Del Norte avenue, Richmond Heights, a five and six room single flat, for Harry J. Talbot to John W. Miller, who was represented by J. U. Musick; also 5110 Ridge avenue, a six-room residence, for Philomenia Jernigan to Alexander J. Groom; also 5740 Julian avenue, an eight-room residence, for Herman Spoehrer and wife to William Kenner; also a 50-foot lot on North Whittier street for a client to a client of Liebert & Rielly; also a lot on Plymouth avenue for the Grollnek Realty Co. to Daniel J. Siegel.

FOUR HOMES IN FAIR OAKS ESTATE UNDER CONSTRUCTION

Spring building activities in the Fair Oaks estate, which was originally founded by a number of St. Louis business men for their private estates, have definitely started, according to an announcement by Klingensmith-Rice-Wilkins, architects.

Foundations are now being made for the residence of S. E. James Sell. The new home will be of late Georgian design. A winding drive will approach a broad paved terrace fronting the main facade. The main entrance will be from this terrace, while the service entrance will be concealed by a covered and trellised passageway from the garage to the rear of the main hall. The house will contain nine rooms and three baths.

Mr. Sells' home is the first of four new homes now being erected in Fair Oaks estate.

RENGEL-WEBER REALTY CO. NEGOTIATES $25,000 IN LOANS

Rengel-Weber Realty Co., 3127 South Grand boulevard, reports having closed the following sales: 4217 Hartford, a five and five-room modern flat, for the account of John W. and Marie Rothschild to Pearl Gutke; 3674 Rutger, a six-room brick residence, for the account of Joseph Kennedy to a client; 3930 Nebraska, a brick flat, for the account of Philip and Ida Hasterok to William H. and Hilda Seibt; 4117-19 Flad avenue, a five and six room double flat, for the account of Frank and Julia Paczkowski to Joseph F. Zunz. They have also negotiated loans amounting to $25,000.

WIESE PRINTING COMPANY MOVES INTO NEW HOME

The occupation of the entire second floor in the new Pinol building at Twenty-second and Pine streets marks the fourth expansion of the Wiese Printing Co. The concern specializes in producing high-class halftone and color work. With a floor space of 13,000 square feet and additional new machinery all on one floor, they will have one of the most efficient printing plants in the city. Isaac T. Cook & Co., Inc., represented both parties in negotiating this lease.

NEW AERIAL BOMB HUNTS PLANES WITH MAGNETIC 'EYE'

Result of Secret Experiments in England Shows Maneuvers by Aviators Futile.

By the Associated Press

LONDON, March 21.—The Westminster Gazette reports that secret experiments are in progress with one of the strangest anti-aircraft weapons ever devised. Experts believe that it will be more potent in aerial warfare than torpedoes and submarines in naval fighting, the newspaper says.

It consists of a bomb which when within a certain radius of an airplane "responds to the magnetic influences which give the bomb immense velocity toward the plane."

No amount of maneuvering by the pilot, according to the description of the newspaper, will enable him to escape and the plane is doomed. The bomb is launched from the ground.

REED DOESN'T REGARD DAWES AS EXPERT ON SENATE RULES

Senator Says Vice President Has So Far Failed to Show He Is Qualified to Change Them.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

CEDAR RAPIDS, Ia., March 21.—Senator James A. Reed of Missouri paused here today on his way from Washington to his home in Kansas City to dine with his brother, John A. Reed, and gave an interview on Vice President Charles G. Dawes and Charles B. Warren, whose name the Senate recently rejected for Attorney-General. In commenting on Warren, the Senator said, with reference to him enforcing the law against the trusts: "The king of the bootleggers might just as well have been appointed to enforce the Volstead law."

The Senator, in reference to Dawes' effort to reform the rules of the Senate, said: "It seems to me Mr. Dawes has taken a rather large order. Most of the Senate rules have been in existence for three-quarters of a century, being slightly modified from time to time. Serving under these rules and content with them, and in part assisting in forming them, were such men as Webster, Clay, Calhoun, Lodge, Allison and Cummins. Some of them served more than 30 years, all of which tends to create the violent presumption that the joint product of their brains as expressed in the rules could hardly be greatly improved on by a banker who never was inside the Senate until he appeared to take the oath of office, and then knew so little about the rules which ordinarily obtain among persons of good breeding."

The Senator criticised Dawes for rushing out of the Senate ahead of the Justice of the Supreme Court, Ambassadors and other dignitaries amidst the laughter of the galleries, to see the President inaugurated. He declared the rules of the Senate might need reforming, but thus far Dawes had failed to qualify as an expret.

COUNTY SCHOOLS SELECT SPELLING BEE ENTRANTS

Winners of Contests Yesterday to Compete in District Tilt at Cape Girardeau.

A spelling contest to determine who will represent St. Louis County in a district spelling bee at Cape Girardeau, April 11, was held yesterday at Clayton. Miss Norine Lehman, 16, of the Normandy High School, spelled 400 words correctly and was declared the winner for the high school entrants, while Minnie Smith, 13, of the Pershing School, University City, was high for the grammar department, outspelling the other contestants with 350 words. They will represent the county at Cape Girardeau, where entrants for the State-wide spelling contest at Jefferson City, April 29, will be determined.

Twenty-five contestants entered the preliminaries. Elsie Schultz, 13, of Ferguson, and Marie Meyers, 13, of Wellston, won second and third prizes, respectively, in the high school contest. The second and third winners among the grammar grade pupils were Kenneth Stone, 14, of Webster Groves, and Earl Zimmerman, 11, of Hancock. Each of the prize winners received cash awards from the Parent-Teachers' Association.

HOUSE BILL TO PUNISH ROBBERY WITH HANGING

Measure Sent to Engrossment Also Provides Life Imprisonment; Few Dissenting Votes.

JEFFERSON CITY, March 21.—A bill fixing the penalty for robbery in the first degree at death, or life imprisonment, was engrossed in the House yesterday with less than a dozen dissenting votes. The author, Representative Henry of Bates County, was urged by House leaders to have the bill made a special order of business early next week for final passage, and then seek appointment of a special committee to confer with the Senate to facilitate passage in the upper House.

Speaker Jones Parker of St. Louis took the floor for the bill. He declared the cities of the State were overrun with hardened criminals, who laughed at the law, as a result of leniency in administration of the criminal laws.

"This sentimentality about turning robbers loose is all wrong," Parker said. "There has been too much coddling of criminals and it has increased crime. The man who holds you up at the point of a pistol is a potential slayer—he has murder in his heart and he should be punished accordingly."

The House also passed two bills, introduced by Representatives Griffith of Kansas City and Ellis of Barry County, which would give Circuit Judges discretionary power to refuse appeal bonds to persons convicted of a criminal charge, pending their appeal to the Supreme Court. The latter court has construed the present statute as making it mandatory that an appeal bond be granted, except in cases where sentences or death or life imprisonment have been imposed.

MERCANTILE TRUST CO. REPORTS RESIDENCE SALE

The Mercantile Trust Co., representing the purchaser, reports the sale of a large residence at 2043 Park avenue, for Mary L. Sullivan of Chicago. This is one of the fine old homes on the north side of Lafayette Park, with a 75 by 150 foot lot. The Edward Bakewell Co. represented the seller.

The Artistic Treatmen of a 4-Room Apartmen

ART is not confined to the castle, the mansion or th wealthy home. The apartment dweller who say "If I only lived in a big home I could fix it up arti cally," is simply repeating an everyday excuse.

In order to prove that it is possible to have comf and beauty at small cost, Ross Crane, nationally kno authority on interior decoration, has furnished a ty cal four-room apartment in Pershing Heights, the clusive apartment subdivision of the Davis Realty Mortgage Company. Into this modest home Mr. Cra has brought the same refinement, the same blending colors, the same good taste and selection, that ch acterizes his treatment of the most expensive dwelli throughout the country.

In this Apartment you will see the proper arrangem pictures, mirrors and lamps; an effective treatment of and floors, and a selection of fixtures, hangings and furni that will combine in a most pleasing manner the elemen harmony, economy and comfort.

Are you planning to furnish an apartment? Are you ing new furniture? Does your home need pictures or or hangings? Do you expect to redecorate this Spring?

You will get many valuable ideas by visiting the Ross Cr "Small Cost" Furnished Apartment in Pershing Heights to The owners of big homes will find the exhibit of equal inte

SUBURB'N PROP'Y FOR SALE

Webster Groves

COLONIAL
A most attractive residence located amidst beautiful surroundings in the center of the exclusive residence section of WEBSTER GROVES. A house of true Colonial type of architecture, it has an air of substantial comfort and deep-rooted permanency that makes it distinctive.

The first floor contains pleasing entrance hall, large living room with fireplace, solarium, large sunny dining room and a model kitchen. Second floor contains 4 large airy bedrooms with ample closet space, tiled bath with most modern plumbing. Oak floors throughout and hot-water heat. Garage for two cars. House sets far back from the street among large shade trees, gardens and shrubbery. Offered at most attractive price and terms.

Let us show you WEBSTER GROVES. We offer charming homes of every type and cost.

WEBSTER GROVES
Everything that makes a residential community desirable can be counted on in Webster Groves. Accessibility to the city; excellent transportation service and a social environment that attracts desirable people; a location that is picturesque, with its many trees and winding park-like streets and finally, a climate that means health.

BUSINESS OPPORTUNITIES

AN EXECUTIVE is needed in a business which sold almost a quarter million dollars in St. Louis last year, and earned nearly 100 per cent on its invested capital. The assets of this company are 65 per cent liquid. It has never failed to discount a bill and is not in need of capital. It does need a man young enough to be alive and active, who has sales ability and who can handle salesmen. Additional lines taken on have opened new fields and the salesmen going into them must be intelligently and capably directed. If you can convince us that you are such a man and can invest $10,000, we offer an opportunity such as is seldom presented. It is the man we want. Your investment is secondary and in the nature of a warranty of confidence in your ability. The position carries a very liberal salary. Every angle of our business is open to your closest investigation and will show that your investment should be doubled the first year. Full particulars must be given in first letter. Box K-342, Post-Dispatch. (c)

Opportunity to Make Money

An established Illinois real estate corporation has some contracts of purchase and mortgages maturing in from three to five years, which it is offering at a liberal discount in order to raise cash for use in its ever-increasing business. This company is engaged in the subdivision business primarily, yet it covers the general field, having some of the best close-in suburban property that can be found in the St. Louis industrial district. The city has over 11,000 industrial workers, with an annual payroll of upward $18,000,000; an opportunity for someone with ready cash. Unless you mean business do not answer. We invite the most rigid investigation. Ask for an interview with the president. Box P-85, Post-Dispatch. (c65)

FACTORY DISTRIBUTOR

A nationally known manufacturing corporation wishes to connect with a high caliber, successful business man to market their product in this and surrounding territory.

PRODUCT

Essential to large and small merchants. Favorably known everywhere. Leading concerns using it indorse it highly.

REQUIREMENTS

Executive ability or experience to supervise salesmen, follow up leads, etc. Cash investment of $1500 to $6000 (depending on size of territory), which is temporary and fully secured by ample stock of high-grade salable merchandise.

INDUCEMENT

Large margin of profit, mail and magazine advertising. Free service of factory experts, etc. A dignified permanent business, conservatively estimated at $20,000 per annum.

The manufacturer's field organizer, Mr. A. J. Wissel, is now at the Warwick Hotel. Phone Olive 6190 after 12 p. m. noon Sunday and all day Monday and Tuesday for appointment. All details will be submitted and rigid investigation invited.

ANSWERS TO QUERIES

The Post-Dispatch reserves the right to reject any query. Personal and telephone calls, or answers by mail, cannot be given attention, except letters on medical questions of undoubted sincerity when accompanied by stamped addressed envelope.

A READER.—The following is Senator Vest's famous eulogy of the dog: "Gentlemen of the jury: The best friend a man has in the world may turn against him and become his enemy. The son or daughter that he reared with loving care may prove ungrateful. Those who are nearest and dearest to us, those whom we trust with our happiness and our good name may become traitors to their faith. The money that a man has he may lose. It flies away from him, perhaps when he needs it most. A man's reputation may be sacrificed in a moment of ill-considered action. The people who are prone to fall on their knees to do us honor when success is with us may be the first to throw the stone of malice when failure settles its cloud upon our heads. The one absolutely unselfish friend that man can have in this selfish world, the one that never proves ungrateful or treacherous, is his dog. A man's dog stands by him in prosperity and poverty, in health and sickness. He will sleep on the cold ground, where the wintry blasts blow and the snow drives fiercely, if only he may be near his master's side. He will kiss the hand that has no food to offer; he will lick the wounds and sores that come in encounter with the roughness of the world. He guards the sleep of the pauper master as if he were a prince. When all other friends desert he remains. When riches take wings and reputation falls to pieces he is as constant to his love as the sun in its journeys through the heavens. If fortune drives the master forth an outcast in the world, friendless and homeless, the faithful dog asks no higher privilege than that of accompanying him, to guard against danger, to fight against his enemies. And when the last scene of all comes, and death takes the master in his embrace, and his body is laid away in the cold ground, no matter if all other friends pursue their way, there by the graveside will the noble dog be found, his head between his paws, his eyes sad, but open to alert watchfulness, faithful and true, even in death."

LEGAL INFORMATION.

(By a Member of the St. Louis Bar Association.)

ANXIOUS. — First cousins are not allowed to marry in Missouri.

BUSINESS.—The statute of limitations, for a promissory note, is 10 years, not five.

EMMA.—(1) If the former owner agreed to pay the taxes for two months he can sue him for that amount.

A. C. W.—You should give the landlord one month's written notice not later than the day before the rent day.

J. W. B.—The Recorder's office is in the City Hall. If you filed a deed for record you would get it back in 60 days or thereabouts.

D. S. K.—You can include removal of the tree as one item of damage when the commissioners are appraising your damages.

M. D. T.—Kansas pays a soldiers' bonus of $? for each day of service. Write to the Adjutant-General, Topeka, Kan.

E. H.—You will have to write to the Register of Copyrights, Library of Congress, Washington, D. C., for the information.

A CONSTANT READER OF THE POST.—The law in this State permits women to work up to 9 hours in any one day, or 54 hours in any one week.

J. S. K.—Write to the Immigration Bureau, Old Custom House, Third and Olive streets, St. Louis, or to the Commissioner of Immigration, Washington, D. C., for the information.

THANKS.—You can return the stove and ask them either to give you a satisfactory stove or return the amount that you have paid. If you have any trouble consult the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

OTTO. — (1) You will have to have a merchant's license to sell the goods. Inquire at Room 102, City Hall (License Collector's office). (2) There is a great deal of litigation now pending in the courts with regard to radio patents.

OXALIC. — If the clothes were lost through any carelessness or fault of the laundry, or if the laundry made you pay a small amount per bundle for insurance (as most of them do) then you can sue the laundry and can recover the value of the clothes. You might consult the Legal Aid Bureau in the Municipal Courts building, Fourteenth and Market streets.

MEDICAL QUESTIONS.

Health and sanitation questions of public interest only will be considered. Diagnosis or treatment of individual cases will not be given.

EDNA. — Human beings do not have gizzards.

MARION. — Try a 5-grain capsule of salol every 4 hours for the gas trouble.

T. F. B.—Please repeat question, inclosing stamped, addressed envelope, for reply and try to write more legibly.

MRS. McD.—The urine should be examined for the trouble, for which there is, of course, some cause.

MR. L.—The deafness and other conditions evidently are caused by some nerve injury as a result of the fall.

T. F.—We do not advise the use of drugs in reducing superfluous flesh, except under the direction of a physician.

S. I. S.—The nearest free clinic to your home is at Grand and Caroline. They will make a thorough examination.

SEEKING RELIEF.—If you cannot afford to pay, consult the clinic at 10 a. m. (excepting Sunday) 1605 South Fourteenth street.

4340J.—We do not know the preparation you refer to, but we advise against purchasing any substance if such claims are made for it.

A POST DEADER.—An examination should be had to determine whether the trouble is local or constitutional. Treatment is directed accordingly. The following is a very cleansing douche: Equal parts of salt, sugar and cooking soda. Mix thoroughly.

MISS D.—Pin worms may occur at any age. They do not indicate any other trouble. Take a powder of one grain of calomel and one grain of santonin night and morning until bowels are distinctly affected. Locally at bed time use and retain a 4-ounce enema of lime water or salt water.

NEW HIGH CIRCULATION RECORDS

In February, 1925, the Daily Post-Dispatch established the highest circulation record in its entire history, reaching a NET PAID average of 235,198 for week days only. This does not include the Big NET PAID Sunday Circulation of 377,610.

No other newspaper in America, in a city of over 500,000 population—with one exception, the News, in Detroit—covers its city and suburbs as completely as the Post-Dispatch covers the St. Louis market.

Only ONE newspaper—the Post-Dispatch—completely covers St. Louis and the St. Louis market, which makes CONCENTRATION of advertising both advisable and profitable.

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, George Thomas Shropshire, who departed this life two years ago, March 22, 1923. Sadly missed by wife and son.
MRS. D. SHROPSHIRE AND SON.

In loving memory of our dear daughter and sister, Grace Daly, who departed this life March 23, 1924.
Sadly missed, but not forgotten, by her
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Eva Dreyer, who departed this life March 19, 1923, but in our hearts you linger still.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND AND CHILDREN. (c)

In loving memory of my dear husband Jacob Riehert who died March 21, 1922.
Flowers I lay upon your grave,
Will wither and decay,
But my love for your who sleep beneath
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by WIFE.

In sad but loving memory of my dear sister, Nettie Frank Paulus who passed into the great beyond on March 21, 1919:
The flowers laid upon your grave
Will wither and decay,
But the love for you who sleeps beneath
Will never fade away.
Sadly missed by BROTHER. (c)

In loving memory of our dear daddy, Emil Faerber, who died March 21, 1923:
When evening shades are falling,
And we are all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If our dear daddy could come home.
WIFE AND DAUGHTER.

In loving memory of our dear parents, Wilhelmina and John Lerbs, who passed on March 11, 1922 and April 11, 1922.
Dear mother and father:
As time goes on we miss you more;
Your loving smiles, your loving faces;
There is none that can fill your places.
Sadly missed by their CHILDREN.

In loving memory of my dear sister, Ella Michel, who departed this life one year ago, March 20, 1924.
Gone, dear Ella, gone forever;
How I miss your loving face;
But you left me to remember,
None can ever fill your place.
Sadly missed by her SISTERS.

In loving memory of my beloved daughter and our dear sister, Agnes E. Winters, who departed this life eight years ago, March 20, 1917:
Just a line of sweet remembrance,
Just a memory fond and true;
Just a token of love's devotion
That our hearts still long for you.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER, SISTERS AND BROTHERS.

In loving memory of our dear mother, mother-in-law and grandmother, Elizabeth Stippel-Allen, who departed this life March 19, 1920:
You are gone but not forgotten,
And never shall you be,
As long as life and memory lasts,
We will remember thee.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTERS AND SONS.

In loving memory of my dear mother, Minnie Altenhein, who departed this life March 22, 1920.
Peaceful be thy sleep, dear mother,
'Tis sweet to breathe your name.
In life I loved you dearly,
In death I do the same.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTER, ERNA MUELLER.

In memory of our dear mother, Mary Heer, who departed this life one year ago, March 23, 1924:
She bade no one a last farewell;
She said good-by to none;
Her loving heart has ceased to beat;
And before we knew it she was gone;
So rest in peace, dear mother;
You're safe in heaven's bower;
The day that we shall meet you again
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
DAUGHTERS AND SON.

In loving remembrance of our dear wife and mother, Rose Moore (nee Moran), who departed this life March 24, 1922.
Three years ago this winter,
In a cold and lonely grave
Wife and mother we loved so dear
We sadly laid away.
She sleeps among the angels,
And with the angels may she rest;
But we never can forget her,
For 'twas we who loved her best.
Sadly missed by FAMILY.

In loving memory of our darling daughter Margaret Cavanaugh, who departed this life three years ago March 23, 1922:
Gone dear daughter, gone forever.
How we miss your loving face.
But you left us to remember
None can ever fill your place.
When evening shadows are falling
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing
If Margaret could only come home.
Sadly missed by
MOTHER AND SON AND ALL WHO LOVED HER.

In loving memory of our darling daughter and dear sister, Berenice Moran, who departed this life one year ago, March 21, 1924:
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by her
PARENTS, SISTERS AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of our darling daughter, Evelyn Loddeke, who departed this life one year ago, March 22, 1924:
Gone, dear daughter, gone forever;
How we miss your loving face.
But you left us to remember
None can ever fill your place.
When evening shadows are falling,
And we are sitting all alone,
To our hearts there comes a longing,
If Evelyn could only come home.
Sadly missed by mother, father, grandparents, uncles, aunts, cousins and a dear friend.

In loving memory of our dear husband and father, Herbert V. Bock of 4407A Clayton avenue, who passed away one year ago March 18, 1924:
When the evening shade has fallen,
And we are all alone.
In our hearts there comes a longing
If you only could come home.
No one knows the silent heartache;
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief that is borne in silence
For one we loved so well.
Sadly missed by
WIFE AND CHILDREN. (c)

In memory of John Bakersmith, who died March 21, 1924:
You are gone but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be,
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last,
And held your dying hand
And heard the last sighs from your heart,
We would not feel so bad.
We did not know the pains you had;
We did not see you die.
We know you only went away, and never said good-by.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, WIFE, SISTER AND BROTHER.

In loving memory of my beloved husband and our dear father, Herman A. Rauch, 5007 Plover avenue, who passed away one year ago March 20, 1924:
When the evening shade has fallen
And we are all alone.
In our heart there comes a longing
If you only could come home
No one knows the silent heartaches,
Only those who have lost can tell
Of the grief that is born in silence
For one we love so well.
Sadly missed by
WIFE, CHILDREN AND GRANDCHILDREN.

IN MEMORIAM

In loving memory of Fred Hickwolf Jr., who departed this life just one year ago.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER, SISTERS, BROTHERS, NIECES AND NEPHEWS. (c)

In loving memory of Mrs. Lucy Lohmann, wife and mother, who departed from this earth, March 25, 1924, at 11 a. m.
A precious one from us has gone
A voice we loved is still
A place is vacant in our home
That never can be filled.
A loving mother, true and kind
No friend on earth, like her we'll find.
God called her home,
It was his wil,
But in our hearts
She lingers still.
Sadly missed by
HUSBAND, DAUGHTER, FRIENDS.

In loving memory of our dear mother, Mrs. T. R. Laffwell, who departed this life two years ago, March 17, 1923:
A rose that is sweetest and fairest in the end is killed by the frost;
And that flower that is dearest and nearest is the darling mother.
Two years ago we lost. What is home without a mother?
Sad and lonely in every way, mother dear, our love will always linger around the grave where you are laid.
Sadly missed by your children.
LOYD PROCTOR, JOE PROCTOR, MRS. NORA NALLEY, MRS. JANE IRWIN AND MRS. DOROTHY WILLIAMS. (c)

In sad and loving memory of our dear wife and mother, Virginia Harper, who departed this life one year ago March 21, 1924:
The precious one from us is gone;
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our heart that never can be filled.
You are gone, but not forgotten,
Nor shall you ever be as long as life and memory lasts.
We shall remember thee.
Sadly missed by
CLIFFORD HARPER, HUSBAND AND BABY VIRGINIA AND HARDING FAMILY.

In loving memory of our dear sister and daughter, Catherine Kraemer, who departed from us one year ago today, March 22, 1924:
You are gone, but not forgotten;
Nor shall you ever be
As long as life and memory last
We shall remember thee.
If we had seen you at the last and held your dying hand
And heard the last sighs from your heart, we would no feel so bad.
We did not know the pains you had; we did not see you die.
We know you only went away, and never said good-by.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, BROTHER, SISTERS, AUNT and all who loved her.

In loving remembrance of our dear daughter and sister, Catherine L. Hussmann, who departed this life March 25, 1924.
The golden sun is shining
Upon our Catherine's grave,
The one we loved so dearly
And tried so hard to save.
And when we lost our Catherine,
We lost our dearest pal—
We love you and we miss you
And forever shall.
So rest in peace, dear Catherine,
You're safe in heaven's bower.
The day when we shall meet you
Grows nearer every hour.
Sadly missed by
FATHER, MOTHER AND SISTERS.

SALESMEN WANTED

WANTED
CAPABLE SALESMEN WITH GOOD PERSONALITIES.
One of the largest automobile manufacturers, with a rapidly increasing business seeks the best grade of factory representatives—men who are not only superior salesmen, but also superior men, both mentally and physically—men able to do business with the best class of business men and their bankers, having initiative, resourcefulness and persistence to secure and maintain for their concern the highest class connections. To such men we can offer the best compensation paid for this class of work, plus those opportunities for important promotions the go with fast growing concerns. Automobile experience desirable, but not essential. Address in confidence, with full particulars about yourself. Box J-272, Post-Dispatch. (c99)

A $10,000 JOB.
DO YOU FIT IT?
Don't waste your time on this ad if you haven't directed salesmen, or are unwilling to back your own ability with a $1000 investment (to be used for materials and to finance your work). This money comes back quickly, as you employ other men. If you measure up to these two qualifications, we can offer you a permanent contract anywhere in the U. S. A. worth real money. To men who prove up we will give exclusive territory on the strongest educational selling proposition in the land; one which has no real competition. You can work 10 or more men, earning $50 or more weekly on the services of each. This is not a dream or a fairy tale; the system is a ready seller because men and women can see the value immediately. If you can keep your head under unusually prosperous conditions, write a short letter telling us the facts about your sales experience. All communications regarded in strictest confidence and opened only by the Director of Sales, who will arrange a personal interview. Box A-310, Post-Dispatch.

We Paved the Way

By a tremendous advertising campaign both through national periodicals and direct-by-mail. As a result our salesmen are making from $300 to $900 a week, because our proposition allows merchants an unlimited amount of profit in addition to increased business.

We are now opening two states to salesmen with good clean records, between the age of 30 and 45, of a higher type who are able to talk facts to the merchants on an article ranging from $800 to $3000 in price. Who knows they can get it when they see that others are getting it on a 20 per cent commission in guaranteed territory.

If you are above the average you will find this proposition to your liking, as it means real money to a real man.

Call 10 a. m. to 12 m, 2 p. m. to 4 p. m. Monday only. Chas. Allen, 218 Victoria Bldg.

A SALESMAN SEEKING PERMANENT CONNECTION WORTH $10,000 OR MORE PER YEAR WILL FIND HERE HIS IDEAL LINE-UP.
WHO WE ARE
1.—Nationally advertised, old established, highly rated concern, the leader in its line.
2.—Field force of 100 men, the pick of the country, deal only with chief executives, highly dignified ethical work.
3.—Business never has dull periods or off season. Volume increased 33⅓ per cent so far in 1925 over same period last year. (Not stock, real estate, books or insurance.)
4.—All our executives, including president, were recruited from fiedl sales force.
WHAT WE DO FOR THE RIGHT MAN.
1.—Give thorough inside and field training, insuring immediate big earnings first day, first week, first month.
2.—Contract covers large territory with innumerable prospects on exclusive basis, and provides renewal sales on full commission.
3.—Pay liberal straight commission with weekly and monthly settlement.
4.—Extraordinary co-operation, sales helps, special bonuses, insuring fullest development and earnings.
THE TYPE OF MAN WE SEEK.
A man between the ages of 30 and 45 who has record for closing contracts in one interview.
Must be accustomed to big earnings; must have the dignity and force of personality to interview chief executives.
If you are willing to give detailed record your selling experience past five years, viz: what you've sold, what class of people you sold, amount average sale, basis of remuneration, whether salary or commission, earnings in 1924 (no need to mention names of companies) we will be glad to have one of our executives interview you at early date providing you qualify. Address Seth Seiders Incorporated, Attention J. R. Ludwig, 155-165 East Superior st., Chicago, Ill. (c)

ATTENTION SALESMEN!
ST. LOUIS BOOMING

Our statisticians have checked more than 500 news items, also building records, and we have now published a book showing names and dates of announcements of buildings totaling more than

$1,357,000,000

of new construction which will be made in St. Louis within 10 years from passage of the $88,000,000 bond issue 2 years ago.

This means a mighty St. Louis is building right now. It means a city doubling its population.

We have just purchased and are starting to sell another $2,000,000 subdivision for duplexes for 2 families.

Salesmen are now selling Pershing Heights for apartments, where $600,000 of construction is under full swing.

This is a wonderful business, where large earnings can be made legitimately.

Everyone should be buying good St. Louis property now and share in the profits being made.

Everyone in St. Louis knows of street after street, especially in the West End, where lots have doubled in value the past 2 to 3 years.

St. Louis has only begun to grow.

This is a good opening for a few experienced men. It may be your real opening.

Davis Realty & Mortgage Company
Owners and Developers of 24 St. Louis' Best Subdivisions.

JORDAN COACH
And you can have this unusual car at practically your own price. It's a $2175 car that ought to bring $1000. Special olive green finish, white wire wheels; perfect quiet motor, no vibration; a lalapaloosa of a dream. Yahlem only asks $750 on terms; no red tape. 1035 N. Grand.

HOW OFTEN DO YOU SEE THIS?
A Jordan coach is a rarity on the used-car market. This particular one is a knockout. It belonged to a rich club member and received the best attention. It's cheap at a thousand dollars, but as usual Yahlem knocks the price down; $750 today to the first buyer. 1035 N. Grand.

IT BELONGS TO YOU

OUR REPUTATION belongs to you because it is your opinion of us. For twenty years we have worked to build an institution that would be worthy of your confidence.

TWO-THIRDS of all our customers have bought used cars. We must deal fair to keep on growing for twenty years to come.

A Willys-Knight or Overland bought from some other dealer is just a used car. We have a personal interest in making sure that the good Willys-Knight or Overland you get here gives lasting satisfaction.

California

CALIFORNIA FARMERS make more money on small farms in San Joaquin Valley, California, where you can work outdoors all the year. Splendid opportunities for men of moderate means; 20 and 40 acre farms produce alfalfa abundantly; dairying, hogs and poultry make good returns; staple varieties of fruits yield dependable profits; combination of these means a well-balanced farm with good income throughout the year; winterless California offers much to the man looking for a country where he can get the most out of life. Climate delightful; long growing seasons; wonderful roads; excellent schools; co-operative marketing associations afford profitable outlets for all produce. A small one-family farm, cutting out high labor costs, insures success. No winter handicaps. San Joaquin Valley illustrated folder mailed free on request. C. L. Seagraves, General Colonization Agent, Santa Fe Ry., 946 Railway Exchange, Chicago, Ill. (cx99)

THREE-YEAR-OLD GIRL TELLS HOW MAN SHOT HER MOTHER

Says He "Burned Her in the Face and She Went to Sleep;" Slayer Killed Himself.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

PATERSON, N. J., March 21.—Three-year-old Doris Dempsey today told the Paterson police how Robert Noonan killed her mother, Mrs. William J. Dempsey, and then ended his own life. "He got mad and burned a hole in my coat with something he had in his hand. Then he burned mother in the face with it and she went to sleep."

Doris was with her mother, wife of a hardware merchant, and Mrs. Dempsey's sister, Mrs. Thomas J. Stanton, in Noonan's automobile on the Passaic River road about 9:30 o'clock this morning. Noonan had been arguing about his attention to Mrs. Dempsey. He drew a revolver and fired one shot at the child. It pierced her coat and grazed her leg. As Mrs. Stanton seized the little girl and jumped from the car another shot sounded. It struck Mrs. Dempsey. Then Noonan placed the weapon to his temple and a moment later lay dying in the road.

Mrs. Dempsey was 23 years old and lived with her husband just opposite his hardware store. They had been married about five years. Noonan, who was 32 and a meat salesman for Wilson & Co., lived with his wife in Paterson. They had no children.

SAYS COOLIDGE MAY SNUB NORWEGIANS' CELEBRATION

"The Skandinaven" Declares He Thus Would Avenge Votes of Norbeck and Shipstead.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—That President Coolidge may show his resentment of the action of Senators Norbeck of South Dakota and Shipstead of Minnesota, who voted against the confirmation of Charles Beecher Warren, by refusing to attend the celebration of the landing of the Norwegian "Pilgrim Fathers," which is to be held at Minneapolis June 6, is a statement contained in a story published in "Skandinaven," a Norwegian newspaper, published in Chicago.

The reason for a change in the President's plans are ascribed in the Skandinaven to the fact that the invitation was extended by Senators Norbeck and Shipstead and because they had voted against the President he would not accept.

Information coming from the White House is that the President is in doubt whether he can visit the Northwest at the time of the Norwegian celebration. The reason assigned for the doubt as to the presidential movements is that the celebration of the Battle of Bunker Hill, which occurs shortly after the Minneapolis affair, has intrigued the President and he may not feel able to be absent twice from Washington within so short a time.

.U. S. TRADE BOARD WILL INVESTIGATE PRICE-FIXING

150 "Open Price Associations" Are Alleged to Be Violating Anti-Trust Law.

Special to the Post-Dispatch.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—The Federal Trade Commission will commence soon one of the most extensive inquiries ever conducted by that body.

Under the authorization of the resolution introduced by Senator McKellar (Dem.), Tennessee, at the close of the Senate session, it will go thoroughly into the subject of the "open price associations," which is another name for price-fixing association.

A previous report of the commission indicated there are about 150 of these organizations, which are alleged to be engaged in the task of fixing prices for various trades and lines of business in contravention of the anti-trust law.

According to the reports which actuated the resolution, without forming a combination of business organizations, prices are fixed for the article to be sold, territory assigned and other anti-trust practices indulged in.

The probe will dig deep into practices of this character and hundreds of witnesses will be summoned to Washington. It is expected the investigation will take up nearly a year.

COUNTY OPENS CAMPAIGN ON AUTO LICENSE DELINQUENTS

Drivers Warned to Obtain 1925 Plates at Once; Deputies Halt Violators.

Sheriff Wilmas of St. Louis County and Constable George Roth of Central Township, through their deputies, began an intensive campaign early yesterday to bring before Justices of the Peace all persons who have failed to obtain 1925 automobile licenses.

Deputies stationed at strategic points along the Clayton, Manchester, Olive Street and St. Charles roads were seen to half many motorists during the day, all of whom were notified to appear before Justices Werremeyer or Stecker.

Many of those stopped protested that they had already been notified to appear at Clayton, showing that deputies at other points were equally active. It is expected that those who have not procured licenses will be penalized by the assessment or $3 costs. Further delay may bring heavier penalties, it was said yesterday.

Seeks $5000 for Auto Crash.

Ike Howard of East St. Louis, former superintendent of the St. Clair County Home, yesterday filed suit in the Circuit Court at Belleville for $5000 damages against Charles Harrison Jr. of Belleville for injuries alleged to have been suffered in an automobile collision at Harrison and Charles streets, Dec. 24, last year.

JEWELER SLAYS ROBBER WHO RETURNED FOR SECOND TIME

Unidentified Man Carried Picture of Woman Who Preceded Him Into Store.

By the Associated Press.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., March 21.—After he had shot and killed a young man who attempted to hold him up at his jewelry store here today, John Mednikow identified photographs found in the dead man's pockets as those of a young woman who preceded the robber in entering the store. The unidentified robber had held up Mednikow a week ago.

While Mednikow was waiting on the young woman, who had asked to see rings, the young man entered and, standing behind the woman with his revolver drawn, demanded jewelry.

"You did not give me all the rings last Saturday," the robber said.

The entrance of an employe distracted the man a moment and Mednikow seized and fired his revolver, killing the man outright. The woman hastened away. She is sought by the police.

An envelope in the dead man's pocket bore the name Philip Rossman.

YOUTH, 18, HELD ON CHARGE OF POSTAGE STAMP THEFT

Prisoner Said to Have Confessed After Police Discovered Loot Hidden Under Trestle.

Emil Heimrich, 18 years old, of 17 Florida avenue, Belleville, was bound over to the St. Clair County grand jury under bond of $1000 by Magistrate Wagner on a charge of burglary and larceny.

He was arrested by the police and signed a confession that he entered the office of the Oakland Foundry Co. and stole $75 worth of postage stamps. He was employed by the company as a laborer. His father, Adolph Heimrich, a farmer on the Freeburg road, signed his bond.

After the stamp theft Heimrich is said to have buried the loot under a trestle on the Louisville & Nashville Railroad, where it was found by police.

QUITS BOARD IN PROTEST AGAINST BOY SCOUT BOOKS

Illinois Education Official Declares Literature Stirs Spirit of Militarism.

William Baer has resigned as a member of the Board of Education at Millstadt, Ill., near Belleville, because of his objection to certain books which are circulated by the school library. He raised objection at a meeting of the board to the circulation of a series of Boy Scout books because, he said, they encourage the military spirit. He also protested against several books on the World War because they refer to German atrocities.

G. E. Dagit, principal of the public schools at Millstadt, defended the books, declaring they have the indorsement of Prof. F. G. Blair, Superintendent of Public Instruction of Illinois. Other members supported the principal.

ROBBER STABS VICTIM WHO DISOBEYS "HANDS UP" ORDER

Highwayman Attempts Holdup, Then Slashes Man With Knife and Flees.

Edward Allen, 41 years old, of 4047 Kossuth avenue was stabbed in the left side and slightly wounded by a robber who attempted to hold him up at Tenth and Biddle streets at 5:45 p. m. yesterday.

When Allen failed to respond to the robber's order to hold up his hands, the man slashed him and fled.

ITALIAN ENVOY IS WELCOMED

Message From President Coolidge is Read at Luncheon for De Martino.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, March 21.—The ties that bind America and Italy was extolled by Thomas W. Lamont and James R. Angell, president of Yale University, in greeting Giacomo de Martino, new Italian Ambassador, at a luncheon the Italy-America Society gave in his honor today. A personal message from President Coolidge was read before the gathering of several hundred prominent guests including three former American Ambassadors and presidents of four universities.

President Coolidge, in his letter to the society, said in part: "I shall be pleased if, in addition to the formal welcome which I have accorded him (Signor De Martino) I may be permitted to join with the officers and members of the Italy-America Society in personal greeting and good wishes. I feel assured that through his friendly co-operation, acquaintanceship and good understanding between the people of the two countries will be preserved and, if possible, still further promoted."

COOLIDGE GUEST OF WRITERS

White House Correspondent Entertains President and Others at Dinner.

By the Associated Press.

WASHINGTON, March 21.—President Coolidge was the guest of the White House Correspondents' Association at its annual dinner tonight at the Mayflower Hotel. Other guests included Attorney-General Sargent, Postmaster-General New, Everett Sanders, secretary of the President; Senators Watson, Indiana, and Stanfield, Oregon; Speaker Longworth, Representative Bloom, New York, and John Hays Hammond.

Prof. Ebner-Rofenstein Dies.

By the Associated Press.

VIENNA, March 21.—Prof. Victor Ebner-Rofenstein, noted Austrian histologist and anatomologist, died here today at the age of 83.

BORGLUM REMODELING the FACE of the EARTH

PERHAPS Nature is jealous when a little man with his little might tries to rival her. Perhaps, as the ancients thought, there is a Fate pursuing relentlessly those who attempt to match the majesty of Nature with projects born of the scaffold, the knife and a lump of clay. Death, calamity, misfortune has rewarded the gigantic efforts of days gone by. Wrought into the famed structure of each of the Seven Wonders of the World is a tragedy. And now Mr. Borglum has attempted the eighth wonder. How does the Fate of Builders treat this bold little man?

For, if any artist ever started out to change the face of the earth, it was Gutzon Borglum. And if any spot on earth were ever suited to the erection of the eighth wonder, it was Stone Mountain, Georgia. There Borglum undertook his scheme.

PLANNED as a great memorial to the dead soldiery of the South, the Eighth Wonder of the World was to have been executed on a heroic scale. It was to extend for one mile along the convex granite face of the mountain and would have contained a thousand different figures. The mounted figure of Gen. Robert E. Lee, from the hoof of his horse to the tip of his hat, was to measure 165 feet. Behind the commander were to be equally impressive figures of Gen. Stonewall Jackson.

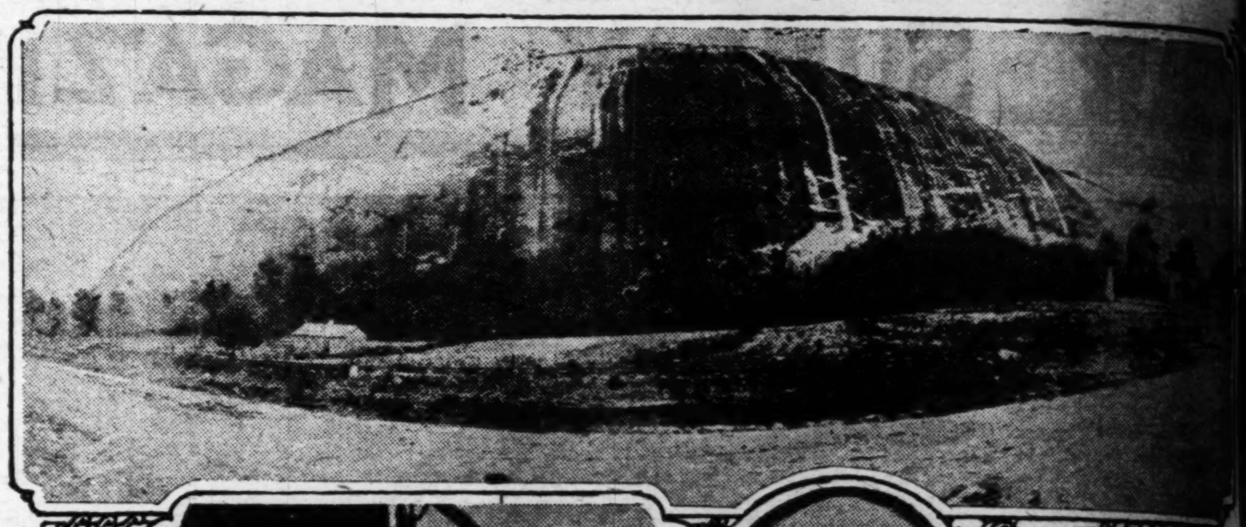
Gen. John B. Gordon, Gen. J. E. B. Stewart, Jefferson Davis, President of the Confederacy, and two or three other leaders in the Lost Cause.

The long line of marching troops was to include a body of soldiers from each of the seceding states, led by five of the most noted commanders from each state. All the figures were to be of huge size—a column of giants, forever recalling the brave men in gray who behaved so gallantly on many a hard-fought field.

Years of work and vast expenditures must have intervened, but the finished frieze undoubtedly would have been awarded a place among the greatest of all monuments and been comparable to the seven marvelous structures which amazed the ancients. Perhaps it was too ambitious a scheme—and therefore called down upon its designer's head the ill fortune which has been the portion of other great Builders, in days gone by.



Steep face of Stone Mountain, near Atlanta, Ga., upon which Borglum began carving a huge memorial to Confederate soldiers. His plans called for about 1000 figures, which were to extend in a line one mile long.

Preliminaries at Stone Mountain, 900 feet high, seven miles around its oval base and said to be the largest known monolith, were interrupted by the World War. But work was resumed in 1922, in earnest, and had been in progress until, recently, the directors of the Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial Association cancelled their contract with Borglum. The man who had designed the prospective Eighth Wonder of the World was fired.

BUT this wasn't all that the Fates had in store for Borglum. Two days later, and after models and designs for the monument were known to have been damaged, destroyed or taken away, the directors had him arrested on a charge of malicious mischief. Armed deputies patrolled Stone Mountain, and a damage suit for $50,000 was filed against Borglum in De Kalb County Superior Court, in the matter of the models.

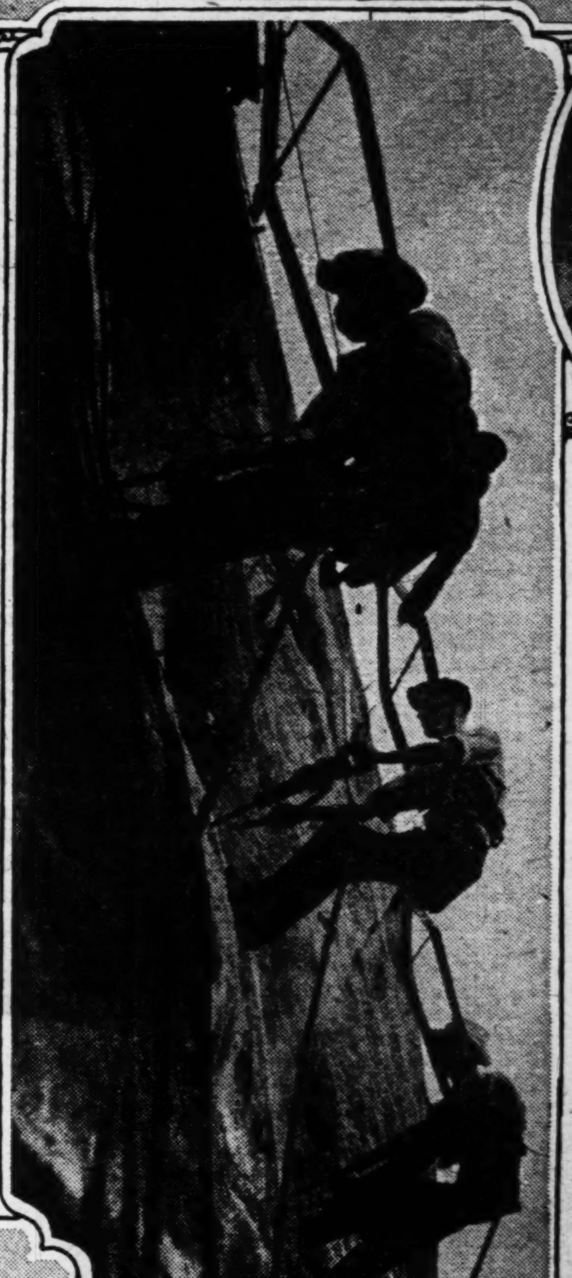
Mrs. Borglum, the sculptor's wife, said that the whole design for the memorial was developed by Borglum, and that many of the models were made before he entered into any contract.

"The design was his exclusive property, and had been copyrighted by him," declared Mrs. Borglum. "Many of the models were made in his studio at Stamford, Conn., and brought to Stone Mountain. This design belongs exclusively to Mr. Borglum, the whole conception, the whole design. Therefore, he had a perfect legal right to destroy his own property."

The sculptor's wife was bitter toward Hollins N. Randolph, president of the association. She remarked:

"It was the Hollins N. Randolph of Greece who passed a law making it a crime for a sculptor to sign his work, yet the name of Phidias has outlived the ages, while the names of those who drove him into exile have been forgotten, although their actions are remembered, even anonymously, but not with gratitude."

A predecessor of Stone Mountain. This grotesque block of stone, now used as a weight for a derrick in a stone yard, is an uncompleted statue which Borglum began, 15 years ago. It was to represent "The Spirit of the Monroe Doctrine," and was for the Pan-American Union at Washington.
—Pacific & Atlantic Photo.



Workmen at Stone Mountain, suspended in special rigs by cables from the top, and cutting away the rock with pneumatic drills. It is a dangerous task, despite all the precautions which have been taken.

Borglum declared that he had been unfairly treated, and said the record of his nine years' connection with the Stone Mountain Memorial showed that a crime had been committed in dismissing him. In a statement issued at New York he said:

"I destroyed the models for the greatest piece of sculpture in the world's history, because I believe in the right of an artist to his own creation. I am ready to rot in jail rather than yield this principle. Let the small provincial minds of my enemies contemplate the work of stone cutters or shoemakers, if they wish. I am ready for a fight."

BUT still more trouble was brewing for the man who had dared to dream out another Wonder of the World. A little later, indictments charging malicious mischief, simple larceny and larceny from the house were returned against Borglum by a grand jury of De Kalb County, and J. C. Tucker, his superintendent of construction, was indicted, too. Larceny from the house, a felony under the law of Georgia, was based upon the alleged removal of models from the studio at Stone Mountain.

Really, it began to look as though the famous Seven Wonders of the World were going to remain just seven, for an indefinite length of time. But President Randolph informed the public that work on the memorial would not be hindered seriously, and that it would be carried to completion "despite the vandalism and sabotage that has resulted in the destruction of these plans and models."

Money, money, money—this seems to have been the chief cause of woe at Stone Mountain, just as it was an overshadowing problem in connection with building some of the ancient wonders.

The directors who removed Borglum from the precarious scaffoldings, the slings attached to steel cables and the pneumatic drills necessary in carving the huge memorial, have told their side of the story. They say that Borglum has spent or received a total of more than $180,000, that the work has been only 34 per cent completed, and that of the actual carving only a small part of Gen. Lee's head has been finished.

But Borglum's consulting engineer, Lester F. Barlow of Cleveland, maintains that the sculptor has received only $50,000 for nine years' work, and has advanced of his own money "close to $60,000."

A day or two before Borglum's contract was cancelled, he had stated in Washington that no funds remained for carrying on the work, and that the association created to promote it, "had shrunk into a local habitation with scarcely a name."

HERE, then, is the tragedy of Stone Mountain, the vast adornment of which was to be another Wonder of the World. The artist who designed it and who had said that he would devote the remainder of his life to the task, has been discharged. There still is a chance that those granite warriors may yet emerge from the living rock of the mountain side, a solid mile of pomp, their figures never to be effaced nor their glory forgotten, as long as the world endures.

But what of the man whose dream they had been, first of all? Discharged, arrested, sued for damages, indicted for a felony. Verily, the Fate of the Builders seems to have marked him for its own. Again and again, in the course of thousands of years, mischance or defeat or death itself has been the ultimate wages of their genius and toil.

It should be remembered that, though Borglum first was called to Stone Mountain by a local chapter, United Daughters of the Confederacy, he and his friends insist that the conception of the far-flung design was Borglum's exclusively. And with the dismal failure of this artist's ambitious hope in mind, it is curious to note the tragedies which have darkened the history, real and legendary, of the seven ancient Wonders of the World—not the accidental deaths of obscure workmen nor the hardships imposed upon subject peoples, but the misfortunes which in case after case overtook the Builders.

the Seven Wonders. At various times through the centuries it has been defaced in the quest of building stone, but its vast bulk remains today practically intact except for the outside layer of smooth, polished stone which once encased it.

Cheops wanted the finest tomb which ever had been built upon earth, in which his body might rest in security through the ages. As reared originally, it reached a height of 481 feet, or 150 feet higher than the dome of St. Paul's Cathedral, or nearly twice as high as the Flatiron Building in New York. It covered 13 acres of ground and was a perfect square, measuring 756 feet on each side. To walk about the base is a stroll of more than half a mile. It is estimated that the pyramid contains 2,300,000 blocks of stone, averaging five feet in length, two feet in height and two and one-half tons in weight.

One of the first acts of Cheops, the ambitious builder, was to close the temples throughout Egypt, so that throngs of priests and temple attendants joined the ranks of the workers. It is said that there were 300,000 strong men in Egypt, and that every one of them, as if he were a slave, was forced to labor for the King. The workmen were divided into three relays of 100,000 men, and each relay was compelled to labor for three months in turn. Their only recompense was food and clothing, scantily supplied. Taskmasters, with whips in hand, were there to urge them on.

The total cost to Cheops and the nation of this tremendous tomb probably never will be known. Herodotus states that a sum equivalent to $1,000,000 was expended upon radishes, onions and garlic for the laborers. At any rate, long before the tomb had been completed, the King's treasury was empty. He tried every expedient to raise the necessary funds, but the resources of Egypt were exhausted. It is even told in ancient writings that Cheops sacrificed his own daughter, Hentsen, for money needed near the end of the work.

Says the book, "The Seven Wonders of the Ancient World," by Edgar J. Banks, Ph. D.: "Cheops so grievously oppressed his people that when he died they refused to bury him in his wonderful tomb; his hated name was never spoken aloud; even after centuries had passed the people called the great tomb 'The Pyramid of Philetion,' because a poor shepherd of that name used to graze his sheep about its base."

A lifetime, almost, of care and trouble and anxiety about his tomb, and then denial of admission to it after all—that was the tragedy of Cheops, victim of the Fate of Builders.

SECOND on their list of Wonders of the World, the ancient writers put the Walls of Babylon, so long and wide and high that all who saw them were amazed. Built of brick and earth by Nabopolassar, King of Babylon, and his son, Nebuchadnezzar, they were fortified by towers and roomy enough at the top for several chariots to be driven abreast. Besides outer and inner walls for the defense of the city, several more surrounded the great palace of Nebuchadnezzar. The heights of these various walls have been estimated at figures ranging all the way from 165 to 335 feet.

The walls made Babylon absolutely impregnable, a fact which brought tragedy to King Narbonidus and his son, Belshazzar, of the Bible story. Besieged by Cyrus and a host of Persians in 538 B. C., the Babylonians felt themselves perfectly secure. Stored in the city was enough food for several years, the Euphrates flowed through the city, the walls could not pos-

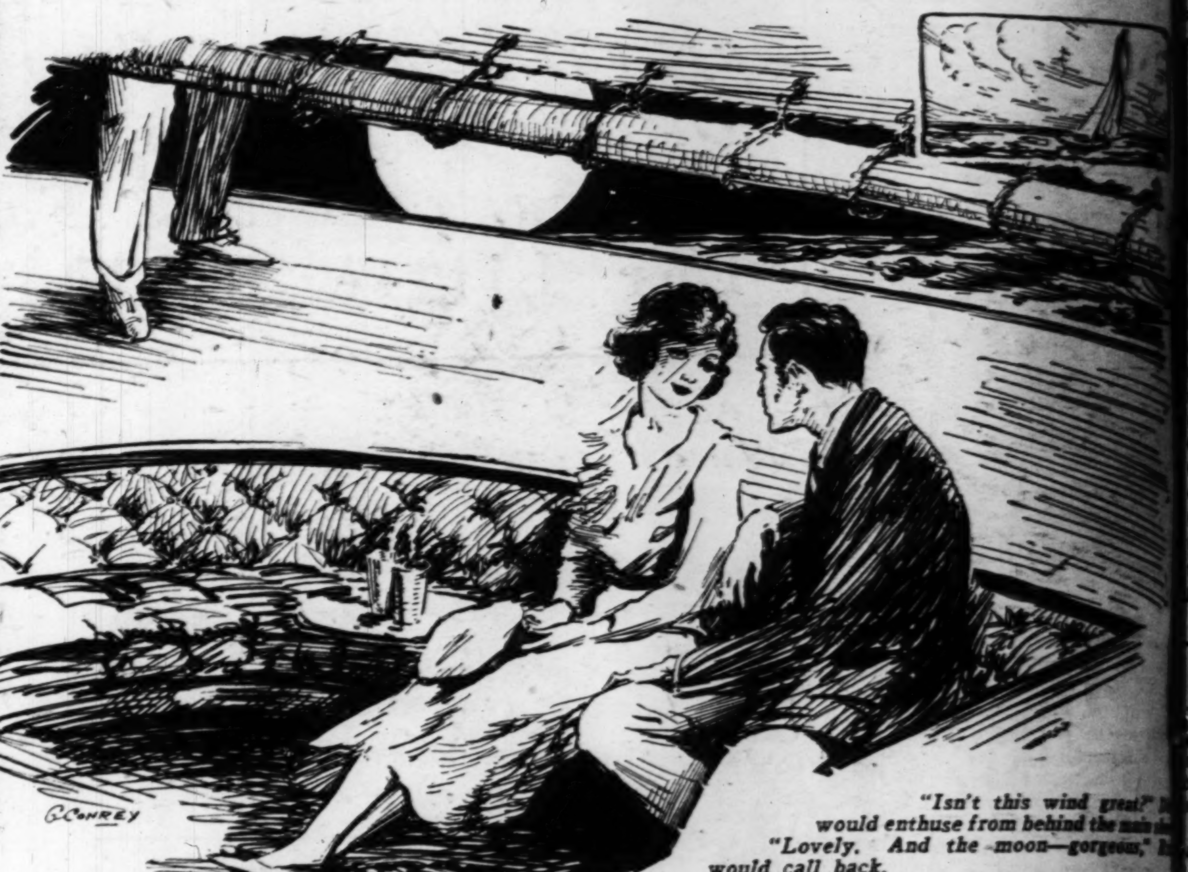
Mrs. "Peggy" Tomkinson—she who was given up.



"Isn't this wind great?" D[illegible] would enthuse from behind the main sh[illegible] "Lovely. And the moon—gorgeous," B[illegible] would call back.

Here is the story of the man who gave up his wife—GRACEFULLY. And it didn't Work!

By FREDERICK H. BRENNAN.

GOOD old Dick Tomkinson. He didn't suspect a thing. Not one of those nosey husbands who go poking about asking questions of their wives, such as: "You're seeing a great deal of that fellow, aren't you, dear?" There wasn't a jealous streak in him, apparently.

So Mrs. Dick Tomkinson and Bradford Hill Whiting, Chicago multi-millionaire, saw each other, frequently. In fact, good old Dick fell in with their plans without a murmur. By George, he'd go along! He liked Brad Whiting and could see why his wife liked him. Too bad Mrs. Bradford Whiting was such a frost. The four of them could make a round of bridge when things got dull. But, anyway, Brad Whiting was all right. It would be a threesome.

The three of them started going around together last summer. Tomkinson, a prominent Chicago advertising man, belonged to the Chicago Yacht Club, and so did Whiting. Both were very keen on yachts. Mrs. Tomkinson liked yachts, too. But Mrs. Whiting always got bored during the last miles, so that left her out of it again. In a way this was a blessing. Brad Whiting's cocktail shaker held just three big ones. One for Dick and one for Peggy and one for Brad.

CHICAGO friends watched the triangle as best they could, but it moved fast and covered considerable territory. When Whiting was not entertaining the Tomkinsons on his yacht, the Alpha, the Tomkinsons were entertaining him on their sloop. Last July Tomkinson and Whiting sailed together on the schooner Wendemeer in the Mackinac race, annual classic of the Chicago Yacht Club. Here was a man-to-man association which made their friendship stronger. "Dick," Whiting would say, "your wife is a glorious creature." And Dick would reply: "Being a friend, you're a trifle prejudiced, but I'll admit, she is."

The Tomkinsons and Whiting would sail all about the lakes on their trips together. Dick—always the best of soldiers, Brad said—usually attended to sailing the boat, while Brad and Peggy just sat. Brad was not in good health, anyway, his spine hurt him. Perhaps Brad and Peggy talked about his spine, perhaps of other things.

"Isn't this wind great?" Dick would enthuse from behind the main sheet.

"Lovely. And the moon—gorgeous," Brad would call back.

Mrs. Whiting — she didn't approve.

Dick Tomkinson—who surrendered his wife to a friend.

BETWEEN parties, of course, Whiting was looking after his interests in the Whiting Corporation and the Grindle Fuel Equipment Co., manufacturers of cranes and foundry equipment. But a man with a weak spine cannot be expected to concentrate on cranes—they make his back ache just to watch.

Tomkinson, too, worked at intervals in his advertising agency, making money so that his wife could entertain Brad Whiting in a way worthy of a multi-millionaire. They exchanged visits frequently; Whiting would come to the Tomkinsons at 526A Surf street, and the Tomkinsons would return the call at Whiting's own apartment on East Delaware Place. There were theater parties and supper dances.

Mrs. Tomkinson and Whiting found the third member of their threesome a handy fellow to have around. He saw to calling the car and got the theater tickets and provided that chaperonage so necessary to properly conducted affairs along the North Shore. True, the more provincial gossipers in the earlier settled sections of Sheridan road asked each other: "Can't Dick Tomkinson see what is going on under his nose?" But society mostly agreed: "Well, he's stealing right in front of the man's eyes. Nothing can be fairer than that."

THINGS were drifting along [illegible] itously. Whiting began to [illegible] sider an end of the three[illegible] After all, he reflected, three [illegible] crowd, and if the third happens [illegible] be a husband, the crowd might [illegible] come a mob. He must be cauti[illegible] and subtle, but firmly drop good [illegible] Dick overboard. Then there w[illegible] only be Mrs. Whiting to deal w[illegible]

He believed she would give [illegible] trouble. Her attitude during [illegible] husband's courtship of Mrs. T[illegible] kinson had, on the whole, been [illegible] mirable. Naturally, she had [illegible] bad days and showed pique, [illegible] considering everything, she had [illegible] cepted the situation encouragi[illegible] When the Christmas season [illegible] proached she left Chicago for [illegible] Orleans, and her husband felt [illegible] had tacitly agreed to a divorce [illegible] her very departure. If a wife w[illegible] to keep her husband at all she [illegible] not leave him in Chicago for [illegible] Christmas season, Whiting r[illegible] oned.

New Year's Eve Whiting and [illegible] Tomkinsons had a wild party. On Jan. 7 th[illegible] planned another just like it at Whiting's apartm[illegible] When the champagne gave out Whiting and [illegible] guests—there were 16 in all—went to Chez Pier[illegible] a cabaret, where Whiting was informed the ch[illegible] pagne never gave out. There they revelled [illegible] dawn.

Being in no condition to return to his own a[illegible] ment, Whiting was taken to theirs by good [illegible] Dick and wife. Tomkinson, when they got in, [illegible] feeling like more of a husband than usual. He [illegible] jected to his wife's attitude toward their fr[illegible] Brad.

The time had come.

"DICK, my friend," said Whiting, "I am g[illegible] to do the square thing. I love your wife. [illegible] I have her?"

Tomkinson admits that for just a moment he [illegible] angry. But only for a moment; it must have b[illegible] that last chaser and the morning sunlight. Th[illegible] his head fogged nicely and he felt more genial. [illegible]

"Take her, Brad!" he said. "But do, please, [illegible] a divorce from your wife. I'll be glad to acc[illegible] modate my wife with a divorce."

"There's one thing more," Peggy reminded th[illegible] "What about Brad's wife? Will she do the ri[illegible] thing?"

"Of course she will," said Whiting. "She'll [illegible] vorce me and I'll marry you, and all will be [illegible]

But Mrs. Bradford Whiting did not do the ri[illegible] thing. She has just filed suit for separate m[illegible] tenance. Separate maintenance does not mean [illegible] vorce. It means that good old Dick Tomkinson g[illegible] up his wife for no good reason. It means that B[illegible] Whiting can't get rid of his for any reason. A[illegible] it insinuates that Mrs. Whiting is more [illegible] under the impression that she married for keeps.

And that ends it—this little Chicago roma[illegible]

"Well, I've done my part," says good old D[illegible] "Isn't she mean?" says Peggy. "I'm not th[illegible] with them yet," says Mrs. Whiting. "Awfully [illegible] for the spine," says Brad—and he has retired [illegible] comfortable hospital already.

"Impossible," they said. "The only thing to do is to blow her to pieces."

HOW the Italians performed that impossibility is told by David Masters, in one of the most interesting chapters of his new book, "The Wonders of Salvage" (Dodd, Mead & Co.). To Gen. Ferrati, chief of the Italian naval constructors, belongs the credit for the plan which was followed, after experiment with miniature models of the Leonardo da Vinci and intricate calculations.

Work began in the spring of 1917, when divers helped to unburden the ship by recovering and hoisting up to lighters nearly a thousand 12-inch shells, 3000 4.7-inch shells, some torpedoes, thousands of explosive charges and hundreds of tons of other ammunition, without mishap.

First, temporary patches were riveted over the great rents in the hull. As soon as the divers had made several compartments water-tight, the salvors began pumping air into the sunken vessel. As the volume of air increased, it forced the water out of the hull, finally to a point 26 feet below the surface of the sea outside. Then men were able to enter the hull, through an air-lock, and take out her stores and coals.

It was evident that, even if the ship were floated upside-down, she would require 50 feet of water. And there was not a sufficient depth along the mile and a half which she would have to be taken to the dry dock, which itself was only 40 feet deep. This difficulty was met by detaching the funnels, which had cut down through a bed of mud 30 feet thick to a bed of clay, the gun-turrets and other top hamper from the deck of the vessel, in such a way that they might be recovered later. The open spaces in the deck were covered over and made water-tight and scores of tons of cork were packed into the vessel to

The Shadow

But as the Sand Devils Whirled and Screamed The Police Found the Trail to His Lair

By ELEANORE BROWNE.
(Noted Authority on Crime and Criminals.)

IF YOU will speak to Monsieur Luis Dorgeles, Inspector-Superintendent of Special Police, Department of the Maritime-Alpes, which guards the safety of visitors to the South of France, and say to him—

> It is said, Monsieur, that you have solved many baffling crimes and that in your records there are accounts of great achievements. What one of these gives greatest honor to the police of France?

—why, Monsieur Dorgeles, who is a pleasant man, with a manner of bowing low, from the hips when it is a woman who address him, will remind you of that matter of Louget, the Bluebeard, who married three wives in a week and killed them all, or of the robbery at Cartier's, the jewelers, when the thieves were caught at sea, and he will add, modestly:

"It was permitted that I, Dorgeles, should be destined to bring the Bluebeard and the diamond thieves to justice. They were my greatest accomplishments."

THEN you will say, of course: "But, Monsieur Dorgeles! Is there not something written in your records of the beautiful Yvonne Feraud, and the "Black Shadow," and the killing of Huge Brock and Frederick Scott, the Englishman?"

And Monsieur Louis Dorgeles, Inspector-Superintendent, will rise from his chair and cross himself very reverently; he will bow low, from the hips, and say to you:

"Ah, yes! It is written in the records. But it was not I, Dorgeles, who solved the matter of Yvonne Feraud and The Shadow. It was Providence, and not the police, who brought the sand devils to dance around the lightning flowers and solve the murder of Messieurs Brook and Scott!"

And so, with an apertif, or a cognac, perhaps, to give a flavor to the memory of his great case, Inspector-Superintendent Dorgeles will draw himself forward in his accustomed chair, at a little table in front of the Cafe de Paris, in Monte Carlo, and tell you how the Sand Devils and the Lightning Flowers brought The Black Shadow to the gallows in the prison yard at Marseilles.

STRANGE as it may seem, a murder does not shock the police of Europe so deeply as does robbery. When a life is taken there is nothing to recover—only justice to give. When Commissioner Alfred Keffer, director of the Police Judiciary of Brussells, issued the bulletin which notified the police of other continental capitals, and Scotland Yard, that an Englishman, Hugh Brook, had been found murdered in a cottage on the banks of the picturesque Louvain Canal, just outside the St. Rombold gate to the City of Brussels, machinery went into motion, but only automatically. Perhaps, even, many police shoulders were unconcernedly shrugged.

But with the next bulletin from the office of Commissioner Keffer, matters took a different turn. Hugh Brock had been possessed of much money. He had come from Australia to England, bringing the cash he had received for a prosperous ranch. He had recently transferred his money from the London bank to a Brussels bank, and had then withdrawn it. More than $100,000. It was gone!

Ah! That is different.

"HE WAS accompanied in the cottage on the Louvain road," Commissioner Keffer's second bulletin read, "by a very attractive young woman, believed to be French. It is understood they were not married; otherwise their sojourn in the detached cottage might more properly be called a honeymoon. The pair had made preparations for their departure, having notified the owners that they would soon relinquish the house. It is understood they intended going to Ostend. Servants report overhearing much conversation having to do with gambling and the prospects of great winnings. The woman disappeared during the night of the crime. The body was found in her boudoir, with knife wounds. Servants report that Mademoiselle received a visitor, a man, of tall, slender frame, with whom she held clandestine conversations. This visitor was hidden in the house, the servants believe, for several days, his requirements served by Mademoiselle's own hands."

But there are many pretty Mademoiselles in France, and many tall, dark, mysterious men, of whom nothing more is known than that they are suspected of intrigues with the Mademoiselles. Much additional information was gathered, but the girl Hugh Brock loved very much had vanished.

THEN President Richter of the Berlin police sent out a bulletin of his own. Frederick Scott, also an Englishman, and one who had come into money, was found dead—"in a rented villa on the Konig-traffe road," in the shadow of the Potsdam Palace. He also had been enamored of a young woman, a "beautiful French girl," who had gone vivaciously about her daily tasks of rearranging the old heavy furniture in the villa which once had been the home of a German Colonel in the Death Head Hussars. The servants liked their French mistress very much, despite her nationality. She confided to them that the people of her country did not strafe the people of theirs so much as they supposed. Which pleased the German fraus and frauleins, and the ancient gardener. They closed their eyes respectfully when they discovered that Mademoiselle occasionally slipped downstairs, long after midnight, to admit a tall, dark-faced stranger, to whom she whispered among the shadows of the heavily draped drawing room.

But veteran Inspectors of Police, such, for example, as Inspector-Superintendent Dorgeles, recalled other mysterious affairs in which there had figured a Mademoiselle and her shadow—a tall, black-browed man, who flitted about her in the night. And, always, there had been much money, or jewels, missing. It was Inspector Dorgeles who dubbed the "unseen" as The Shadow, and all other Inspectors agreed with him that Europe harbored a new and dangerous criminal, who used the most sinister of all accomplices, a young and pretty woman, and who had adopted for his crest the slogan, "dead men tell no tales."

IT WAS Inspector Dorgeles who hurried into Monaco when it was reported from there that a money-spending foreigner, an American of much wealth, who played heavily at the Casino gambling tables, had come to certain unpleasant conclusions about a young lady whose wistful eyes had fascinated him.

The Monaco police added to their message to Inspector Dorgeles: "It is an affair that reminds us of The Shadow."

The American's information was startling. He had answered the call in the wistful eyes as they smiled merrily at him across the roulette tables in the Casino. The owner of the eyes was most charming. Ah, yes! She had told him of a confederate among the croupiers, and had persuaded him to draw heavily upon his funds for one grand round of play, at which, she had said, he would double his money! "Oh, la, la, M'sieur! Many, many times you will double it! Then you shall give me a handsome present, yes?"

While he counted the money at mid-evening in the little library of the house set back in a garden

Here is "The Shadow," master-criminal hunted by police of every European city.

The beautiful Yvonne Feraud, who lost her nerve when the Sand Devils danced—and betrayed her murderer-husband.

In the disguise of an Arab tribesman—"The Shadow" when he was finally caught.

Inspector Luis Dorgeles, French Superintendent of Police, who solved the mystery and got his man.

where the young mademoiselle with the captivating eyes made her home, he felt a presence behind him. He leaped to his feet, just in time to see a tall, slender shape disappearing behind the door draperies. The garden grounds were dark. He could not trace the shadow. And he was sure that he had seen the glitter of a knife.

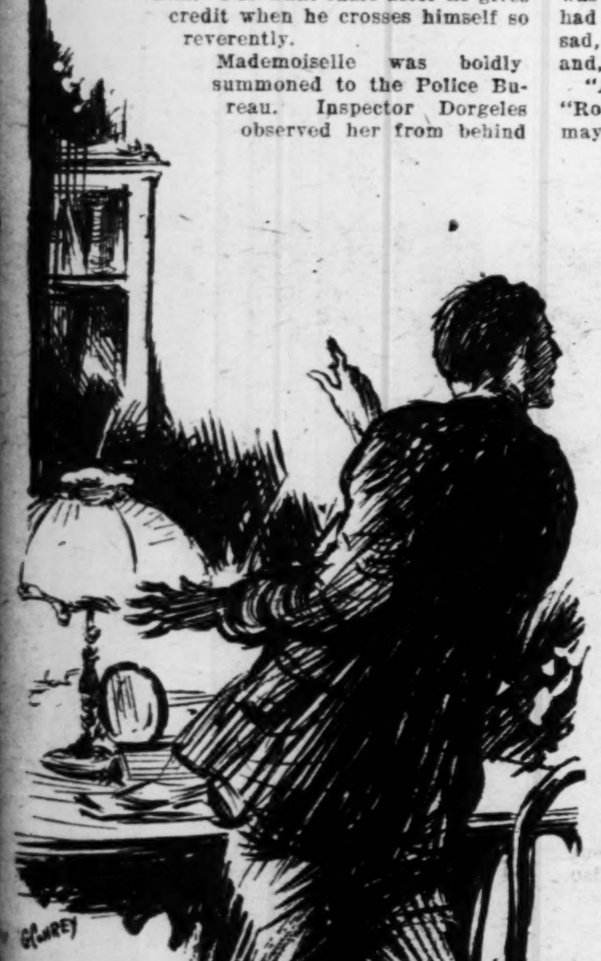
WHEN he had alarmed the mademoiselle, who was gowning for the late excursion to the gambling rooms, she became hysterical. She insisted that they go at once into the city and abandon the cottage, so that they might not again be in danger of such bold, bad intruders. With great difficulty the American calmed the little lady. She was utterly incapable of directing his play at the Casino that night. They would wait until another time.

Quietly, his suspicions aroused, the American informed the police of the incident. And, as quietly, Inspector Dorgeles was summoned from Marseilles. Mademoiselle, who had not flown, despite the sudden coldness of the American, was described to the Inspector. The one servant at the cottage was secretly examined. She had heard the cry of her mistress' guest, and had run into a hall. She was brushed aside by the intruder, who seemed to know the quickest exit into the garden. She had seen him quite plainly, for there was a hall light burning. He was tall, and very dark, and slender.

"The Shadow!" Inspector Dorgeles exclaimed. "Let us observe the Mademoiselle, carefully. It is not she we want so badly, but the one who wields the knife."

For that resolve Inspector-Superintendent Dorgeles will take modestly of credit due him. For what came after he gives credit when he crosses himself so reverently.

Mademoiselle was boldly summoned to the Police Bureau. Inspector Dorgeles observed her from behind a screen while she replied, most excitably, to the questions of the Director of the Bureau. She described the events of the evening with great exactitude.



"Feeling a Presence behind him, he leaped to his feet just in time to see a tall, slender shape disappearing behind the door draperies."

"Much damage had been done, M'sieur, even if the assassin had been frustrated, and had obtained none of Monsieur le Americaine's money. For was it not so, M'sieur, that Monsieur le Americaine, who was a very generous man, had been frightened and had withdrawn his acquaintance? That was very sad, M'sieur, for he was a most delightful suitor, and, as I have said, most generous!"

"Ah, yes!" the Director of the Bureau agreed. "Romance is a fragile thing, that even little winds may blow away in dust! I condole with you, Mademoiselle. And I congratulate you that you escaped a tragedy."

Mademoiselle smiled sweetly, much comforted, and went her way—closely followed by Inspector Dorgeles, who shared with his assistants the task of never permitting her to be out of their sight. They were within an arm's reach of her when, weeks later, Mademoiselle Yvonne Feraud, who had not been wholly satisfied with that so very agreeable interview with the Director of the Bureau of Police, boarded the little steamer which crosses the Mediterranean, from Marseilles to Algiers.

To an acquaintance, who was in the pay of the police, she had confided that she possessed a dear relative who was stationed on the desert's edge at the Oasis of Touggourt, with the Corps des Etrangers, the French Foreign Legion. Inspector Dorgeles was a passenger on the boat. He was granted permission to share a bottle of champagne with the vivacious little Mademoiselle. When he conveyed to her that he was en route to Touggourt, on business for the Government, her eyes danced at the prospect of such pleasant companionship through Algiers up to where the desert begins.

FROM the interior town of Biskra, in Algiers, to Touggourt, it is four days' journey by ramshackle stage coach. Civilization ends at Biskra. Only barbaric sons of the desert come after. Touggourt is the first oasis, and the outermost station of the Foreign Legion. During the four days in the coach Inspector Dorgeles and Mademoiselle Yvonne became good friends. She told him of a relative at the oasis, but spoke of few particulars. She preferred to talk of other things; of things that matched the sparkle in her dancing eyes. And Inspector Dorgeles is a gallant man, who, as has been said, bows low, from the hips to a woman.

At Touggourt, which is a group of Arab huts, with a rambling, one-storied hotel khan, of drab palms and sistol trees that flank the high-walled fortress, Mademoiselle Yvonne appeared to be quite unhurried to seek out her relative from among the red-jacketed soldiers of the Legion, who swagger about the narrow, dust-hung paths between the houses. She dined and lunched with her acquaintance of the boat and stage coach, and went alone for solitary strolls among the merchandise stalls and bazars. When it was arranged, by a group of tourists such as always are to be found at Touggourt, that an excursion into the desert, on camel back, should be the next adventure, Mademoiselle was happy that her friend should accompany her.

They rode far out from the oasis walls. Too far, all the others would declare; but only according to the plans that were made for The Shadow's fate, Inspector Dorgeles will contend.

SUDDENLY the white-blue of the sky changed to gray, then to violet. The army Sergeant who was in command of the party shouted a sharp command which brought the camels to a jerking stop. The menace of the skies rolled up like a gigantic wave over the horizon, blending red, purple and orange with the violet glow. The air began to hum a weird, malignant chant. A string of oaths came to the Sergeant's lips, but they were checked by a vindictive glance from the narrowed eyes of the Arab guide, warning that at such a time he would brook no offense to his Allah.

"The devils are coming to dance, master!" the guide muttered. "They come too quick for us to ride. We must stand here!"

Inspector Dorgeles moved over to the side of the girl, in whose eyes a great fright shone. From camel to camel they joined hands. The roar in the air became uncanny.

The Miser Of Beauty WhoWill

By HARRY R. BURKE.

SOMETIMES Vollard, the miser, sells a picture. Sales have made him rich. Among the hundreds of masterpieces he has stored from cellar to garret in his big, bare house in the Rue de Martignac, Paris, one painting, or a score, would not be missed.

But sales are few. Many come who would like to buy. Few are permitted to see his treasures. Fewer, indeed, may purchase. Vollard doesn't care to sell.

If arrangements have been made, weeks in advance, if the introductions have been proper, one may be given a glimpse. From the pictures standing with faces to the wall at the sides of the room, he will turn one to the light.

His eyes gleam as he exposes his treasure. But only for a moment do they rest upon the painting; instead they are appraising the visitor and his reactions.

Praise for his pictures is to Vollard the wine of life. His eyes sparkle as the visitor enthuses. They glow and flash as the determined connoisseur advances bid upon bid in an effort to obtain the treasure.

He chuckles to himself, this great bald man with shaggy brows, with tuberous nose and gray-white bristling beard; chuckles, while the price is raised, as a miser might chuckle at the clink of gold in hand.

Then he quickly turns the picture to the wall.

"It is sad, Monsieur, hein? But the picture is not for sale."

THAT is Vollard's sardonic humor. He loves his joke, as the American knows who two years ago tried to buy one of Cezanne's greatest paintings, "The Card Players."

It is a picture for which to trade one's soul. The American was not forced to that extremity. In his pocket was a checkbook. In the bank were plenty of funds.

"Well, then," he said to Monsieur Vollard, "what do you say to 1,200,000 francs?"

Ambroise Vollard laughed. Then he shrugged his shoulders. "It is not for sale."

Roughly, 1,200,000 francs is $240,000. A price to pay for a joke. Vollard can afford it. American collectors have already paid him more than $6,000,000 for a part of his pictures. The money he has used to buy more canvases, a mansion in an exclusive quarter of the Rive Gauche and the two motor cars he keeps. He can afford to pay for his little joke. And he will pay a great deal more for a bigger one. Vollard is a miser. He doesn't want to sell. And at his death he hopes to leave pictures, worth millions, to the Louvre. Then he will greet the great unknown with Gargantuan laughter.

FOR the pictures Ambroise Vollard has collected are the pictures that for years were pariahs of the salons. They are pictures all France once scorned. In 35 years he has bought them by the thousands when no one else would have such canvases. He paid an average, it is estimated, of $12 apiece for the work of Cezanne, Degas, Renoir, Van Gogh, Gauguin—the very list is a roll call of the giants.

A strange man is Vollard, and stranger still his house where the doors are always barred and bolted and the shutters always closed. Save in three rooms everything is scattered through it just as the movers left his treasures when they transported them to the Rue de Martignac three years ago. Into one room only, the dining room, he permits the entrance of visitors. Four priceless Cezannes, signed "Ingres" by the then young painter by way of a joke, are upon the walls. So is a portrait of Vollard, as a bull fighter, by Renoir. A few bits of statuary by Rodin and Malliol—names to conjure with—are in the hall. The stairsteps are uncarpeted. Things are dusty, musty, dark. But in the dining room are at least 50 Cezannes stacked upon the floor. More than 100 are said to be within the house, with 75 works of Renoir and 60 by Degas, Gauguin, Van Gogh, Rousseau, Picasso, Mattise—these and a score of others have filled the closets and empty rooms with their works. For when Vollard decides to buy a painter's pictures he buys by the score; and 50 at a time—to him—is no astounding order.

GAUGIN—from the artist's famous portrait of himself. Vollard has a rare collection of this master's works.

AFRICAN born, of French parentage, Vollard became a wine salesman, and his early years in Paris he somehow keeps secret, never talking of them even to his friends. But he had a flair for pictures; he had a love for art and artists. He had a longing for the life of the Latin Quarter. And somehow he fell in with Pere Tanguy. Tanguy introduced him to Cezanne. And Vollard began to buy.

After a while he started a little art shop on the Rue Lafitte. A profit of $10 on a picture satisfied him. He bought more pictures with the profit. His instinct was surer than critic's or connoisseur's. He was far in advance of his time. Thirty-five years ago Vollard began to buy Cezannes.

POOR old Pere Tanguy! To the artists—impecunious lot!—he was father and somewhat more. He was a plasterer when he married. Then he went to Paris and became a colorgrinder, while Mme. Tanguy, rather a shrewish old woman, got a job as concierge in a house on the Butte Montmartre. Honest Julien Tanguy, now more free, set up in business for himself. He peddled colors wherever there were artists. He trusted those who could not pay for paint and brush. His heart, the madame said, was on his sleeve. At last in the Rue Clauzel he rented a little shop. Cezanne, Renoir, Gauguin and Van Gogh were among his patrons. His generous nature was a target for all fakers. Well, said his wife, that was the old man's way. She scolded, but at heart was a philosopher.

Tanguy was the first to buy Cezannes. Dozens were stacked in the little room behind his shop. Sometimes he sold one—when he had given away his last sou to a painter with a hard-luck tale and Mamma Tanguy was calling for the soup meat. Van Gogh, too, he bought, when Van Gogh was glad to sell a picture for a franc.

What would you? He failed. Then he died, a man who never had spoken ill of any man—who never had turned a hungry soul from his open door. The painter folk contributed their canvases to a benefit sale and the widow received 10,000 francs. Shortly after she was carried to rest beside him.

But before Father Tanguy died he had introduced Ambroise Vollard to Cezanne. And thus the strange miser of the Rue de Martignac was thrown into the very vortex of the art movement which then convulsed all France with scandal, for Cezanne was the father of "The Savages."

"SAVAGES" they were, in truth—Cezanne, Gauguin and Van Gogh. Men who were madmen in art. France gave them the name in derision of their painting. It described the men as truly, in themselves. Simple-hearted, single-purposed, Cezanne; who flung his pictures sometimes in the fields, or tossed them in a ditch along the roadside; who, on the day when his mother was buried, painted to forget his sorrow and forgot the funeral.

Van Gogh, who thought the portrait Gauguin painted of him had pictured him madman. "It is certainly I, but it's I gone mad"; who that night several times awakened the other as he slept, by stealthily bending over him, and who next day followed Gauguin, with whom he shared a cottage, down the street and rushed upon him with an open razor, in maniacal fury.

er in it," wrote Gauguin in his "Intimate Journal," for "he stopped and, lowering his head, set running off home."

A penitent, if mad, Van Gogh! Once in his room he slashed from his head an ear to show his shame. Later he went to an asylum. Cure was impossible. "Dear Master," he wrote to Gauguin, "after having known you and caused you pain, it is better to die in a good state of mind than in a degraded one."

Then, "he sent a revolver-shot into his stomach," says Gauguin, "and it was only a few hours later that he died, lying in his bed, smoking his pipe, having complete possession of his mind, full of the love of his art and without hatred for others."

GAUGUIN, too! In early youth a sailor. Then a prosperous stock broker, who married, fell in with artists and abandoned his wife and children that he might paint. Somerset Maugham, in "Moon and Sixpence," wrote of such a man, and as he wrote before him was a door, its glass covered with a masterpiece which Paul Gauguin had painted in the Marquesas where he, sick of civilization and scorned and bruised by life, sought health of soul and body, found love and placid beauty that he could paint, but also found his resting place in death.

A strange, mad tribe, yet they made over in their generation, the concept of great art.

Not of "The Savages" were Renoir and Degas. The latter was ever the city man, who painted washer women and ballet girls and startling nudes and racing scenes. He had won high success before death called him, and was acclaimed. In Paris studios still they talk about his wit. "But my dear friend," he dared to say to waspish "Jemmy" Whistler, "you conduct yourself in life as though you had no talent at all."

RENOIR, whose portrait of Vollard has post of honor in that dingy room, had painted through a long life of deep and bitter struggle until he died in 1919, an octogenarian, who for almost 20 years had been paralyzed.

Vollard met him in 1915 on a streets in Collettes, through which Renoir was being carried in a litter. He agreed to paint the collector's portrait, but "as a bull fighter." Vollard hurried to Spain to buy his outfit and rushed again to France. The portrait was painted with the brush strapped to Renoir's paralyzed arm. The painter's doctor mixed hi colors, Marie, his servant, held the brush in place. "You don't need hands to paint with, all you need is a brain," Renoir told Vollard while the latter sat before him.

Out of his rich experience with artists Vollard has become biographer of Renoir and of Cezanne and besides these lives has written and published many other books. He has collected great paintings. One can scarce look up the records of the French Post-Impressionist masters without finding his name associated with their choicest things. But he also has printed beautiful editions de luxe. And, curiously enough, if his profits on the pictures enabled him to sustain a loss on publications, these, in turn, because of beauty and great rarity, have so advanced in price as to recompense him richly. He has revived the art of bookmaking in France.

Chatty, informal, delightful, his "Life of Cezanne" paints an unforgettable portrait of that strange and simple-hearted devotee of art. Cezanne's father had been a hatter, became a banker. He wanted his son to follow in that glorious and respectable career. But Paul had been touched by another spirit. He would draw. He insisted on painting. Dutiful, he went through law school. Obedient, he entered his father's bank. The figures of the ledgers totaled up all wrong. But the margins of those well-thumbed pages Cezanne had filled with sketches as he dreamed. At last he had his way. In the end he went to Paris.

CEZANNE — as he painted himself. Vollard owns scores of his priceless masterpieces.

"HE was a true bohemian," says Vollard. He liked to lie in the sun on the benches about the Luxemburg Gardens. There he often dozed. And lest some thief might take his shoes he used them for a pillow.

Reports to his home at Aix were dispiriting. But his father had faith. "Could I, Cezanne, have fathered an idiot!"

The old banker made provision for his son. During his lifetime there was a remittance. Much of it was given to penniless friends. Zola remonstrated with young Cezanne. "Pardieu!" cried the painter. "If I should die tonight would you want my family to inherit that money?"

Cezanne loved, yet he feared, the city. Of Southern peasant stock, he was suspicious. Guileless, he was yet distrustful. Other young painters had models. Not he.

"Listen, Vollard," he said, as they stood before his pictures in an exhibition, "Parisian wit gives

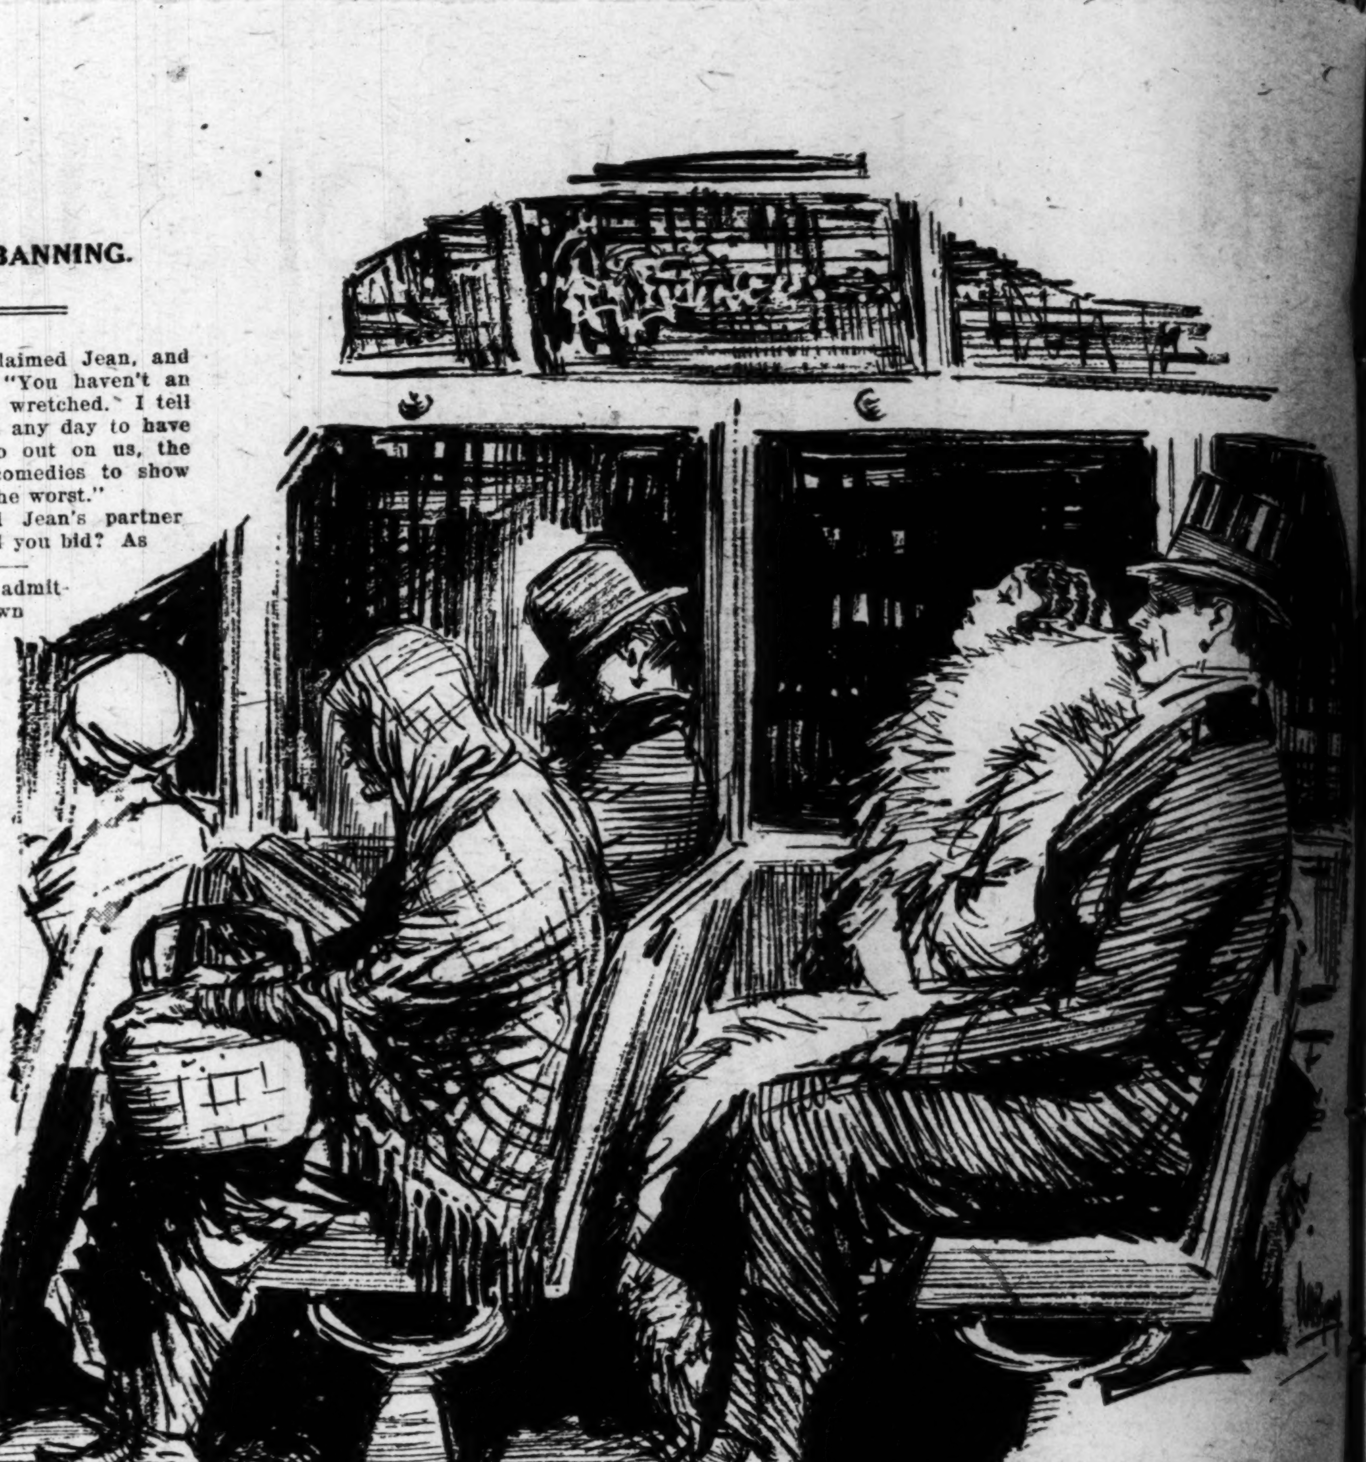
MARGARET CULKIN BANNING.



POVERTY DE LUXE

"POOR, my dear!" exclaimed Jean, and shuffled the cards. "You haven't an idea. We are simply wretched. I tell Sheldon that I expect any day to have them move the piano out on us, the way they do it in comedies to show things have come to the worst."

"Oh, everybody's broke," said Jean's partner. "It's terribly fashionable. What'll you bid? As long as you have a rich father"——

"Father does an awful lot for us," admitted Jean, "but I can't exactly pawn any of his automobiles for cash money. I bid a heart."

"I've already said no-trump—do pay attention to the game," begged Gladys Decour. "I'm losing half of this. Nobody's lying awake nights worrying about you and Sheldon going to the poorhouse."

Jean went back to her wail.

"If everyone didn't assume that I had a lot of money! No one will show me a fur coat under $600, and Sheldon and I have to live on what he earns!"

Jean's face grew intense. Jean often grew intense like that. She had been so when she told her father that she meant to marry Sheldon Mills.

THAT same intensity was the reason why it was so much easier to fall in with Jean's plans than to make any of your own, as her father and her husband had discovered. When she had ideas she was used to seeing them carried out—like marrying Sheldon and living on what he earned.

"Sheldon hasn't anything at all," she was wont in those days to tell people, "but I don't care a bit. He's got drive and personality, and he's the most wonderful lover in the world, and that's all I want. We'll have to live on what he earns—absolutely. Father said so, and I said that Sheldon wouldn't hear of any other way of living. He's so terribly independent."

And so the theory had been established. Like many theories, it had been subjected to slight alterations. Mr. Tillinghast had given them their house—of course, said Jean. "I don't want pearls; we aren't taking a wedding trip to speak of, because hotels are so expensive; and they have to give us a present; and so there's no earthly reason why father shouldn't give us the house."

There was the house, and, of course, with father's house only a block away, slight gaps which wedding presents didn't take care of could be filled in with perfectly justifiable borrowings. It didn't interfere with your independence.

ON THE evening when Jean had so vehemently declared her poverty to the bridge party at the City and Country Club, her husband was coming home on the surface car. After seven years of marriage, he still had the incurably romantic look which Jean had recognized and advertised so widely. Several girls watching him had recourse first to vanity cases and then to obvious stirrings calculated to attract his attention as he clung to his strap and gazed out through the darkening glass of the street-car windows. Sheldon was stalwart and he had the look of seriousness that is semi-sadness and so alluring. The sadness tonight was more than semi.

It had been one thing after another all day. He had been approached by a committee soliciting for local charities and the interview had been embarrassing. Every fellow with whom he played golf or bridge was down for a couple of hundred dollars at least, and in these charitable campaigns you had to live up to what they expected of you. It wasn't, he reflected, that he wouldn't be glad to give what he could. But there'd be a lot more fun in giving $10 that he could afford, and enjoying the sense of doing his part, than to sign up for a hundred and fifty and be annoyed every time an installment fell due.

SHELDON'S thoughts rambled loosely, each of them irritating another: Jean eternally talked about new clothes. And that automobile salesman—after he'd told him definitely that he didn't want a car, couldn't afford to buy a car, the salesman had the nerve to hint that he might suggest to Mr. Tillinghast to give it for a present to Jean. The worst of it was that every time he tried to get ahead by himself, he came up against the assumption in people's minds that old Tillinghast was carrying him.

Jean was quite sincere when she informed her friends that her prospective husband "hadn't anything"—honest at least in her judgment, and backed by her standard. He had been a fine-looking young man who had one of the best rooms at the Y. M. C. A., and he was one of the buyers in a wholesale grocery house. One of the vice president's daughters, scouting around for extra young men for a dance, had discovered him and sent him an invitation. Jean Tillinghast had met him, and the rest had been pleasantly natural.

SHELDON had been married seven years, and he still was coffee buyer for Holden & Dunning. He was also old Tillinghast's son-in-law, member of a couple of clubs, driver of his father-in-law's cars (when Jean borrowed them or the chauffeur was on a vacation), father of a most beautiful and beloved daughter, good golfer, good bridge player and Jean's husband. Sheldon's only brother, Gilbert, had come to have a shade of reserve in his manner toward him. Gilbert had married shortly before Sheldon, and time was when Sheldon used to be a great frequenter of the tiny apartment in which Gilbert at first housed his bride. But Belle had no money of her own and no social position; and, somehow or other, though Jean was always charming to her sister-in-law, the paths of the two brothers did not cross very often.

MORE domestic dramas come to a head over a breakfast or dinner table than in any other place. It takes a quite violent shrew or domestic bully to seek his or her partner out for the purpose of starting discord. But when the table lies spread between a man and a woman, the scene is set and the curtain rises.

"I wish," said Jean, plaintively, "that everyone wouldn't assume that father gives me an allowance."

"Why should they?"

"Oh, they do. Of course, he does do ever so much for us."

"I don't know about that," said Sheldon, a little grimly.

"Why, Sheldon, that isn't very gracious, to say the least. Why, you know how much they've done. Just the house alone"——

"Yes, and I have to keep it up!"

"And the use of the automobile and the club memberships, and then our trip to Florida last winter didn't cost us a thing. You know, father took care of all those things. Most young people"——

"Most young people aren't put in a false position. You think I want your father's tips? That's what they are—tips. If he's feeling good, he offers us a trip to Florida or buys you a coat or Betty a bracelet. Or he gives us a membership in a club that means that we have to run with people we can't afford to run with."

"My friends, you mean?" Jean reminded him.

"Not mine, anyway—not the sort of friends that a buyer in Holden & Dunning ought to have; friends that keep us bluffing all the time, and trading on the fact that your father's a rich man and that some day you may be a rich woman.

"The tradespeople are easy with us because your father's rich—they nag and nag, but they don't go too far. And we bluff along. We know we're poor as misery, but we never know where we stand. I wouldn't mind living on any kind of an income, if I could just feel for once I had my bills all paid for the month. Why, for seven years we've been living on an income about half big enough to support us as we're living—on that and your father's tips. He likes to keep me eating out of his hand"—

THE fat was in the fire. Even if he had wanted to forget the subject, Sheldon could not now, with Jean's head so stiffly in the air. They went into their delightful living room, furnished with Tillinghast donations or wedding presents sprung from Jean's connections. Ordinarily Sheldon loved his home. Tonight he felt sternly that it sapped his manhood.

It was Betty who really hurt him. She lay in her ivory white bed, a gift from her grandmother.

"I want," said Betty, "a pony I can ride on. Dorothy has one. She let me ride, too, with Ellen holding me. Will you get me one, daddy?"

Even at 6 Betty could be pleading.

"It costs too much, dear. When you get a little older."

Betty remained blithe. "All right," she said. "I'll ask grandfather."

Her father stared blackly down at her and then left the room. It was Jean who got the brunt of his anger.

"I may take tips," he stormed, "but I will not have my child trained to be a beggar. She is to get along on what I give her. She's to understand it."

JEAN did not cry until Sheldon went out, shutting the door with an insulting forcibleness that resembled a slam. Then she indulged herself.

He drifted to the club for some cigarettes, and Will Brewer hailed him to make a fourth at bridge.

When he got home he found Jean sitting up for him and still looking intense.

"Perhaps," Jean said, darkly, "there's something

It Isn't the Initial Cost—It's the Upkeep behind all this sudden discontent. Perhaps you've met someone—some woman?"

"Oh, Jean, you know I adore you"—He knew the remedy for that kind of talk from years of experience, and tried to caress her. But she remained intense.

In the morning they both felt under a slight strain, which was not made less difficult because it was Jean's birthday. On birthdays they always went to the Tillinghast house. The celebration was doubtless already under way. It was almost impossible to refuse. Still, when Jean, after being sweet with deliberation all through breakfast, asked, "Will it be too unpleasant for you to dine at father's tonight?" Sheldon wished that it wasn't Jean's birthday and therefore a day hallowed to her wishes. As it was, he merely smiled and assured his wife that dining at the Tillinghast's would be a pleasure. But he felt that she had the better of him, and when she added that she hoped it wouldn't be inconvenient for him to come out on the surface car because she hated to borrow father's cars so often, he realized that she had planned these statements last night, and his own hostility began to rise. Several times that day his colleagues noted a grim dignity on his face, and once or twice his lips moved as if in declamation.

"What's eating you, Shell?" one of them asked. "Going to make a speech?"

"You bet I am, one of these days," answered Sheldon.

THE presents were put at Jean's place for dessert. That was the custom. There was silk lingerie from her mother—not too unexpected, as Jean had been careful to admire just what she needed last time she had shopped with her mother—a dozen embroidered napkins from Aunt Delia, a purse from Sheldon, which Jean was charming about.

"I love it, Sheldon."

"It isn't much," he said, heartened by her thanks.

"Quite enough, quite enough," said old D. H. T.

Then they waited for Jean's father to reveal his present. A stealthy feeling in Sheldon, which he resented, hoped that it might be a check. A thousand dollars would go so far in clearing up the old bills, but, of course, that was too much to hope for. Well, five hundred would be plenty—even two hundred. It must be a check, because there was no sign of a wrapped package anywhere.

Mr. Tillinghast finished his coffee, and they left the table. In the library, which fronted the street, he made his way to the window.

"Good-looking car in front. Wonder who's got the nerve to park out there."

Jean followed him to the window.

"Funny," she agreed; "right before the steps, isn't it?"

The electric lights at the gates shone full on the car.

"Now, who do you suppose it belongs to?" speculated old D. H. T. "Looks like a good car for young people, doesn't it?"

Jean turned to look at him, and his smile verified her suspicions.

"You darling!" she cried, and flung her arms about her father's neck. The front door flew open, and Jean dashed down to the curb, with the others in smiling pursuit. Sure enough, on a little silver plate on the door gleamed Jean's initials.

Sheldon looked at the initials a little strangely, then at Jean's happy face. Jean turned to him triumphantly.

"Isn't it wonderful to have a father who does things like this for you! It's such a good car. It's a beauty!"

SHELDON did not answer. And, unwisely, Jean pressed him.

"You don't seem very enthusiastic, Sheldon."

"I'm afraid not, Jean," said her husband. He had hardly reached the hall when Jean, very white-faced, confronted him.

"What do you mean by that?" she demanded.

"My lack of enthusiasm? I think you know."

"What's the trouble, Sheldon? Not your favorite make? It isn't final, you know," said old D. H. T., kindly.

"I'm afraid that I hardly approve of my wife's having an expensive car," said Sheldon, quietly.

"Sheldon's picked up a lot of silly ideas somewhere," his wife remarked, cuttingly, "and they haven't improved his manners."

"I'm sure that on a birthday," put in her mother.

"Suppose we hear the ideas," suggested Mr. Tillinghast.

"I think we'd better not," said Jean.

That last remark flicked Sheldon into action.

"I THINK I'll be the judge of that," he broke in. "They aren't such strange ideas. I don't see why I should welcome an expensive car which adds to my liabilities, which are too heavy for me now. I can't afford to have my wife run a four or five thousand dollar car when I'm only making six thousand a year. It's not right. It shows the world that I'm not supporting her. It adds to our expenses. It means upkeep, gasoline, motor parties—a lot of other things we can't afford."

"Oh, well, Sheldon, if that's all that's on your mind, I'll endow that little car," offered his father-in-law.

"I'm sorry, but that doesn't fit the case. It's not endowment I want"——

"Not tips," said Jean, sarcastically.

"No—not tips. Not, as I said to my wife last night, Mr. Tillinghast, tips—club memberships, trips, new furs, car. I want a chance to live as we ought to live—not to be pulled into spending more a year, but less."

"You want me to live in a flat like the wife of a clerk?" said Jean.

"Well, you are the wife of a coffee buyer, aren't you?" And then to Mr. Tillinghast: "And she'll always be the wife of a buyer as long as I'm put in the position where I have to be poor and live rich—poverty de luxe: I supply the poverty, you the de luxe. You talk to me about Fielding Davis. I could get somewhere myself if I didn't have to stagger along under a lot of bills and a lot of social ambitions. You indorse Davis' notes, and you give my wife a car to increase my expense. Why didn't you consult me and ask whether I wanted my wife to have a car? Why didn't you assume that I have a right to determine my own scale of living?"

They all looked at him, Jean with anger, but a certain dawning respect, her mother angrily, and old D. H. T. stood there, wearing his poker expression.

"When I married Jean, the understanding was that we were to live on what I could earn. We can't live, the way we've been expected to live, on that. People assume that she gets an allowance."

"You mean that you want me to give Jean an allowance?"

"I don't mean any such thing. I mean that you ought to leave us alone and not bother us with temptations to spend money, or else give us enough to do the thing right."

HE HADN'T meant to say that last. It put the wrong construction on everything. Old D. H. T.'s expression hardened.

"I don't know whether you are staging a holdup or not, young man. At any rate, I think I prefer the first alternative to subsidizing you. We can remove the temptation to spend money. I'll send back the—— No, mother, I'll give it to you. The initials are the same. And Jean shall have a pair of gloves for her birthday present."

"Not my car!" cried Jean.

"Your husband is right. If he can't afford to let you have a car, you shouldn't have a car," said D. H. T., and looked coldly at his son-in-law. "I understand you correctly?"

"Absolutely," said Sheldon, and squared up to the situation. "That's fine."

He rather expected Jean to denounce him on the spot, and was not at all sure that she would go home with him. But she did, although after her tears had been suppressed, there was a still quiet about her that he dreaded. She was tense, and she obviously intended to bring him to time.

MEANWHILE, old D. H. Tillinghast sat on his own bed and chuckled.

"That young fellow certainly treated us to fireworks"——

"And on Jean's birthday! I wonder if he's good to her. You must have Christian run her car over in the morning, poor girl!"

"What car?"

"Why, the new one."

"Not much," said D. H. T. "She gets her gloves tomorrow. I send no cars to that house."

"But, Dave, you don't intend to make Jean suffer"——

"In a measure, that's out of our hands. The young man's thesis is sound enough. Of course, in theory he's quite right. Still, if I'd have given Jean a check he might have felt differently. But he'll have his chance to work this out."

"How?"

"As I remember, we're going to California next Sunday for five months, aren't we? This house is to be closed, and the cars put in storage. Not a battery left in one of them except the one we take along. Let Sheldon have a taste of independence."

"But how about Jean? She's coming out to us next month with Betty."

"I guess we'll tell Jean to stay with her husband this winter," said D. H. T.

IN JANUARY there were taxes. Mr. Tillinghast had paid the taxes on the expensive house and lot he had given his daughter. This year he omitted it. Poverty de luxe grew more difficult. On Christmas the Tillinghasts sent Jean a phonograph and Sheldon a set of books.

One night the Millses had to go home in a public bus from a dance. Sheldon did not have the cash for a taxi. Jean and he sat miserably beside each other on the straw seat, she in her lovely evening wrap and he in his expensive evening clothes. Sheldon felt that his wife hated him. She refused invitations after that, and indeed she was often too tired to go out in the evening, for she had incompetent help in the house. Jenny, her old cook, had cost $70 a month; and though Mrs. Tillinghast had always taken care of that, this year she had forgotten. So Jenny had to go, and Jean felt adrift. She wept a good deal, alternating weeping with fits of hostility. But for once her intenseness, her "nervousness," did not work.

"Why must we live like pigs?" she said, viciously, one morning at breakfast.

"Because we aren't living honestly." Sheldon tried to keep his voice impersonal and persuasive.

"Other people manage to have cars and a little fun."

"Not young people without an income of their own."

"I'm tired of living in the gutter."

Sheldon faced his wife silently for a minute.

"If you feel like that, dear, let's give it up—shall we?"

"What?"

"I'm tired, too—not of living in the gutter, because, of course, we don't, but of pretending. I told you once before we were married that I shouldn't marry a rich girl. I knew it was a mistake. Now, it's bad for both of us. All my ambition is going, because I know I can't meet the burden. Maybe I'm not of much account. Anything you do is all right with me."

"You mean divorce?"

He nodded.

"But I don't want a divorce."

"We can't go on like this, can we? I hurt you—I seem mean to you—I've killed every bit of love you had for me, and I've hurt myself, too. I can't seem to go on. I dreamed of getting an interest in a wholesale house of my own. I wanted to make money for you."

She did not answer, and he left her.

THERE was roast lamb for dinner. Sheldon liked roast lamb. Until he came within the savory smell of it that night he did not know how hungry and tired he was. All day he had been trying to think of somewhere he could turn to raise money enough to buy out the Austin interest. There was nowhere, no one, except his father-in-law. If he tried to go elsewhere, the first question would be why he did not go to Tillinghast. He came home reluctantly, and as he turned in at the gate, Jean saw him from the dining-room window and noted the slowness of his approach. He didn't want to come home. She'd done that to him. He looked like a man anticipating a blow, as indeed he was.

"How about calling on your brother Gilbert—and Belle?" Jean asked at dinner.

"They don't interest you particularly, Jean."

"I'd like to, tonight, really."

The Gilbert Millses lived in a little house with a rubber plant in the hall which had come from Belle's mother, and the living room was filled with upholstered red-painted wicker. Belle Mills, looking pretty in a gray silk dress which she declared she had bought for "nothing" at the after-Christmas sales, welcomed them gayly. Belle and Jean exchanged ideas, across their gulf of different ways of living.

"Everything's horribly expensive, isn't it?" asked Jean.

"Ghastly; but we did manage to have a surplus last month. That's how I got the dress."

"Fancy having a surplus," sighed Jean.

SHE did not look at her husband. She looked at Gilbert, and thought that he didn't look as tired as Sheldon, in spite of living in a rubbishly little house and having no servant. She supposed that Sheldon envied his brother—possibly envied him his pleasant wife, with her capable hands and magic budget.

Jean could almost feel her husband making comparisons. However, she had let herself in for it. When they left, Sheldon and his wife walked to the corner for their bus in silence.

"Tired, Jean?"

"Oh, no. I enjoyed it. Nice, isn't it?"

"What?"

"Their house."

"Oh, it's livable," answered Sheldon, "but I couldn't stand it myself. Could you?"

"Couldn't stand what?"

"You've educated me to somewhat different things. Belle hasn't your way of making things beautiful, Jean."

"They save money," said Jean.

"Um—so they do. But that isn't everything."

"They live honestly, as you were saying you wanted to."

"I do want to live honestly, but you can't do it by copying people."

"I put our house on the market today," Jean remarked.

SHELDON jumped. "You did what?"

"Put the house on the market. We can get twenty-five thousand, Mr. Gibbs says."

"Jean," said her husband, sharply, "you'll do no such thing. That was your father's gift."

"The more I've thought of that lately," said his wife, "the madder I've been. Let's sell the house and show father what can be done in your business with $20,000. We can live somewhere—not just as Gilbert and Belle do, unless you want to"——

"Why, you silly girl!" said Sheldon. "All evening, I've been glad that I didn't live that way. I've been thinking how beautifully you taught me to live. I don't want to sell the house. It's the only home we've had. I'd almost sooner go away and leave you and Betty in it—unless I can swing it. I could under certain conditions. I've figured that if I could buy into Parke-Austin, I could handle everything within a year. I know exactly what's wrong with that firm. I really know a lot about wholesale groceries. You see"——

Jean realized that he was talking just as he used to talk before they were married.

"It's possible to make an awfully good thing of it, I'm sure. I was almost tempted today to try to raise the money, but"——

"But what?"

"Why, Jean, for a little while, until I got the firm going, it would mean worse scraping than we have been up against yet. You'd hate it—saving everywhere, for I'd have to keep my credit good. It's bad enough as it is."

"It's not bad at all," Jean contradicted him flatly. "We're quite comfortable. I suppose I could cut a lot of things out. I really could do better. But why not sell the house?"

"No—it seems like letting you pawn your wedding ring. I've got to do it on my own, or it doesn't amount to anything. But I almost think, Jean, I could make Alton see what a reasonable proposition it would be. His bank has money loaned to Parke-Austin as it is. Do you suppose you could stand a year or so of real economy—almost poverty? Because if I did try, I couldn't"——

He didn't go on, but Jean knew what he meant. He meant that he couldn't come home to a cross wife every night.

t occurred to her that he was giving er a chance to be a regular wife, like Belle, with her share of the burdens.

"Go ahead, Sheldon," she answered, with all the intensity gone from her voice. "Let's do it your way, and watch me help."

HE SAW Fred Austin in the morning.

"Well—ten thousand cash and the balance over a period of three years," Austin said at last.

Henry Alton, his banker, greeted him affably, but not too affably, as one who suspects that he may be called upon to cash in on pleasantness

"Well, young man"——

Sheldon told him. He found that, having broken into speech, words came easily. He was backed also by the knowledge, verified by Austin, that the bank was involved in Parke-Austin affairs and unwilling to see it ride to a fall. He found himself adroit, canny.

"And so I can get in—and make the business pay—if I can get ten thousand cash."

"Sounds reasonable. I'd like to see that business in young hands—competent hands. What security would we have? The business interest as it stands wouldn't be good enough, of course. What else?"

"I haven't anything else."

"I see. Mr. Tillinghast go on your note?"

Sheldon shook his head. "I prefer not to ask him, Mr. Alton."

"Why not?"

"I can't be carried by my wife's father. I don't like the idea."

Alton whistled softly.

"Just so. Well, there's you house, but, of course, real estate is poor security for us."

"I can't offer the house as security. It's my wife's."

"That must be a big expense."

"It is. But I've no car—we are going to cut expenses to the bone while I'm getting this business running."

"But we can't lend you money without security."

"I feel it is security to get a man in there who knows the business. You know what that firm is earning—you know what it should earn. It's a wonder it hasn't been bought up before. Some bank is going to see it before I'm through, Mr. Alton."

ALTON looked him over. There was the look of the young fellow which he liked; moreover, he couldn't have any other bank in on the management of Parke-Austin. Mills was right. Good story on Tillinghast! Well——

"It will come up at the directors' meeting this afternoon."

"I see," said Sheldon.

The banker put his hand on the young man's shoulder.

"Informally, I think I can promise you that it will be all right. You needn't go farther."

ON THE surface car that night the girls looked at Sheldon. He looked so handsome, so successful, so romantic. But they brought out their vanity cases and powdered their noses uselessly, for he looked at none of them. His eyes and his mind were fixed on something apparently outside the dark windowpanes. The car went past the lighted windows of the City and Country Club, and a little smile curved Sheldon's lips. Some day he'd go in there again when he could pay for his own membership. And he'd take Jean there for dinner.

Borglum Is Not the First to Suffer

sibly be taken by an enemy. So confident were the Babylonians, according to Heroditus, that they did not notice what Cyrus was about when he diverted the water of the river by means of a canal and thus enabled bodies of his troops to enter the beleaguered city and surprise its defenders—so completely that there was no fighting.

Only Narbonidus in his dungeon, and Belshazzar in the hands of the executioner, suffered from the overconfidence bred by those massive walls. And they had followed upon the throne the men who erected the walls. Again, although deferred, the Fate of Builders.

MOST striking, perhaps, of all the tragedies connected with the Seven Wonders of the World, is that of Phidias, greatest sculptor that ever lived—arrested, condemned and banished from Athens. Thereupon he went to Olympia, where the famous games were held for more than 1000 years. The great temple of Zeus was nearing completion there. Phidias was commissioned to make the statue for the inner holy of holies. The banished Athenian strove to surpass the Athena of the Parthenon. After eight years of toil, he completed the Statue of Zeus, magnificent in gold, silver, ivory, precious stones and bronze—another Wonder of the World.

The Olympian Zeus had such fame that for centuries afterward it was considered a calamity to die without having seen the figure. Worshipers came from far and near, ancient writers never tired of describing it. So lifelike did it appear that the common people thought it was a real and living god.

But tradition says that the troubles of Phidias at Athens were repeated at Olympia—that he was accused of stealing part of the gold intrusted to him for the work, and that he was condemned to prison, where he died—another victim among builders of the Wonders of the World.

THE next name in the roster of these seeming targets for jealous, cruel Fate is that of a woman—Artemisia, sister-wife of King Mausolus of Caria, in Asia Minor. Upon a handsome foundation she stood the rectangular base of his tomb, 114 by 92 feet, built of green stone encased in marble. Above it was the main hall, surrounded by 36 fluted columns of the Ionic order, each 29 feet high and placed 10 feet apart. Between the columns stood marble statues and, above them, extending around the four sides of the building, the wonderful frieze in which the greatest artists of the ancient world sought to perpetuate their fame.

The top of the tomb was shaped like a pyramid, surmounted by a platform 20 by 25 feet, to support the famous chariot group. Four huge horses, each 12 feet in length, were attached to the chariot with harnesses of bronze. In the chariot stood a statue of Mausolus. There was such an effect of lightness and grace that a report persistently circulated in the ancient world that the structure was suspended in the air.

Again the Fate of the Builders! Queen Artemisia did not have the comfort of seeing her dream take on physical shape. Two years after the death of Mausolus she died, and was buried with him. But the tomb was finished, largely through the pride of the sculptors, and the building stood practically unharmed until the year 1402 A. D., when a severe earthquake tumbled it down. Seekers of building material completed its destruction.

STILL another grim tragedy among the Builders of Wonders of the World attended the rearing of the Colossus of Rhodes. This monument, to commemorate the victory of the islanders over the army of Demetrius, son of King Antigonus of Macedonia, was a bronze statue of a man, and its height is understood to have been about 105 feet. The Statue of Liberty in New York stands 151 feet above its stone pedestal. Medieval legend relates that the figure stood astride the entrance to the harbor, and that the tallest ships passed between its legs.

For 12 years the sculptor Chares labored at his task, and in the year 280 B. C. it was completed. Section by section, the pieces had been cast and were ready to be raised into position and be joined together. Masonry was at hand to fill up the hollows of the legs, so that the statue might not be topheavy. But Chares, while fitting its parts together, discovered an error in his measurements and in chagrin killed himself. The raising of the statue was completed, and 56 years afterwards an earthquake threw it from its base and wrenched the sections apart. In the year 672 A. D., Arab conquerors sold the pieces as old metal.

A MIXTURE of comedy and of defeated hope for Fame appears in the legendary history of the famous lighthouse, the Pharos of Alexandria. Begun by Ptolemy Soter, who had been a General of Alexander the Great, it was finished by the latter's son, Ptolemy Philadelphus, in the years 285-247 B. C. The height is variously described as having been from 400 to 600 feet, and the larger figure probably was more nearly correct. At the top was an open space, from which a column of smoke by day and of flame at night warned sailors of the neighboring shoals and guided them to the harbor entrance.

Its builder was Cnidus, an architect of renown. Unwilling for his royal master to have for long the credit of constructing the tower, Sostratus first engraved his own name in the solid marble at the base of the lighthouse, then covered it over with cement and in the hardened cement cut the royal inscription, claiming all the glory for Sostratus.

TRAGEDY PREDOMINATES, in the annals of the Seven Wonders of the World. Gutzon Borglum is not nearly so unfortunate as some of the dreamers and builders whose vast projects preceded that at Stone Mountain. But he who contemplates creating the next World's Wonder might well think twice before he tries to outdo Nature, who has proved, in the past, so jealous of her marvels, so relentless in her punishments—and so universally victorious.

Up From the Sea—a Ship

give her buoyancy. Early in 1919 tests indicated that they could raise the stricken monster when the time was ripe. But to make quite sure of lifting her, Maj. Gianelli, the engineer in charge, caused eight large pontoons to be fastened to her, with a total lifting power of 2800 tons.

Next, the Italians set dredgers to work cutting a channel all the way from the wreck to the dry dock. And the dry dock had to be specially prepared, since it was designed to take a vessel upright, and not upside-down. Mighty wooden beams, 15 inches square and larger, were installed on a plan which followed the outline of the ship, so that the deck could be brought exactly over them and allowed to sink into place upon them.

On Sept. 17, 1917, air compressors forced the water out of the hull and out of the pontoons. Water was left in certain compartments, to balance the ship evenly. Slowly, in a struggle between the grip of the mud and the lifting power of the air, the Leonardo da Vinci arose out of the sea. Then tugs took her slowly to the dry dock.

TOWARD the end of January, 1921, the Leonardo da Vinci was towed out of dry dock to the place where it was proposed to right her. She was still upside-down, her specially strengthened deck resting upon the water. Four hundred tons of solid ballast had been loaded into her, and the engineers made preparations for pumping 7500 tons of water into certain compartments on her starboard side. Being above the center of gravity, this weight would make her so topheavy that she was bound to overbalance and thus turn right side up again.

Valves were opened which allowed the water to enter, and the salvage men scrambled down from the upturned keel and pulled away from her.

By the time that some 800 tons of water had entered the battleship's hull, she began to turn over, but very, very slowly. And soon, as the weight of the water increased, the Leonardo da Vinci rolled over with a rush, raising a big wave as the deck swung clear of the water.

The Sand Devils Outwit "The Shadow"

Over the horizon there came a tall, round form, slender and straight, leaping forward and back, then to the side, coming nearer and nearer to the helpless party. More forms took shape—columns of sand made by whirling winds. Around the men and women on camel backs the maniac forms began their dance—"the dance of the sand devils," the guide called it.

Drops of hot rain disappeared instantly in the scorching sand. Lightning flashed down, long straight barbs that bored into the earth at the camels' feet. Where they shot into the earth little barbs of sand sprang up and kept their shape, melted into glistening lava by the blast of lightning. "The lightning flowers are blooming," the guide explained.

ONE of the "sand devils" danced into a lightning streak and exploded, with a deafening crash. The little French girl screamed. Her hands gripped those of Inspector Dorgeles convulsively.

"It is the end!" she cried. "The good God is sending for me, to punish me! If you live tell my husband—promise me that you will tell him—that I loved him and that Le Bon Dieu has taken me—and will forgive. Tell him, Monsieur, if you love God!"

The Inspector's brain leaped to the situation.

"And where shall I find your husband to tell him that you have gone beyond the desert?" he asked, quickly.

"At the end of the Alegricas road to the wells—the little hut where the water comes into the yard. You will find an Arab, but it is not an Arab—it is Gauterre, my husband!"

AS SUDDENLY as they came, the demoniac forms disappeared over the horizon. The red-black pall lifted, The dance of the sand devils was over. Sun glints played in the blue desert sky again. The guide gave the command and the camels turned their heads toward Touggourt.

Mademoiselle trembled and was silent with her thought. Inspector Dorgeles was silent, too, until the camels stopped in the yard outside the tourists' hotel. Then he called the army Sergeant to his side.

"Be pleased," he said, "to observe my badge, and to take Mademoiselle into custody. You will hold her at the fort until I give further instructions."

Mademoiselle, quivering still before the vision she had seen in the desert, was too numbed to protest. Inspector Dorgeles evaded her eyes, which danced no longer. He walked hurriedly down the Algericas road to the oasis wells and turned into the yard of an adobe hut. A tall, swarthy man in the burnous of the Arab answered his knock at the door. Inspector Dorgeles covered him with his gun.

"I arrest you, Gauterre, whom we call The Shadow, for the murder of Hugh Brook and Frederick Scott," the Inspector said, quietly.

THE SHADOW had fled to his out-of-the-world hiding place and his unique disguise, at the threat of catastrophe after the contretemps in the cottage at Monaco. Once he had been an officer in the Foreign Legion and knew the ways of the Arabs and their language. Among them he was safe after each murder. It was his manner of keeping out of Europe and unwatched. Only once before had Yvonne, whom he had married when he made her his tool, visited him at Touggourt. That she should not have lost her nerve and come to him a second time was his only reproach for her.

He was executed at Marseilles, and Yvonne was sent to the woman's prison in Paris.

"But you will admit," Inspector Dorgeles will always conclude, "that it was not the police, but the sand devils which came to the desert's edge to trap 'The Shadow.'"

Why Women Say La-May Face Powder Refines the Texture Of the Skin

Millions of women have let their skin grow coarse, because they did not use a face powder made to benefit the skin, to prevent the skin from growing old.

We have said many times, if you really want a face powder of the greatest benefit to your skin, be sure to select La-May (French, Poudre L'Ame). It is made by a secret formula of only the purest and finest ingredients prescribed by doctors and specialists as a beauty medicine to preserve and refine the texture of the skin, to correct and prevent enlarged pores, blackheads and irritations.

Over a million of our most intelligent American women are improving and protecting their complexions by the use of this real beauty treatment. They say it keeps the skin young, stays on longer and looks better than any other powder.

Girls, of you honestly value the [illegible] of a lovely complexion, do not deny your-selves this pure La-May. Every [illegible] bears a certificate guaranteeing it [illegible] not contain rice powder, white lead [illegible] any injurious ingredient. A reward [illegible] five thousand dollars is offered [illegible] chemist who finds La-May [illegible] these harmful ingredients. This [illegible] has been standing years, yet no one [illegible] claimed the reward, because La-May [illegible] pure.

When you ask for your La-May [illegible] wise enough to refuse substitutes [illegible] stitutes are offered only by [illegible] tors or dealers trying to make a [illegible] profit at your expense. La-May [illegible] at thirty-five cents, sixty cents and [illegible] dollar, in White, Flesh, Brunette [illegible] Tan. Remember, no one can [illegible] better, a finer, a purer or safer [illegible] than La-May at any price. [illegible] notice.

It's Safe to Use La-May—It's Pure!

Ambroise Vollard, Strange Miser of Beauty

me a pain. Excuse me, I'm only a painter!. . . . Painting nudes on the banks of the Arc is all the fun I could ask for. Only, you understand, all women are cats and damned calculating. . . . They might get their hooks on me! Life's frightful, isn't it?"

FAMILY funds had kept him from starvation in those earlier years. Later Pere Tanguy became his first patron. Meantime appreciation was the price of his pictures. "Do you like it? It is yours." Thus both at Aix and in Paris many friends had been presented with what today are priceless masterpieces.

In 1895, a few years after his meeting with Cezanne, Vollard determined on a "one-man show" of the painter's work. Admission was free. A telegraph messenger and a baker's boy came. They were critics in embryo.

"I suppose painters can take life easy, not that that's the stuff that sells," said the messenger. But the other was doubtful: "I'd think," he observed, "they must get out of practice awful quick that way."

VOLLARD, in his biography, published in authorized translation by Nicholas L. Brown two years ago, tells of his first purchaser of the Cezanne—a blind man.

He was guided by a valet, who explained the pictures in terms of "shop." Then the blind man took a canvas in his hand and ran his fingers over it. Another and another followed. He came to one that was painted with a palette knife. That painting he could feel. With his fingers he visualized the composition. And he bought.

By that time Paul Cezanne was 55 and had painted for 35 years.

Looking for more pictures Vollard went to Aix, where the painter was now established in the family home. Outside the door he saw a canvas hanging in a cherry tree. It was one of which Cezanne had tired, and tiring, he tossed it out of the window. Later, with the painter and his son, Vollard walked in the garden. Cezanne chanced to see the canvas. "Son," he said, "I think we'd better get 'The Apples' down; I think I'll work on that some more."

Not all the pictures were in cherry trees, however. Cezanne loved the town of Aix, though most of its citizens held him in contempt for one who could not paint and whose pictures would not sell. Some he had given away. Others he had abandoned in the fields. Occasionally the thrifty folk would pick them up. At least the canvas might be useful.

WORD got about that Vollard was seeking these paintings. One citizen brought one which was purchased for 150 francs. He was jubilant. He would aid the collector. They visited a home. "Some magnificent Cezannes were on the landing," says Vollard. They cost him a 1000-franc banknote, but he didn't get the pictures until the husband had taken the note to the bank and brought back the gold. Then they were so pleased with their bargain they gave him cord to tie up his purchases and Vollard left. On the street he heard a window open above him. "Here," someone called, "is one that we forgot." And another Cezanne, thrown in for good measure, fell at his feet.

A certain Countess had many Cezannes stored in her granary. But she would not sell. Vollard could not see them.

"They're in the granary—and I tell you that's not art."

"But," said the Parisian, "they are worth the money and in case the rats"——

But Madame shut him up. "Well, let my rats eat my Cezannes. I'm no shopkeeper."

Later Vollard persuaded Cezanne to paint his portrait. The painter at the time was in Paris. In the center of the studio was a chair placed upon a packing case. That in turn stood on four rickety legs.

"YOU won't run any risk of falling, Monsieur Vollard, if you keep your balance," was Cezanne's cheering word. But Vollard didn't keep his balance. He went to sleep. Box, chair and sitter crashed to the floor. Cezanne was ill-tempered and Vollard, ruefully surveying the wreck, expected next to see the painter slash the picture. But instead Cezanne pounced upon him: "You wretch! You've spoiled the pose. Do I have to tell you again you must sit still like an apple? Does an apple move?"

Three and a half hours each day he posed. And there were 115 sittings. But it was never finished. Some little white on the hands was yet to be painted. It remains as the master left it.

For that portrait Cezanne needed a clear gray light. He was obsessed with the idea. Peasant training sent him to bed early. In the middle of the night he would awake. Then he would open a window to see what the weather next day might be. After that, candle in hand, he would inspect his portrait. Usually, Madame Cezanne was awakened by these investigations. Sometimes, in his satisfaction he would summon her. Then, sorry that he had roused her from her sleep, he would propose amends—a midnight game of checkers.

VOLLARD collected, hoarded, and sometimes sold. There were those who acclaimed Cezanne great. There were collectors who bought. Insensibly Aix's "old-man-who-is-crazy-about-painting" had become head of a school. The impressionists with whom he had started out in life had slowly won acclaim. But his painting was a step beyond. Official art still sneered at Paul Cezanne and with his curious peasant mind he had great and pathetic longing for official honors. In 1904 his friends conceived a plan to gain him governmental recognition and the Beaux-Arts cross. France was preparing an exhibit at the World's Fair in St. Louis. They would offer Cezànne's painting to the Minister of Commerce and Industry for exhibition here. Then from him would come a decoration.

Alas! There was a jury. Poor Cezanne's painting was refused. It chanced to be a matter of politics. The judges could not forget the fact that three Cezannes were once hung in an exhibition where they had been permitted to hang but one.

So St. Louis lost its chance to see a Cezanne. For the City Art Museum has none, and dealers in art here cannot recall when one of the painter's masterpieces was ever shown or hung in this city.

AMBROISE VOLLARD does not worry about St. Louis. In his big, dark house there are pictures worth millions. He has cornered the market, as it were, of modern painting. He can ride in his motor cars or he can sit and wait, until the time comes to give his paintings to the Louvre and make himself immortal by his unique collection of those treasures which once were rejected of men.

How a "Crazy Invention" Ended My Baldness

Sixty days ago they called me "Baldy." Now they're amazed at my new growth of hair.

At the theatre I always felt that the people behind me were doing nothing but giggling at me.

"GEORGE, don't be foolish. You ought to know there's no help for baldness. You're just throwing your money away."

"But listen, Bill—"

"Nothing doing. You can't convince me that anything will grow hair on that bald head of yours. And especially that crazy invention! Take my advice and hang on to your money."

That was how my friend, Bill Jenkins, felt. I had been telling him about a new treatment for baldness I wanted to take. He just wouldn't listen to me. He was all against it. And in a way I didn't blame him. For I certainly had wasted an awful lot of money on other treatments with no results. I had tried countless tonics and salves. I had tried singeing and massages. I tried crude oil and even mange cures. But every new thing I tried actually seemed to make my hair thinner.

Still, this new treatment was entirely different from anything I had ever tried. Other methods treated only the surface skin. This one consisted of a new invention which provided, for the first time, a method of getting right down to the dormant roots and nourishing them. The results it was bringing seemed really astonishing. Men who had been partially bald for years, who had long ago given up hope, were getting brand-new growths of hair in surprisingly short times. Women, too, were using it with equally remarkable results.

But the best part of it all, as I later learned, was this—I didn't risk a penny in taking the treatment. The discoverer of this new method—Alois Merke—founder of the famous Merke Institute, Fifth Avenue, New York—absolutely guaranteed an entirely new growth of hair in 30 days, or the trial would cost me nothing!

I just couldn't resist such an unusual offer. I had nothing to lose, and perhaps a lot to gain. So I sent for the treatment.

Read This!

"Results are wonderful. My hair has stopped falling out and I can see lots of new hair coming in. I preach your system to everyone."—F. D. R., Washington D. C.

"My hair was coming out at an alarming rate, but after four or five treatments I noticed this was checked. My hair is coming in thicker and looks and feels full of life and vigor."—W. C., Great Neck, N. Y.

"I have used your system for eight weeks and although the top of my head has been entirely bald for six years, the results up to the present are gratifying. In fact, the entire bald spot is covered with a fine growth of hair."—W. B., Kenmore, Ohio.

"The top of my head is almost covered with new hair. I have been trying for last five years, but never could find anything that could make hair grow until I used your treatment, and now my hair is coming back."—Tom Carson, Ohio.

(Original of above letters on file in the Institutes.)

The Biggest Surprise of My Life

When I first saw this new invention I laughed out loud. My friend Bill had called it a "crazy invention." It almost looked the part. But that didn't keep me from trying it.

The first two or three days, nothing happened. True, my scalp felt very much invigorated. And I didn't see anywhere near the amount of hair on my brush that I used to. Then, a few days later, I looked in the mirror. What I saw almost bowled me over! For there, just breaking thru, was a fine, downy fuzz all over my head!

Every day I spent 15 minutes taking the treatment. And every day this young hair kept getting stronger and thicker. At the end of a month you could hardly see a bald spot on my head. And at the end of sixty days—well, my worries about baldness were ended. For I had regained an entirely new growth of healthy hair.

Here's the Secret

According to Alois Merke, in most cases of baldness the hair roots are not dead, but merely dormant—temporarily asleep. Now to make a sickly tree grow you would not think of rubbing "growing fluid" on the leaves. Yet that is just what I had been doing, when I used to douse my head with tonics, salves, etc. To make a tree grow you must nourish the roots. And it's exactly the same with the hair.

This new treatment which Merke perfected after 17 years' experience in treating baldness, is the first and only practical method of getting right down to the hair roots and nourishing them.

At the Merke Institute many have paid as high as $500 for the results secured thru personal treatments. Yet now these very same results may be secured in any home in which there is electricity—at a cost of only a few cents a day!

New Hair in 30 Days or No Cost

Merke very frankly admits that his treatment will not grow hair in every case. There are some cases of baldness that nothing in the world can help. But so many others have regained hair this new way, that he absolutely guarantees it to produce an entirely new hair growth in 30 days, or the trial is free. In other words, no matter how thin your hair may be, he invites you to try the treatment 30 days at his risk, and if it fails to grow hair, then he's the loser—not you. And you are the sole judge of whether you pay or not.

To be bald is certainly a real misfortune. In my own case, it was more than embarrassing. Most of my well-meaning friends called me "Baldy." At the office they were always "kidding" me. And at the ball game or theatre, I always felt that the people behind me were doing nothing but giggling at me. I never felt comfortable. So when I saw Merke's offer of new hair in 30 days or no cost, I determined to give it a trial anyway.

And without a doubt in the world, I will always consider the day I sent for the Merke treatment one of the luckiest days of my life.

Coupon Brings You Full Details

I was once skeptical. And I suppose you are, too. But no matter how fast your hair is falling out—no matter how thin it is—no matter how little hair you have left—I certainly advise you to at least learn more about this treatment.

This story is typical of the results that great numbers of people are securing with the Merke treatment.

"The New Way to Make Hair Grow" is the title of a vitally interesting 34-page book describing the treatment. It will be sent you entirely free, if you simply mail the coupon below.

This little book explains all about the treatment, shows what it has already done for countless others, and in addition contains much valuable information on the care of the hair and scalp. Remember, this book is yours free—to keep. And if you decide to take the treatment, you can do so without risking a penny. So mail the coupon now. MAY McAVOY says:
There is a big difference in color between ordinarily cleaned teeth and Pepsodent-cleaned. Teeth simply must be clear to photograph white and cloudless. I use Pepsodent regularly in place of less modern methods. The difference is astonishing.

May Mc Avoy

HOW motion pictures' famous stars gain the gleaming, pearly teeth that make smiles worth fortunes—how you can clear your own teeth in the same way. A simple test that reveals the most amazing of tooth methods—a new method urged by leading dental authorities of the world.

RAMON NOVARRO says:
I never go on a set without first looking to my teeth. I've done this ever since I discovered Pepsodent. It removes that cloudy film, which, before strong lights and a camera shows up so unkindly.

Ramón Novarro

DULL teeth made bright and gleaming; cloudy, discolored teeth given new luster. These famous stars of the moving picture world now tell us how they gain them. You, too, can have them if you wish.

Smiles in the cinema world sell for thousands—that is, some smiles. Gleaming teeth are essential. Otherwise a smile can have no value. So these people follow the method here explained not only for the satisfaction and beauty they gain, but as a matter of cold business.

MAE MURRAY says:
Today Pepsodent is regarded as important as, if not more so, than, any other part of "make-up." How amazingly it acts, one never knows till using it after ordinary, old-fashioned methods!

Mae Murray

The amazing effect of removing the film which forms on teeth. Dull teeth, dingy and discolored. How they are made whiter, more appealing.

THERE is a film on your teeth, a film that becomes discolored, that hides their natural luster. Under it is the tooth gleam and sheen that you envy in others.

You can't see it with your eyes, but run your tongue across your teeth and you will feel it . . . a slippery, viscous coating.

Now that film absorbs discolorations from food, from smoking, etc. And that is why your teeth look "off color" and dingy.

It is the principal cause of dull and dingy teeth. A principal cause, too, of most tooth and many gum troubles. No ordinary tooth paste can remove it. That is why, no matter how carefully you are caring for your teeth now, they remain dull and dingy.

* * *

It clings to teeth, gets into crevices and stays. It lays your gums open to bacterial attack. Germs by the millions breed in it. And they, with tartar, are a chief cause of pyorrhea and decay.

You can't have pretty teeth unless you combat it. Highest authorities all tell you this.

Remove that film and your teeth gleam. Your mirror tells a story that seems almost incredible. Having dingy teeth today simply rests with the individual. On every side you see wonderful, gleaming teeth. This new way is largely responsible.

Now, in as little as ten days, you can work a transformation in your mouth, can add immeasurably to your appearance and attractiveness.

Now modern science offers a new way that works wonders on your teeth

For years men of science have given their best in seeking an effective combatant of that film.

Brushing did not cope with it adequately. Gritty substances were discarded as dangerous to enamel. Numerous methods have been tested and found wanting.

Now modern dental science has found two new combatants and embodied them in the modern tooth paste called Pepsodent—a scientific method different in formula, action and effect from any other dentifrice.

* * *

Throughout the civilized world, leading dentists urge this new method.

To millions it has proved the folly of dull and dingy teeth. To millions it offers daily a better protection against pyorrhea, tooth troubles and decay.

It accomplishes two important things at once: Removes that film, then firms the gums.

If you want whiter teeth and firmer gums you will make this test

Send the coupon for a 10-day tube free. Then note results yourself. Note how your teeth become whiter after a short time. You will note a difference. Your friends will note it, so remarkably apparent it will be.

Millions have made this test. Men and women famous on the stage, prominent leaders in social and diplomatic life, have found results beyond their hopes.

Now it will cost you nothing to make it. You'll thank yourself many times in years to come for the new conception of the more beautiful and healthier teeth and gums it will bring.

ANNA Q. NILSSON says:
I used to think my teeth were as clear as could be—for I brushed them half a dozen times daily. But a few days of Pepsodent, at my dentist's advice showed the contrast over old-fashioned methods. . . Clear teeth — how do I get them? Try Pepsodent for a few days!

Anna Q. Nilsson

MARY PHILBIN says:
I learned long ago the ordinary cleansing methods won't keep teeth clear—that is, so as to photograph white. So, like everyone at the studios, I use Pepsodent many times daily. It is an essential part of my make-up.

Your Hair Appears Twice as Beautiful when Shampooed this way

Try this quick and simple method which thousands now use. See the difference it makes in the appearance of your hair.

Note how it gives new life and lustre, how it brings out all the wave and color. See how soft and silky, bright and glossy your hair will look.

THE alluring thing about beautiful hair isn't the way it is worn.

The real, IRRESISTIBLE CHARM is the life and lustre the hair itself contains.

Fortunately, beautiful hair is no longer a matter of luck.

You, too, can have beautiful hair if you shampoo it properly.

Proper shampooing is what makes it soft and silky. It brings out all the real life and lustre, all the natural wave and color and leaves it fresh-looking, glossy and bright.

When your hair is dry, dull and heavy, lifeless, stiff and gummy, and the strands cling together, and it feels harsh and disagreeable to the touch, it is because your hair has not been shampooed properly.

While your hair must have frequent and regular washing to keep it beautiful, it cannot stand the harsh effect of ordinary soaps. The free alkali in ordinary soaps soon dries the scalp, makes the hair brittle and ruins it.

That is why thousands of women, everywhere, now use Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This clear, pure and entirely greaseless product brings out all the real beauty of the hair and cannot possibly injure. It does not dry the scalp or make the hair brittle, no matter how often you use it.

If you want to see how really beautiful you can make your hair look, just follow this simple method.

A Simple, Easy Method

FIRST, wet the hair and scalp in clear, warm water. Then apply a little Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo.

Two or three teaspoonfuls will make an abundance of rich, creamy lather. This should be rubbed in thoroughly and briskly with the finger tips, so as to loosen the dandruff and small particles of dust and dirt that stick to the scalp.

After rubbing in the rich, creamy Mulsified lather, give the hair a good rinsing. Then use another application of Mulsified, again working up a lather and rubbing it in briskly as before. After the final washing, rinse the hair and scalp in at least two changes of clear, fresh, warm water. This is very important.

Just Notice the Difference

YOU will notice the difference in your hair even before it is dry, for it will be delightfully soft and silky.

After a Mulsified shampoo you will find your hair will dry quickly and evenly and have the appearance of being much thicker and heavier than it really is.

If you want to always be remembered for your beautiful, well-kept hair, make it a rule to set a certain day each week for a Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo. This regular weekly shampooing will keep the scalp soft and the hair fine and silky, bright, fresh-looking and fluffy, wavy and easy to manage.

You can get Mulsified cocoanut oil shampoo at any drug store or toilet goods counter, anywhere in the world. A 4-ounce bottle should last for months.

Splendid for children—fine for men.

The Latest Cable News about SILK GLOVES

Paris may waver between the silhouette and the flare—but it is unanimous this Spring on Gloves.

The glove of a distinguished Russian emigrée as she started out to shop.
Model 592—Price $2.00

As she turned out of the Rue St. Honore, we noted a diplomat's wife wearing this glove with its scalloped cuff.
Model 576—Price $1.50

Three embroidered decorations give this circular cuff—one shade darker than the glove—distinction and charm.
Model 550—Price $2.00

Originally sketched in the foyer of the Opéra, following a smart concert.
Model 1560—Price $3.00

Paris Decrees
The Ornamented Cuff

Up to Paris came the news! On the Riviera—at Cannes, Nice, Monaco—over at Biarritz, the ungloved hand is passé.

All because someone created the vogue of decorated cuffs—now gloves are lovelier than ever before, the final complement of a smart Spring costume.

Paris heard the news! Voilà! By cable we received style notes sketched by our representatives.

And now, Madame and Mademoiselle, the modes de rigueur of the Rue de la Paix are to be found in your own favorite shops here in the States.

Just as if you had shopped in Paris you, too, may wear the smart gloves now seen on the Bois, at tea at the Ritz or before dinner at the Crillon.

Kayser observers in Paris keep us posted. So look to Kayser, as other wise women do, for all that is chic in gloves.

Note some of the latest models sketched here—they come in different shades in the proper silk weights for Spring. And the prices—such as would delight the smart but thrifty Parisienne.

He caught something he wasn't fishing for—

"Nothing but a cough"

This was a real hard luck fishing trip—and an honest fisherman. He didn't bring back any fish and he didn't bring back any stories of big ones that got away.

All Mr. Rudolph Esser of 1638 Hudson Ave., Chicago, caught was a cough—but though all the fish got away from him, he got away from the cough just as easily.

REM did the trick this time as it had done for Mr. Esser before. Here's a fish story that's absolutely true:

"I was on a fishing trip lately out to the Government Pier, and the weather was not what we expected, so I came back Sunday, having caught 'nothing but a cough.' And you could hear it all over the house and then some.

"REM is the only relief I have ever found. I have been using it for a year and a half whenever I needed it, and my son Thomas has often used it, too. REM seems to soothe the soreness and stop the cough in short order.

"My wife and I have told numbers of our friends about it, and they think as much of it as we do."

In this climate few of us are lucky enough to escape the usual bad-weather coughs. But though we can't escape them, we can help to get rid of them quicker. A bottle of REM has quieted many a cough.

A special ingredient in REM—effective, harmless—is not found in ordinary cough syrups. Clinging to your throat as it is swallowed, REM spreads a soothing, healing film over the sore, inflamed membranes.

No Opiates in REM. And pleasant to take.

Ask your druggist for REM—the blue package with the round orange label. And you can have your money back if you want it—but you won't!
